

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

IN completing the First Year of the ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE, we think it due to the Subscribers and Friends of the Work, to give them some account of its progress. And we are able to do this more fully than could be done in the case of an ordinary periodical publication, inasmuch as it differs so entirely from all others, that there can be no apprehension either of rivalry or of competition.

The principal objects for which the ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE were established were these: to provide the means of communicating perfectly with the whole of the Parochial Clergy, to convey to them authentic information, and a record of facts upon all matters relating to the Church, and to afford to Church Societies the benefit of such a medium of communication.

With these views it was determined to send a copy, free of expense, to the Resident Parochial Clergyman, of every parish in England and Wales, and to incur the risk attending such an attempt; the literary labour of the Work being also undertaken gratuitously.

This plan has been carried out to its full extent, as may be verified by a reference to the Stamp Office Returns. The whole number of Copies printed during the Year has been 137,250, making an average of 11,437 Monthly. Of the total number about 112,000 have been sent gratuitously to the Clergy: and we still have to furnish for this gratuitous circulation, nearly nine thousand copies every Month. This, of course, does not include the number paid for by Clerical Subscribers, which amounted in the course of the year to something short of sixteen hundred.

The value of the Copies thus sent gratuitously, estimated at the publication price, has amounted to little less than three thousand pounds. An impression seems to have gone abroad, that the burden of this expense has been sustained by some public fund, but this is not the case, nor have we had any other support, except the patronage kindly afforded to us by the Prelates of the Church, than those which are available to any other Periodical Publication.

Under these circumstances it will be satisfactory to the Friends of the Work to know, that it has so far succeeded as to have paid during the year the expenses of its Establishment, and that with their continued support it can be carried on without further risk or loss. But beyond that, it is evident, from the nature of the case, that it can never yield more than a very moderate remuneration for the labour and responsibility of conducting its affairs. This, however, is all that has been looked for on the part of its conductors, and we have now no doubt but that it will be obtained. The value of the Publication as a medium of communication, has already been felt in the great questions relating to Education and the Church, and we feel satisfied that the Clergy at least will never allow such an auxiliary to fail for want of further support.

We do not wish, however, to press for that support, either unbecomingly or without discrimination. For we can assure those of our Brethren, who are less able to afford it, that by far the greatest pleasure which we have derived from conducting this publication is the knowledge which we possess of its utility to them. It is a great gratification to feel that we have been instrumental in placing the humblest of the Parochial Clergy on a level in point of Ecclesiastical Intelligence, with the most favoured of their Brethren.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE;

OR MONTHLY

REGISTER OF

THE AFFAIRS OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND, AND

OF ITS RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES AND INSTITUTIONS.

No. 1.

LONDON, TUESDAY, JULY 10, 1838.

PRICE SIXPENCE.

ADDRESS.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE has been established for the purpose of circulating among the Clergy and Laity authentic information on all subjects relating to the Church; but more especially with reference to the Religious Societies in connexion with the Church of England. It is published under episcopal sanction, and will be conducted by Clergymen holding responsible stations.

The want of a proper medium for communicating to the whole body of the Parochial Clergy authentic intelligence upon ecclesiastical matters, in such a manner as may be acceptable to all parties, has long been a subject of regret; and the importance of establishing such a medium will be generally felt and acknowledged.

It has also been found, that notwithstanding the exertions of many of the Religious Societies, their proceedings are but partially known; and in some districts of the country, their objects are scarcely, if at all, understood. It will, therefore, be readily admitted, that any plan which would remedy these defects, and which would convey correct information upon such subjects to every part of the kingdom, would prove beneficial to the Societies, and advantageous to the best interests of the Church.

The ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE is not intended to be a vehicle for theological discussions or opinions, but a record of facts, and a general medium of intelligence. Beside the ordinary information respecting the Clergy, the Universities, and the Institutions of the Church generally, it will contain Notices and Circulars from the Bishops, Archdeacons, and other Ecclesiastical Authorities, Acts of Parliament, Decisions of the Courts of Law, Parliamentary Reports, Committee Evidence, and other authentic documents, which relate to the interests of the Church and the Clergy. One of its chief features will be the insertion of authorized Reports of the Proceedings of the Church Societies, together with monthly Extracts from their Correspondence. The state of the Church in the Colonies, and the condition of Foreign Churches, will be objects of great attention. Authentic Documents, or Communications, upon these subjects, will be frequently inserted. And thus an extended view will be presented of the state of Ecclesiastical Affairs, both at home and abroad.

The difficulties attending the execution of any project of this kind have hitherto been insuperable. But since the passing of the new Stamp Act, the present plan has been suggested, and the attempt is now made to carry it into effect, with a confident hope, under the Divine blessing, of its complete success.

It is proposed to send, monthly, a copy of the ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE, gratis, to the resident Clergyman, whether Incumbent or Curate, of every parish throughout England and Wales. And the Publication being stamped according to law, they will also receive it postage free.

By this peculiar feature of the plan, the parochial Clergy will be enabled to obtain, without any expense to themselves, a great mass of information which it is important to them to possess; and religious intelligence will be more widely and more equally diffused than by any existing means of communication.

It must be obvious, however, that a plan which proposes to give away gratuitously, every month, at least ten thousand copies to the Parochial Clergy, could not be carried into full effect, unless the Work should receive considerable support from other quarters, especially from the Laity. We are happy, therefore, in being able to state, that such support has been liberally promised. And when it is considered that there is a great and increasing body of the Laity who feel a deep interest in every thing relating to the affairs of the Church, little doubt can be entertained of their readiness to encourage a Publication which aims at objects so desirable, and so closely connected with its welfare.

The Clergy will also be able to assist materially in promoting the objects of this Publication, by making it known among the Laity in their respective parishes, and by transmitting to the Publisher the names of such as may desire to become Subscribers.

It has been already ascertained that some of the Clergy do not wish to receive the Work gratuitously; and it has also been represented, that many more will probably entertain the same feelings when the first Number is delivered to them. It may be necessary, therefore, to state, that the Publication is presented gratuitously to all, because it has been found impossible to draw any distinct line between these different views. But it is respectfully suggested, that such of the Parochial Clergy as may be inclined to give it their support, will render essential service by paying the subscription, which is only Six Shillings per annum, for the copy which is sent to them. The amount may be sent to the Publisher, and an acknowledgment will appear in the next Number of the Work.

It is respectfully requested, that such Clergymen as may have the sole charge of more than one parish, will have the goodness to return to the Publisher all such copies as they may receive over and above the one intended for their own use; by simply re-directing them to Mr. J. W. PARKER, 445, West Strand, on the same cover. It will thus be known from whence they are returned.

It is also requested, that all other Communications to the Publisher may be post-paid.

SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE,

67, Lincoln's Inn Fields, July, 1838.

Extract from the Monthly Report, July, 1838.

The Secretary read the following Letter from the Lord Bishop of Calcutta.

Shalimar Garden-House, near Bishop's College, the Feast of the Epiphany, 1838, Saturday.

REVEREND AND DEAR SIR,

1. I CANNOT begin this letter without adverting to the great festival on which I chance to be writing; and earnestly wishing that the SOCIETY's labours may be abundantly blessed as a means for the manifestation of Christ to the Gentiles in India. The crisis with us is momentous. The mild paternal sway of the British sceptre has now for twenty years extended to what may be termed the sovereignty of Hindoostan. A profound peace, resembling in some measure that which prepared for the first advent of our Lord in the flesh, has hushed India into tranquillity, since the termination of the Burmese war, for eight or ten years. Improvements in domestic policy, jurisprudence, the use of the native languages, the more equal collection of the revenue, offices opened to native talent; education, commerce, intercourse with home; taste for western manners, government, and literature, discoveries in the arts, &c., have been pushed on with an unexampled celerity. Lord Glenelg's new charter of 1834 threw open the flood-gates for India's civilization and illumination. The establishment of steam-vessels on our fine and majestic Ganges, has been multiplying the internal facilities for commerce and mutual communication through every part of India; whilst the commencement of a regular mail-despatch from Bombay to England, by the same wonderful mechanical discovery, is bringing on rapidly, as we trust, the time of eastern knowledge, inquiry, and obedience to the faith of Christ.

2. For, contemporaneous with these external aids for the elevation of our prostrate millions of Hindoos, are the exertions of your SOCIETY, and those of the Propagation of the Gospel, of the British and Foreign Bible Society for the circulation of the Holy Scriptures, of the Church Missionary Society, and others, to impregnate all secular efforts in learning with divine truth, and sanctify the education of youth with the knowledge of the Christian redemption. I need not observe to the venerable SOCIETY, that the outburst of mere curiosity in a heathen and Mohammedan people,—their mere grasp after human science,—their attainments in the arts, and learning, and wisdom of this world, if that is all, will only resemble the eruption of a volcano, to bury in ruins the fair fields which stretch around.

3. Knowledge, as introductory to Christianity, I hail with joy; but if divorced from it, with extreme alarm and suspicion.

4. These thoughts are naturally suggested by two paragraphs of your letters, of March 20th and August 10th, of this last summer. In the one you favour me with an account of the unanimous resolution of the General Meeting in June, to present a memorial against the continuance of the Pilgrim Tax in India; the other, in which you are good enough to pass a vote for the support of our Mission Schools near Calcutta, and propose certain inquiries to me connected with the subject.

5. The connexion of the British Protestant authorities with the patronage of the basest and most degrading system of idolatry and pollution which the lost spirit of darkness ever perhaps imposed on a fallen world—a system which has contrived an entire code of religious usages, and rewards and punishments, without any one consistent reference to moral good or evil—a code minute, inquisitorial, and persecutory, in which the anti-social principle of caste condemns one half of the human race to be perpetual slaves and menials, and depresses nine-tenths of both sexes into an irrevocable and grinding degradation from hope—a system founded in an ignorance of the God who made, and the Saviour who redeemed mankind, and going on its course by means of oppression, cruelty, and lust: the support of such a system by the greatest and freest of the Christian nations of Europe, is an anomaly of the most deplorable and glaring character. I scorn to advert to mere argument after the incomparable despatch ascribed to Lord Glenelg, of February, 1833. It is a case which requires no argument. Let the fact of British governors, counsellors, commissioners, magistrates, countenancing, by voluntary measures, the misery and barbarism, and premature and exaggerated ruin of their prostrate subjects, be established (and I believe they cannot be denied); and the duty of a Christian people to protest against the national guilt of such a conduct speaks for itself.

I am not master of the subject in all its details. I am not aware of the particular objections to an immediate abolition of the pilgrim-tax which are raised here, as I suppose they are, by the subordinate local authorities. These matters are as much secrets, and very properly so, in India as at home. I proceed on these two broad, and plain, and irrefragable points. The countenance of idolatry, with its attendant horrors, in a Christian state, is, per se, immoral and sinful. The delay in executing the positive orders from hence embodied in the despatch of February, 1833, if such delay was not inevitable, augments the sin.

6. It would be wrong in me, perhaps, altogether to conceal what I hear in conversation with gentlemen who have lived many years in the vicinity of Pooree and the Temple of Juggernaut, and on whose veracity no doubt can for a moment be cast. They inform me, that of 150,000 pilgrims, who resort annually to the spot, nearly one third perish from various causes, and never return to their homes.

They inform me, that the bands of the pilgrim-hunters, as they are termed, swarm all over India, even to the most distant provinces, to collect and drive in before them the deluded pilgrims.

They state, that almost every year the pilgrims of the adjoining provinces are lessening, especially the men; and that the supply is now very much from the more remote places, and chiefly of women.

They tell me, that one practice, which does not appear in any public documents, and which may, therefore, not be generally known, is of the most atrocious injustice—the compulsory assemblage of 2000 poor wretches each year to drag the idol car. If this one oppressive act were discontinued, many gentlemen think, the whole system of Juggernaut, like the ancient Dagon before the ark, would instantly fall.

7. I have been both at Juggernaut and at Allahabad, (the sacred junction, as it is accounted, of the Ganges and the Jumna,) and my mind retains a vivid impression of the grief, and compassion, and horror, I felt for my sad fellow-creatures crushed under the griffin yoke of “the god of this world.” Nor could I believe scarcely, nor can I now, that the petty sophisms of human cowardice and political expediency could chill the glowing benevolence which would strike off the chain, and set the captives free.

8. The SOCIETY has done well. Be pleased to go on in this and every other work of mercy, and may God prosper your pious endeavours!

9. The question of education is not without its difficulties. I enclose the three answers of our Bengal Missionaries to the inquiry which I requested the Secretary of our Calcutta Committee to circulate. Two are unfavourable to the continuance of the Schools as taught by heathen masters, considering the better use to which the money now consumed in the support of those Schools might be employed. The third answer does not essentially differ from the two former, though it leans to the advantages which, upon the whole, the Schools diffuse. The SOCIETY shall hear more fully when I have had time to examine the subject. At present I am singularly hurried. Not only are the two sees of Madras and Bombay vacant, and therefore pouring upon me their inevitable currents of business; but I have lost my right hand, as it were, in the necessary retreat home on sick-leave of my son-in-law and chaplain, Mr. Bateman, and the non-arrival of the Rev. John Pratt, a son of my old friend and tutor, who has engaged to come out as his successor. I already owe one severe illness (my first in India) to the absence of my chaplain, and my being compelled to do deacon's service, as well as my own, on board the vessel which carried me, in September last, to Ghazepore; and I every day and hour am crippled in the discharge of my duties from the same cause. A Secretary to the Calcutta Diocesan Committee, in connexion with your SOCIETY, is also wanting—Mr. Boyes and Mr. Bateman being both gone. Your venerable SOCIETY shall duly receive, however, the details I now omit, when my new chaplain arrives.

10. A thousand thanks to your venerable SOCIETY for the munificent grant of 200*l.* for the Barpore Mission House. The bills were drawn in September last, on the receipt of your letter of March. If it were possible for me to transplant some of the pious Members of your Board to the different scenes of labour which your bounty has fed, and to show you what I have myself witnessed, you would, I am sure, rejoice in extending still your beneficence to India. It was only the last week that I entered the little bamboo-church of Raggapore, near Janjera, fifteen miles from Calcutta, for which I appropriated 250 rupees from your former grant. The head man of the village was forward to show me the pretty structure: he is himself a Christian convert, now of six years' standing. “Such,” I said to Mr. Jones, “was the cathedral of Canterbury, in the first ages perhaps.” The SOCIETY will be glad to learn, that Mr. Jones, (one of the Propagation Missionaries,) having contrived to save about 9*l.* from the 25*l.* thus committed to him, united it with other sums to turn a Hindoo pagoda into a Christian Church at Soojh'na-be'ri'a (another of his twenty villages, in which he has eight or nine hundred souls, young and old, under Christian instruction in different stages). The conversion of the chief man of the village led to his presenting the pagoda to the Reverend Missionary, who has thrown out a bamboo verandah, and made it, perhaps, the first heathen temple where the name of Christ is proclaimed. My excellent archdeacon, who was with me, and Professor Withers, at the time, was so struck with the scene, that he promised Mr. Jones an old pulpit, which was formerly used in the Mission Church, Calcutta—a most appropriate and acceptable gift—which will fill Soojh'na-be'ri'a with joy.

11. I rendered an account to the venerable SOCIETY of nearly the whole of the last vote of 500*l.* entrusted to my care, when I wrote in April: that vote was of the date of March, 1835. I find I had then a balance in my hands of 731 rupees. This I have thus distributed, with some variation from what I intended, suggested by circumstances. (1.) Danapore Church 200 rupees. (2.) Burrisaul Schools 200 rupees. (3.) Ghazepore Church 100 rupees. (4.) Chittagong Church 100 rupees. (5.) Madras Church at Thomé 150 rupees. (6.) Translation Society at Cawnpore 200 rupees. (7.) Singapore, for books, 200—1,150 rupees, or about 115*l.* sterling, which exceeds, by a little more than 400 rupees, the amount of the grant already given me, and will go on to the balance of the next, whenever you may feel at liberty to make it.

12. On the position of the Book and Tract department, I am not able to speak, from the absence of the Secretary. The Cawnpore Translation Society have completed a translation into Hindostanee of Bishop Porteus's “Evidences of Christianity,” which is just come up to Bishop's College press. Others I hope will follow. The Singapore dépôt has been so well managed as to remit 500 rupees in payment for books. There is a demand all over India for books of religious instruction. The Queen's regiments, in different parts, though furnished with station libraries, are still in want of Christian elementary works. I rejoice to learn, from the SOCIETY's letter of March last, that “the Tract Committee of the SOCIETY continue their labours with great assiduity; and that you trust that such new tracts as may hereafter be recommended by the Committee to the Board, and may from time to time be forwarded to Calcutta, will meet with my approbation.” I am quite unworthy of such an appeal. I am only one of an immense body of the Prelates, Presbyters, and members of the Society of our Reformed Apostolical Church. I have no right whatever, nor have I the least disposition, to sit in judgment on books and tracts, except so far as my own diocese may be concerned in the practical result. Your venerable SOCIETY is secure of my approbation, poor and undeserving of notice as it is, just in proportion as your Publications approach nearer the fine, noble, catholic spirit of our English Reformers. Nothing is of service in India but what is pregnant with the immediate Gospel of Christ in all its simplicity, all its grace, all its spirituality, all its holy tendencies. We have to rouse the torpid Christian, removed for years from the regular ordinances of the Church perhaps; we have to recall the wandering prodigal; we have to instruct the native convert, awakening to Christ from a darkness deep as the grave; we have to train souls for heaven, in the midst of all the incentives to the grossest idolatry and sensuality that oriental habits can present. For all this, the doctrine of Christ Jesus our Lord is the remedy; and the tracts which best exhibit that adorable object, as the ground of a penitent's hope, the source of grace and life and salvation, the exemplar of all holiness and joy, and the one and only Mediator between God and man, are the most acceptable, and the most likely to be beneficial. I must confess that I have not yet read the tracts and books in later arrivals; but I was very much gratified, some time since, with those which had then been transmitted to Calcutta. Surely, surely, there is a line of devotional, orthodox, catholic theology, common to all enlightened Protestant Christians of our Church, and standing on the broad bottom of our Articles, and Homilies, and Liturgy, which will commend itself to the judgment of almost every pious and competent reader, spiritual and evangelical, strong upon clear, cautious upon doubtful matters—fully directed at the conscience of man—opening the extent of his corruption and guilt—calling him to heartfelt sorrow and contrition for sin—raising by the offer of justification of faith only—comforting and strengthening by the doctrine of the Holy Ghost—guiding in practice by the details and principles of Christian morals—neither undervaluing the conjoined testimony of ancient writers, to facts and doctrines; nor superseding, under their venerated names, the supreme and undivided authority of the inspired word of God. But I beg forgiveness for thus speaking; my pen runs away with me when I begin to write on the grace and love of my only Master and Saviour; and I am desirous to see all the Societies of our Apostolical Church more and more closely united in the old doctrines of the Gospel, and the sweet and brotherly spirit of mutual forbearance and charity, by which they are best commended. God is the author of grace. His benediction rests, now more largely, now less, on different Churches, and different subdivisions of the same Churches, according to their fervor of prayer and fidelity in His truth and salvation. Wide intervals will prevail, as they ever have prevailed, in opinions, upon a variety of subordinate, though not unimportant, matters; and yet one blessed platform of doctrine and discipline has contained together all the pious members of our Church. The older I grow, and the more extensive my sphere of duty, the more am I persuaded of the efficiency of the few grand points of Christianity, and of the practicableness of working with my brethren educated in different schools of theology, and using different phrases, with simplicity of heart. My own course will soon be finished. Our noble Anglican Church, the glory of the Reformation, and the chief bulwark of Christianity in Europe, is now sorely beset by Papists and Infidels on the one hand, and separatists and heretics on the other. Human governments seem to be deserting her. Never, therefore, was she more loudly called to union within herself. Blessed are those peacemakers who sacrifice any thing but truth to her stability and safety. God is purifying her indeed. May she come out more spiritual, devoted, active, than ever, in "promoting Christian knowledge," both at home and abroad. I shall continue to co-operate with your Society throughout the dioceses of India. I have just formed a dépôt at Singapore. An association was also established at Nussacerabad, 1100 miles from Calcutta, amongst the field encampments, as I passed through. Another at Candy, in Ceylon, has just been announced to me. The Translation Society at Cawnpore may be a source of eminent usefulness. The Bishop's College Syndicate is eager to take a larger share in the same good work. The loss of Dr. Mill necessarily now cripples its exertions, but we hope for his powerful help from home; and we look forward to Mr. Malan's oriental fame, though so young, as opening, after a series of years, an endless vista of translated copies of the Scriptures, Prayer-Books, and religious books, for the gaping eager eyes of millions in India. Could your SOCIETY make me another grant, I should like to devote 100*l.* at once to the cheap circulation of fifty or sixty copies of Dr. Mill's Sanscrit Life of our Lord; an extraordinary production; the first indeed in India in which the sacred language and poetical measure of the Shatras have been employed to open the mysteries of the Gospel, and yet so expensive (20 rupees a copy, and unavoidably so; it will form a very thick octavo volume,) as to place it wholly out of the reach of the Brahminical students. The curiosity of the native scholars to use the book is intense. As I was passing by Thunassar, in the Upper Provinces, five Brahmins came by night to my Pundit's tent, attracted by a boy who had come to me during the day, and had heard I was learning Sanscrit, to enquire the truth of the report: they were shown Dr. Mill's Christa Sangita; they could read it with fluency. They disbelieved the author to be an European; when assured of the fact, they declared he must be an angel: nor were they satisfied without sitting down and making my Pundit read to them till break of day from the wonderful book; for so they termed it. I would have given the world to have had copies by me, but I had only the one from which my Pundit (a son of Anund Messuh, of Kurnaul,) read.

But I must conclude, by begging the benefit of the SOCIETY's prayers, and by commending myself to the indulgent consideration of the Right Reverend and Reverend and other members of your venerable SOCIETY, in my honest, but feeble, and doubtless often mistaken, endeavours to promote the cause of genuine evangelical Christianity, according to the Articles and other formularies of our Episcopal Protestant Church in Central Asia.

I am, Rev. Sir,

Your most obedient and faithful,

D. CALCUTTA.

P.S. I receive with great gratitude the assurance of the Houra, Tallygunge, and Barriopore Schools, being jointly supported by your venerable SOCIETY, and that for the Propagation of the Gospel; this will enable us to weigh well the grave question to which I have alluded in section 9, above.

This letter having been read, it was agreed, upon the recommendation of the Standing Committee,—That a grant of 500*l.* be placed at the disposal of the Lord Bishop of Calcutta, towards carrying on the designs of the SOCIETY in India.

A letter was read from the Lord Bishop of Australia, dated Sydney, 3d February, 1838.

The following portions of his Lordship's letter will be read with interest:—

"In our general proceedings we have had much harmony and success, as will be shown by our last year's Report, of which I directed copies to be forwarded to you for distribution among the members of the Standing Committee, and others of our friends. The SOCIETY's publications are generally approved and valued, and I hope are extensively read with advantage. The demand for them is steadily increasing: that for Prayer-books in particular is very great; and much benefit has arisen from their now containing the Ordination Services, which was very imperfectly known; or I may say, with very few exceptions, totally unknown. Attention towards them has however been awakened by my having conferred Priest's Orders on the Rev. Messrs. Sharpe and Walpole.

"In consequence of the grant having been continued to the Schools during these two years, there has been less occasions to break in upon the SOCIETY's donation of 1000*l.*, which remains in reserve against future emergencies; and I have not yet had occasion to draw upon the Treasurer for any portion of the amount voted for the past and present years: at the rate of 500*l.* for each. I have been engaged in reducing the Schools in Sydney to a more regular and effective state, and am thankful in witnessing the progress of improvement. We have now five Schools (three of which are also Sunday Schools) in this town; the state of which is highly satisfactory, and is daily improving. The average number of children is more than 100 in each. By the first of next month, I expect to be enabled to open two additional Schools, and to collect in the entire number which will then be established, not less than ONE THOUSAND children! It will, I am persuaded, afford much cause for thankfulness to the members of the SOCIETY, and to the friends of the Church in general, to reflect that through the blessing of God upon the exertions we have been enabled to make, chiefly through the impulse of the kind and liberal spirit manifested towards us in England, we have at the very commencement of our course so large a body of young people under careful and religious training: the effect of which upon the principles and conduct of the inhabitants at large cannot but be felt most sensibly and advantageously. The Schools in the country districts are supported with various degrees of success and efficiency; but my attention is and will be directed to their improvement, which can take place only progressively and through the exertion of much patience. Qualified schoolmasters and mistresses are scarcely to be met with; nor do any appear to arrive among the numerous emigrants who are coming daily to these shores. Our churches and parsonage houses are making but slow progress in consequence of the great scarcity of mechanical labour; indeed they are too generally quite at a stand, except where I am able to station a clergyman who takes an interest in the work, and keeps up that of the inhabitants. The same remedy of perseverance is that to which I trust for removal of these obstructions. I might annex a statement of our difficulties, which are numerous and fearful; but I shall not do so, as my own spirits are not depressed, and I should not wish to cast a damp upon any hopes which the SOCIETY may entertain on our behalf. My humble confidence is placed on God, who has hitherto showed us his favour and protection, and so I am persuaded will continue to do while our exertions are directed to the promotion of His glory, by the extension of His Church upon earth, to the edification of His people here, and to their eternal salvation in the world to come.

An application was made by Lieut. Col. Gawler, Governor of South Australia, respecting the wants of that Colony with regard to Church accommodation. The Board agreed to place 250*l.* at the disposal of the Governor for the purposes stated in his letter.

The following grants appear in this report:—

The Dublin Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, Books to the amount of.....	£ 250
For Building a Church, School, and Parsonage, near Albany, Cape of Good Hope	200
Towards erecting a School of Industry for Girls in Cape Town	50
Books for Highland Emigrants to Canada.....	30
Besides many other smaller grants.
Seventy-five new members were admitted.

His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury, presided on the occasion; and prayers having been read, the Secretary, the Rev. A. M. Campbell, was called upon to read the following Report:—

Report presented to a General Meeting of the Members and Friends of the SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL, holden at Willis's Room, on Friday, June 22, 1838.

THE SOCIETY for the PROPAGATION of the GOSPEL has been induced to call this meeting of its members and friends, chiefly by the conviction that a crisis has occurred in the religious affairs of the British Colonies. They were the scene of the SOCIETY's earliest labours. They have engaged during many years a principal share of its attention. Even now they constitute the most extensive field of its operations; and the opening prospect of a provision for their spiritual wants is looked upon with the deepest interest.

No one can deny that these wants have been neglected: Great Britain has planted colonies in America and Australia, and peopled these immense territories with her sons and daughters; she has paid a large price for the freedom of the Negroes; established a mild parental authority over Hindostan, and transported many thousand convicts to the shores of New South Wales; but throughout the course of these mighty operations she seems almost to have forgotten that she was a Christian nation; that the emigrants whom she sent forth were the children of Christian parents, and had need of instruction in God's Holy Word, and of participation in all the ordinances of religion; that by the acquisition of authority over heathen tribes she contracted a sacred obligation to impart unto them the saving truths of the Gospel.

It cannot be said that this duty was altogether overlooked. It was acknowledged by the erection of episcopal sees, first in North America, and subsequently in the East and West Indies, and in Australia. It was acknowledged by Acts of the Imperial and Local Legislatures, providing for the future maintenance of clergymen in various colonies; by Parliamentary grants, voted during many years, for the express purpose of maintaining the colonial clergy until the lands allotted to them became productive or valuable. But while we appeal to these acts as so many distinct recognitions of the duty of the mother country with respect to the religious interests of her colonies, we are bound, at the same time, to declare that they were little more than recognitions. They were not followed up. There was no systematic care for the education or religious instruction of the settler, of the emigrant, or the convict, much less of the Negro, or the Hindoo. They were left in most cases to chance. What was done for them by Government, or by charitable institutions, was done slightly and incompletely. There was no plan, according to which the growing demand for churches and clergymen might be supplied. And when the tide of emigration set most strongly upon the coast of British America, no provision whatever was made for the spiritual wants of men who went forth from their native country in search of employment, who were assisted out of the public purse in removing from a land where labour was superabundant to a land where it was scarce, and were placed with their families in uncultivated forests, without schools, without churches, without clergymen, without the ordinary means of edification and consolation, which they had possessed and valued at home, and from which they never intended to part.

Such is the condition of our agricultural emigrants, and of a large proportion of British colonists; and the acknowledged greatness of the evil calls for a vigorous effort to remove it. The spiritual destitution of the more remote settlers in the Canadas, in Nova Scotia, and in New Brunswick, has been described both in the Reports of this SOCIETY, and other well-known publications. The dreadful condition of the dwellers on the southern shore of Newfoundland has been forcibly described by Archdeacon Wix. The abolition of slavery in the British empire has directed attention to the urgent necessity for the general education of the Negroes. In the East Indies the gradual acquisition of European knowledge is preparing the way for the downfall of the Brahminical superstition, and for the reception of Christianity. While the parliamentary reports upon transportation, and upon the condition of the Aborigines in our colonies, have presented a picture of the demoralization and misery in Australia, upon which it is painful to look.

These are the circumstances which invite the attention of the British people to the provision made in their name for the spiritual wants of its colonies and dependencies. Even now the case is not generally understood. The distance of the scenes, the pressing claims of the manufacturing and town population at home prevent many persons from making themselves masters of the strong points in the appeal on behalf of our colonial fellow-subjects. But allowing for these difficulties, there is a strong and growing conviction that something must be done; that things must not be suffered to remain where they are; that this country will be deeply sinful before God, if it permit the dependencies of the empire to grow up in practical atheism, and in all the wickedness necessarily resulting from such a state. There is an earnest desire to adopt measures which may abate the moral nuisance, and no longer allow it to be said that a nation, which boasts of moral and religious advancement, is the mother and nurse of other nations destined possibly to fill a large space in the history of the world, but brought up without the fear or knowledge of God; insensible to the hopes, the blessings, the promises, and the restraints of Christianity.

While this is the state of things at home, it is encouraging to observe that a corresponding sense of what is required for the religious welfare of the colonies has been excited among the colonists themselves. Great efforts have been made in the Canadas, in Nova Scotia, and in New Brunswick, under the able direction of the late lamented Bishop of Quebec, the Bishop of Nova Scotia, and the Bishop of Montreal, to counteract the bad effects of the withdrawal of the parliamentary grant for the support of the clergymen in those provinces. The salaries of the existing missionaries, reduced on the average to three-fourths of their former amount, have, in some cases, been made up to the original sum by the voluntary contributions of the people. Church Societies have been formed by the zealous exertions of the bishops and clergy, in Upper and Lower Canada, in Nova Scotia, and in New Brunswick, for the purpose of aiding in the establishment of new missions, defraying the expenses of visiting missionaries, and otherwise contributing towards the cost of a religious establishment in districts not yet prepared to take the risk into their own hands.

The same may be said of the West Indies. In Barbadoes the churches which, with few exceptions, were destroyed in a late hurricane, have been rebuilt, on an enlarged scale, at the public charge of the Colony. Considerable sums of money have been contributed throughout both the West Indian dioceses for the erection of Churches, and the maintenance of additional Clergymen.

In a letter, dated the 27th of April, 1838, the Bishop of Jamaica states that "the Legislature of the Bahamas and the Vestries of this island (Jamaica) are coming forward with such a sense of the necessity of religious instruction, that the difficulty will now rather be, to meet their grants for the moieties of Curates' and Teachers' salaries with an equal sum from the funds of the Societies that lend their aid. In effecting this improvement, and establishing this disposition, it cannot be doubted that the principle upon which the SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL have lent their aid has mainly contributed. Not only have they been enabled to employ twice the number of religious teachers, but their example has undoubtedly roused others, who would not accede to their terms, to do something upon plans of their own."

In the Report of M. La Trobe, the gentleman appointed by her Majesty's Government to inspect the Schools erected in the West Indies, with aid from the parliamentary grant, there is the following statement respecting Barbadoes:—

"Of 39 school-houses, towards the erection of which the SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF

THE GOSPEL received aid from the Parliamentary Grants of 1835 and 1836, it will be seen that 28 are built and occupied at this date (April, 1838); and that more than the number required to complete the total are actually in progress, while schools are there carried on under temporary arrangements.

"And the Bishop of the diocese has fixed upon no fewer than 30 stations in these islands (windward and leeward), over and above the 63; for the erection of which the SOCIETY has advanced funds, in connection with the three Parliamentary grants of 1835, 1836, 1837.

"In Barbados, though the Wesleyan and Moravian Missionary Societies, and the Trustees of the Mico Charity, support a few excellent schools for the benefit of the labouring classes, the education of these throughout the Colony depends mainly upon the instruction given in schools in connexion with the clergy of the island, stimulated and supported in this good work by the presence and active co-operation of their diocesan.

In Australia, to which the aid of the SOCIETY has been more recently directed, the sums subscribed by the inhabitants for the building of Churches and support of Clergymen are much larger than could have been anticipated; and the legislatures of New South Wales and Van Diemen's Land have made provision for the salaries of a considerable number of clergymen.

On the whole, therefore, the course to be pursued by the SOCIETY is clear. It offers to assist in maintaining clergymen wherever their services are required, provided the parties interested will make proper efforts for the same purpose. If allowances are made to the clergy from the Colonial Treasury, as in the West Indies and Australia, the SOCIETY is willing to assist in fitting out and supporting an adequate number of persons, duly qualified, to preach the Gospel to their respective flocks. If, as in the Canadas and New Brunswick, there be a pension for the clergy not yet available, on account of the state of the lands allotted for this purpose, the SOCIETY is ready to assist in bringing such lands into cultivation, or to contribute to the support of the clergy until that work be done. On the barren shores of Newfoundland, where it is not practicable to defray the cost of religious instruction from the contributions of the people themselves, the SOCIETY does not refuse to take upon itself the whole expense of maintaining visiting Missionaries, until the general or local Governments can be induced to discharge this neglected portion of their duty.

The length to which these observations have been carried requires the SOCIETY to confine the remarks still to be made within the narrowest limits. An account of its general operations, and of its current financial condition, drawn up since the beginning of the year, has been extensively circulated, and is in the hands of the present Meeting. It is unnecessary, therefore, to dwell upon this subject. But an exception may be made in favour of the Bengal Mission and of Bishop's College.

In a letter recently received from the Bishop of Calcutta, after saying that the villages in the neighbourhood of Calcutta contain about 1100 natives, under Catechetical instruction, his Lordship adds,—

"There are eight Christian Churches, principally of bamboo, built in the chief villages by the munificence of the SOCIETY for the most part, and that for PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE, that in these Churches Divine Service, according to the Liturgy and Rubrics of our Apostolic Church, so far as they are translated, is regularly celebrated—the responses to the Liturgy yesterday at Barriore, by the 150 simple people, charmed the Archdeacon and myself; there was a heartiness and devotion quite peculiar). Christian domestic habits are in slow but regular progress. Diligence in their calling is obviously increasing. Many are becoming, from the moral influence of Christianity, a little independent in their circumstances; and the residence of that excellent gentleman, Mr. Homfrey (who has built a Christian village of twelve neat huts, separate from the heathen bazaars, and full of promise), is, together with the impartiality of the Honorable Company's local magistrate, a singular aid."

Upon the subject of Bishop's College, the testimony of the Diocesan is not less encouraging. The class of native students, now under education there, is mentioned in the following terms:—

"It was delightful to see these lads, only fourteen months at College, vying with those of European extraction, who had been two or three years. These young Hindoos have not only cast off all idolatry, usages, and habits, but are steadily acquiring Christian knowledge. They are quick in their apprehension of truth, with tenacious memories, and great piety. They translate Homer, Xenophon, Cicero, and Ovid, in a manner perfectly surprising, and with a justness of English pronunciation, which increases the pleasure. Conceive only, if it be possible in an adequate manner, of a Hindoo baboo explaining Paley, Barrow, Graves, Bishop Sumner, and others of our English writers; then their knowledge of the Old Testament, which was probed to the bottom, by the Venerable Archdeacon Dealtry; and of the Lord's Prayer, in which I examined them myself; it would have charmed any of the members of the Venerable Society, could they have been present."

An instance of the good feeling of these interesting youths will be found in the following extract from their Address to their late principal, Doctor Mill, on his departure for Europe.

Some explanation is due of the reasons which have induced us to present this address separately from our Indo-British friends.

"While we are all on a par as students, in many respects, there are some circumstances which characterise our peculiar situation. We are almost all converts from Hinduism, and our relations and natural guardians have disowned us in consequence of our change of religion. We are therefore utterly destitute, in the capacity of private individuals, having to look even for our personal expenses to the funds on which we are maintained in the college. Such being the case, it is not in our power to express our gratitude and respect by any substantial token; and as we must be content with this empty and verbal, but sincerely presented offering, we could not help presenting it separately. The impressions which your kindness and attention have left upon our minds, would induce us even to pluck out our eyes if they could be of any use to you. But it is absolutely beyond the reach of our ability to present any substantial tribute; and we must beg of you to accept our poor, humble, but grateful offering, in the form of an address."

The question then to be submitted to this meeting, and to the public is,—Shall the SOCIETY be enabled to follow up the good works upon which it has entered, or shall it be compelled to halt in its career, to stand still, and finally to withdraw from the field of Christian enterprise?

In the course of the last five years it has had to struggle against the loss of a parliamentary grant exceeding the sum of 16,000*l.* a-year; and at the same time to support, and extend its establishments in America. It has entered upon the important labours now so hopefully prosecuted in the West Indies. It has supplied the Native Churches in Southern India with a larger number of European missionaries than had been employed at any previous time in that quarter. And it has extended its aid to New South Wales, and Van Diemen's Land, and sent out no fewer than eighteen clergymen to those colonies within the space of a single year. The Bishop of Australia in announcing the arrival of a portion of these additional chaplains, declares that nothing can exceed his satisfaction at what has been effected for his diocese, and that he is prepared to employ and maintain a still greater number.

"I proceed," his Lordship says, "to offer, on behalf of myself, and of the Church of England here, my most unfeigned thanks for the energetic and kind exertions of the SOCIETY, in procuring for us this reinforcement of our heretofore insufficient number of labourers. The first four have arrived in safety, and each of them may, I think, have the effect of adding a year to my life, or of preventing its being shortened by that interval through overwhelming anxiety and distraction."

To doubt whether the SOCIETY will be enabled to proceed with these various undertakings would be to doubt whether the people of England are religious and charitable. Insensible for a long period to their own spiritual wants, their attention is now fixed upon the means of supplying them. And if the wants and claims of the emigrants and settlers in British possessions abroad were generally known, the SOCIETY cannot doubt that they would be supplied. The increase of religious instruction and religious feeling in the mother-country will render it more anxious to provide for the religious instruction of the colonies, and to offer the joyful tidings of salvation to the heathen who are placed under its control.

Failure in the discharge of these sacred duties must be regarded as a heinous national sin,—and a sin which will not be committed by those who set a just value upon the privileges which they enjoy as members of Christ's Holy Catholic Church.

After the Report had been read, several very interesting speeches were delivered (an abstract of which will be given in our next), and the following resolutions were unanimously agreed to:

Moved by his Grace the Lord Primate of Ireland, seconded by the Right Hon. Sir James R. G. Graham, Bart., M.P., and unanimously resolved; 1. That the Report now read be adopted, printed, and circulated.

Moved by the Right Hon. and Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of London; seconded by J. S. Pakington, Esq., M.P., and supported by the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Nova Scotia, and unanimously resolved;

2. That, in order to provide the means of education and religious instruction for the colonists in general, and especially for emigrants recently removed to British North America, this Meeting recommend that the SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL undertake to contribute towards the maintenance of 40 additional clergymen employed as chaplains or missionaries in the British colonies; and that the Imperial or Local Governments, together with individual settlers, be strongly urged to assist in this most necessary work.

Moved by the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Winchester, seconded by the Rev. Christopher Benson, B.D., Master of the Temple, and unanimously resolved;

3. That this Meeting has heard with great satisfaction of the part taken by the SOCIETY in the building of churches and school-houses, and the payment of salaries to clergymen and schoolmasters, throughout the British West Indies, and of the important measures now in progress there, with a view to promote the spiritual interests of the emancipated negroes.

Moved by the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Lincoln, seconded by the Rev. C. Webb Le Bas, and supported by the Ven. Archdeacon Robinson, and unanimously resolved;

4. That the promising condition of Bishop's College, Calcutta, especially as relates to the class of native students now under education within its walls, the gathering together of native Christian congregations in the neighbourhood of the Presidency, and the rapid improvement of the native churches in Southern India, furnish the strongest motives for perseverance, and for sincere gratitude to Him by whose mercy alone can the great work of the propagation of the Gospel in the East be accomplished.

Moved by the Hon. Mr. Justice Coleridge, seconded by Sir William Heathcote, Bart., M.P., and unanimously resolved;

5. That it is the opinion of this Meeting, that the success of the SOCIETY's endeavours to send out chaplains to Australia, the recent application from the Bishop of the diocese for more assistance, and the large sums raised within the colonies of New South Wales and Van Diemen's Land for the building of churches and the maintenance of clergymen, should determine the SOCIETY to shrink from no exertion tending to counteract the numerous evils which have arisen from the neglected state of the convict population.

Moved by the Rev. W. F. Hook, D.D., seconded by Sir Thomas Dyke Acland, Bart., M.P., and unanimously resolved;

6. That to defray the cost of the extensive designs announced in the foregoing resolutions, it is the opinion of this Meeting that public meetings should be held in all large towns for the purpose of increasing the number of Subscribers and other contributors to the SOCIETY, and more especially for forming additional district and parochial committees in every part of the kingdom, and for stimulating the exertions of those already established.

Moved by Mr. Justice Patteson, seconded by T. Dyke Acland, Esq., M.P., and resolved by acclamation;

7. That the Thanks of this Meeting be offered to the Archbishop of Canterbury for his Grace's presence here this day, and for his uniform attention to the affairs of the SOCIETY.

INCORPORATED SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING THE ENLARGEMENT, BUILDING, AND REPAIRING OF CHURCHES AND CHAPELS.

Patron.—HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.

President.—HIS GRACE THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY.

Annual Report made at the General Court, held on 28th May, 1838. His Grace the ARCHBISHOP of CANTERBURY in the Chair.

THE Committee have the satisfaction of commencing their Annual Report by announcing that HER MAJESTY has been graciously pleased to mark her sense of the SOCIETY's usefulness and value, by signifying her royal consent to become its Patron.

Every year since the first institution of the SOCIETY for Promoting the Enlargement, Building, and Repairing of Churches and Chapels, in 1818, the Committee have had the satisfaction of making a Report of regular, and generally of increasing usefulness. Every year, therefore, has afforded fresh occasion of thankfulness to the great Head of the Church, and fresh cause for unwearied exertion in those who would approve themselves faithful in His sight.

The year just ended has exceeded all that have gone before it, both in the number, and in the amount of the grants which have been made; the number of places to which assistance has been afforded being 117; the amount of sums granted no less than 24,060*l.*—a sum exceeding two-thirds of the amount collected under the last king's letter. The number of sittings obtained has been proportioned to the amount of money expended; viz. 44,035 in all, of which 29,973 are free and unappropriated; numbers considerably exceeding those of any former year.

The Meeting will be gratified to hear that the claims of the SOCIETY upon the public are every year becoming more extensively known by means of additional local Associations. There are now three to be reported as having been added to the list during the year just ended; viz. two Societies in the Dioceses of Chichester and Norwich, and one District Committee at Bury St. Edmunds. The formation of a Society is also contemplated in the Diocese of Ripon. The District Committee contributes all its receipts to the Parent SOCIETY; as will also, in future years, the Diocesan Society of Norwich.

Diocesan Societies in general reserve a portion of their subscriptions for their own local purposes. Among the contributions of this kind received during the last year, there is one which demands special acknowledgment; viz. 1091*l.* from the Bath and Wells Diocesan Society. Nor can the Committee refrain from the pleasure of noticing a donation of still greater amount received from the Diocesan Society of Winchester, too late, however, to be included in the present audit.

In addition to the aid derived from these sources, the Committee have to acknowledge the receipt, during the last year, of donations from individuals amounting to 693*l.* 1*s.* 6*d.* They have also great satisfaction in announcing a legacy of 2000*l.* from the late Lord Farnborough.

At the close of the year ending 31st March last, the SOCIETY's disposable balance was 4518*l.* But from this sum nearly 3000*l.* have been since granted; and the SOCIETY is thus left dependent on future contributions for the continuance of its usefulness.

Twenty years have now elapsed since the SOCIETY commenced the good work in which it is still engaged; and it may be well at the present period to look back to its origin, and in some degree to trace its progress. Beginning with a fund not much exceeding 50,000*l.*, the SOCIETY has been enabled to expend not less than 244,731*l.* from its own resources, and to cause the expenditure of a much larger amount. The total number of places which have received assistance from it is 1485, and the total number of additional sittings obtained is 398,960, of which 292,339 are free and unappropriated; the average cost to the SOCIETY on the whole number being 12*s.* 6*d.* per sitting, on the free sittings 16*s.* 10*d.* In order to form a due estimate of the benefit produced by the SOCIETY, it is necessary to take into the account not only the sum which it has itself expended, or induced others to expend in the several places to which it has afforded assistance; but also the influence exerted by it, in stirring up the zeal of individuals in many other places, which were placed beyond its reach, or did not require its aid.

This was fully contemplated by the founders of this SOCIETY, and greatly contributed to encourage them in what was deemed by many almost a hopeless undertaking.

It is not necessary, and would be scarcely possible to ascertain the amount of the moneys thus expended for the attainment of the SOCIETY's object. We shall probably be far below the amount, if we state that not less than a million and half sterling has been devoted by individuals during the last twenty years to this great and holy cause—a sum not less than the amount of the parliamentary grant to the commissioners for building additional churches.

Whether this be such a sum as becomes the members of a wealthy community, and of a Church which Providence has blessed so largely with the knowledge of Christian truth, and the means of diffusing that knowledge, need not now be asked. It presents a striking contrast to the sad neglect which marked the last century; and fully justifies the views and expectations of those zealous men who first set their hands to this good work. Some of those have gone to their rest; but several yet survive to enjoy the privilege of contemplating a scene which they could scarcely have ventured to anticipate.

In a word, those who are engaged in administering the affairs of the SOCIETY, and its Members at large, will derive from the history of the last twenty years, and from a sense of the great exigencies of the country, a motive for continued, and, if possible, increased exertion; seeing how much has already grown out of small beginnings,—and, being thus encouraged, to look forward with confidence to a blessing upon their future labours.

Subscriptions and benefactions will be received by the principal bankers in town and country, who, at the same time, should be requested to pay over the amounts immediately to the Treasurer's account at Messrs. Hoare and Co.'s; and by the Rev. W. J. Rodber, at the SOCIETY's Office, St. Martin's Place, opposite St. Martin's Church, Charing Cross; or at Messrs. Hoare's, Bankers, Fleet Street, London, on account of the Treasurer, Newell Connop, jun., Esq.

To those who may be desirous of promoting the objects of the SOCIETY, by bequests towards the Building, Enlargement, or Improvement of Churches and Chapels, in any particular neighbourhood, it may be proper to suggest, that the Society, being incorporated, can act as Trustees, to carry into effect the desired application of any Funds entrusted to its charge.

All Communications by the General Post to be specially addressed in the following terms, and no other; as any deviation from, or addition to, the words prescribed, will subject the Society to a charge of postage.

"The Incorporated Society
"for promoting the Enlargement, Building, and "Repairing of Churches and Chapels,
"St. Martin's Place, Trafalgar Square."

The Committee meet on the Third Monday in each Month, with the exception of July, August, and September; but all the business must first undergo the examination of a Sub-Committee; and to that end should be received before the Thursday preceding each monthly meeting.

The Committee of the SOCIETY for promoting the Employment of Additional Curates in Populous Places feel themselves called upon to communicate to the Subscribers to its funds, and to the members and friends of the Church at large, the progress which they have made in fulfilling the duty which has been entrusted to them. They are the more anxious to present this statement to the Subscribers, because a longer period than might perhaps have been anticipated has been taken up in making preliminary arrangements, and deciding on the mode in which the funds might be distributed to the best advantage.

The Committee having resolved to entertain no applications which had not received the previous sanction of the Bishop of the Diocese, some delay necessarily occurred while they were passing through this channel; nor could the claims of each case be properly appreciated till a considerable number of them had been received, and carefully compared together; but as soon as this had been effected, the Committee proceeded, without loss of time, to apportion their grants; which, after having received the approbation of the several Dioceses, have been finally confirmed.

The number of cases taken into consideration by the Committee, up to the present time, has been Ninety-three. Moved by the urgency of many of them, and placing a confident reliance on the expansive energies of Christian charity, they have determined to meet at once those which appeared most pressing and important, with such grants as shall, in each case, be adequate to the maintenance of one additional and efficient Curate; thus bringing the SOCIETY's resources into immediate usefulness and activity.

On this principle they have granted a sum of 5,075*l.* to sixty-eight parishes and districts, the aggregate population of which amounts to 1,545,166; and with a view to include parishes of every class and description, the list comprises manufacturing and mining districts, provincial towns, country villages, and places in or near the metropolis.

As the SOCIETY was not in a condition to make grants during the first year of its institution, the subscriptions and donations received during that period have been invested, in order to provide against unforeseen exigencies, and in the hope that the surplus may assist in creating a fund, in aid of the permanent endowment of new Churches.

A sum of 1520*l.*, the residue of the SOCIETY's present annual income, has been reserved to meet such applications of a pressing nature, as may be submitted to the Committee in the course of the current year. But as this term will not expire till Easter 1839, and as this statement of the Committee's proceedings exhibits, it is to be feared, only a specimen of the spiritual wants of our populous parishes, and of the urgent necessity which exists for a large addition of efficient and active Clergymen, it is hoped that the friends of the SOCIETY will use their best exertions to increase the number of the Subscribers, and that the Members of the Church of England will come forward in behalf of a cause so eminently entitled to their cordial and Christian support.

The Committee have the pleasure of announcing, that District Committees have already been formed in Manchester, Liverpool, Bury St. Edmunds, Southampton, Bath with Bedminster, the Deanery of Winchcomb, and the Dioceses of Worcester, Salisbury, and Exeter; and they desire to impress upon their friends the great importance of promoting such associations in their respective neighbourhoods.

It is therefore necessary that the forms of application be carefully filled up in duplicate, and forwarded to the Bishop, who will retain one of them, and transmit the other to the Secretary of the SOCIETY. The Committee will then proceed to consider the comparative claims of the several cases, and the sum to be assigned to each, with a due regard to its relative merits, and to the amount of the funds entrusted to their management.

The sums of money, voted by the Committee, being for the current year, and payable only during the continuance of the services of the licensed Curate, the applications are in all cases to be renewed at the expiration of each year.

The Committee are desirous of impressing upon the Clergy the great importance of making known the objects of the SOCIETY in their respective neighbourhoods, and of promoting, by every exertion in their power, Donations and Subscriptions in aid of its general funds.

CLERGY MUTUAL ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

Ninth Annual Report of the CLERGY MUTUAL ASSURANCE SOCIETY, made at the Annual Meeting held at the Queen Anne's Bounty Office, on Friday, 29th June, 1836, the LORD BISHOP OF LONDON, President, in the Chair.

THE Board of Directors of the CLERGY MUTUAL ASSURANCE SOCIETY have made their ninth Annual Report to the Members of the SOCIETY assembled at a General Meeting.

The total of the receipts of the SOCIETY during the last year is 14,142l. 4s., and of the disbursements 13,796l. 6s. 3d. In the disbursements appear the following sums; 227l. for claims in sickness; 360l. for endowments; 509l. 9d. for management; and 12,601l. 12s. invested in government securities. The receipts are on account of premiums for assurances made with the SOCIETY. No Member of this SOCIETY having an assurance made upon his life has died within the last year. The result of the accounts of the SOCIETY for the last year is an increase of 12,488l. 17s. 8d. to the capital stock of the SOCIETY. The amount of invested capital is 58,008l. 16s. 4d.

Whilst the SOCIETY continues to be eminently useful in payments made to the legal claims of clergymen, their widows, children, and others, by reason of assurances made with it, every branch of its assurances at the same time prospers. Upon the life assurance branch a very considerable surplus or profit has been accumulated; and the directors, in the discharge of the trust committed to them, and with the certified advice of CHARLES ANSELL, Esq., Consulting Actuary of the SOCIETY, and Actuary of the ATLAS ASSURANCE SOCIETY, have declared a bonus upon all assurances ranging under such branch, which were made during a term of seven years, commencing with the year 1829, and ending on the 31st of May, 1836, in the amount of one fourth part, or thereabouts, of all the moneys paid for such assurances in the way of annual premium. Thus, in the case of an annual premium of 37l. 8s. 4d. having been annually paid for seven years, the sum of 60l. 5s. 3d. in cash is assigned as bonus; and in the case of 44l. 3s. 2d. having been paid annually for five years, the sum of 35l. 7s. 6d. in cash is assigned as bonus; and in the case of 45l. 13s. 4d. having been paid annually for two years, the sum of 13l. 8s. 9d. in cash is assigned as bonus. The sums in cash assigned as bonus are to be appropriated to the reduction of annual premiums payable upon assurances entitled as above to a share in the division of surplus capital. Thus to an assurance for 1000l. made upon a life at the age of forty-six, and for which the annual premium of 37l. 8s. 4d. has been paid for seven years, up to the 31st of May, 1836, the sum of 60l. 5s. 3d. being assigned in cash, a reduction of premium of 3l. 17s. 6d. per annum, equivalent thereunto, is made, and the annual premium having been up to the 31st of May, 1836, 60l. 5s. 3d., will be in future, reckoning from that date, 33l. 10s. 10d. It will be found from the statement now made, that by reason of the bonus thus assigned, assurances upon life which have been in force up to the 31st of May, 1836, and upon which seven annual premiums have been paid, will in fact be charged with premiums for five years and a quarter only. And when it is farther taken into consideration, that the annual premiums stated in the Tables of Life Assurance are very moderate until the later ages of life, it will at once be seen that the Members of the SOCIETY enjoy advantages which are well worthy the careful attention of clergymen and their families. In order to account for so large a bonus as nearly one fourth part of the whole money which may have been paid upon life assurances having been assigned as bonus, it is proper to remind the Members, that very excellent opportunities exist for the selection of healthy assurers; and that the expenses of management are comparatively small, by reason of the whole business of the SOCIETY being conducted by a Board of Directors and Secretaries, who render their services gratuitously. The Assistant Secretary is the only officer to whom a salary is paid.

From the first great interest has been taken in the branch of "Health Assurance," or the assurance which secures a provision not exceeding 104l. per annum during the continuance of any sickness, incapacitating a clergyman from officiating in the public services of the Church. A prejudice existed for a time amongst clergymen, that such an assurance hitherto confined to District and Parochial Benefit Clubs, was somewhat derogatory to their profession. But a more sound and just opinion of its merits begins now to prevail, and it cannot be doubted when a clergyman entering into holy orders, is brought to consider that for an annual payment of about three pounds, he can protect himself from inconvenient pecuniary loss, through the effects of sickness, that the opportunity of making an assurance upon health in this SOCIETY, will be regarded as one of its greatest advantages. A total sum of 527l. has been already paid to members in discharge of their rightful claims for provision in sickness. The Board of Directors have further to state, that with the advice of their Actuary, and at a special meeting of the board, alterations have been made in the rules of the SOCIETY, whereby the amount to be assured upon life is increased, so that an assurance may be made for any sum not exceeding 2500l., and the qualifications to make such an assurance, is extended to the fathers and mothers, and brothers and sisters of clergymen, as well as to their wives and widows, and their sons and daughters. Any person, whether a relation or otherwise, may be appointed a nominee, to receive the sum assured, or any part of it when due. In this assurance office therefore, the whole body of the clergy of England and Wales, and those immediately connected with them, may effect life assurances.

The Directors have now to state, that they consider it to be of the greatest importance that every proper means should be taken to call the attention of the Clergy to the object and design of the SOCIETY. Every additional assurance which is made in it, settles it upon a firmer basis, and adds to its ability of dispensing greater benefits amongst the Clergy. The necessary expenses of management, although they are at present comparatively small, will be felt more lightly by each individual member, as numbers in the SOCIETY increase. At the same time it is proper to remark, now the SOCIETY is well and securely established, that the strongest recommendation to Clergymen to make their assurances in it, is justified by the consideration, that no personal advantage from their doing so, can result to any except themselves, for being mutual assurers one of another, there is no body of proprietors or shareholders to claim any part in the division of profit; but the whole surplus capital, which may periodically be found existing in the SOCIETY's account, will be wholly and solely assigned, in full agreement with all the intents and purposes of this SOCIETY, to the members respectively entitled to such assignment. Under these circumstances the Board entertains a hope, which they feel to be well grounded, that those in high station, authority, and with influence in the Church, will be freely disposed, on all convenient occasions, to continue to press forward the interests of a SOCIETY, which has from the beginning been sanctioned by their approbation, and greatly aided in its early efforts towards arriving at its present state of prosperity, by their united and effective patronage.

The Report as above having been read, the following resolutions were unanimously passed:—

1. Moved by the Lord Bishop of Winchester, That the Report of the affairs of the SOCIETY which has now been read is satisfactory, and that it be received and entered in the SOCIETY's book of proceedings, as a record of the prosperous state in which this Meeting, in unison of opinion with the Board of Directors, considers the SOCIETY to be at the expiration of the ninth year after its institution.

2. Moved by the Lord Bishop of Chichester, That it is particularly gratifying to this Meeting, to be informed in the Report of the Board of Directors, that the SOCIETY's accounts upon the life branch of its assurances, are such as to have enabled them with the advice of an eminent professional Actuary, to assign a bonus of upwards of 24 per cent. upon the total sum of the annual premiums received upon such assurances up to 31st May, 1836.

3. Moved by the Rev. George Preston, That the thanks of this Meeting be given to the Directors and others concerned in the management of this SOCIETY, as due to them for the prudent course which they have adopted in carrying on the business of it.

4. Moved by the Rev. J. E. Tyler, That in the opinion of this Meeting the interests of the Clergy and their families are very largely concerned in the prosperity of this SOCIETY, and that on every account it is desirable that no proper efforts should be spared to promote its extension, and so enlarge its usefulness.

5. Moved by the Rev. J. C. Wigram, That the Secretary be instructed to send a Copy of the Report and Resolutions of this Meeting, together with a Prospectus of the SOCIETY's designs, to each of the Archbishops and Bishops, Archdeacons and Chancellors of the several Dioceses in England and Wales.

6. Moved by Richard Clarke, Esq., That the thanks of this Meeting be given to the Lord Bishop of London for his kindness in taking the chair upon the present occasion, and for the warm interest which he has manifested from the first in its proceedings.

7. Moved by the Rev. W. H. Hale, That the especial thanks of this Meeting be given to the Rev. John Hodgson, for his superintendence of the affairs of this SOCIETY from its establishment to the present time, without any salary or other remuneration whatsoever; and that, in the opinion of this Meeting, the present prosperous condition of the SOCIETY, as exhibited in the Report, is in a very great degree owing to the able manner in which he has performed the duties in his office of Secretary.

8. Moved by the Rev. C. E. Plater, That the Officers of the Society for the past year be continued in office for the year ensuing, except the Rev. Gilbert Beresford, who has retired from the direction of the SOCIETY, and that the Rev. G. H. Bowers be appointed a Director of the SOCIETY in his place.

THE NEW MARRIAGE ACT.

Return to an order of the Honourable the House of Commons (moved by Sir Robert Harry Inglis), dated December 14, 1837, for—

1. A return of the number and names of places licensed for the celebration of marriage under the provisions of the Act 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 85.

Number returned, 1136.

2. A return of the number of marriages celebrated other than according to the rites and ceremonies of the Established Church, under the provisions of the said Act; specifying the places, parishes, or districts wherein the same may have been celebrated, and the number in each place, parish, or district respectively; distinguishing those which have been celebrated in the office of the superintendent registrars; also distinguishing where the same may have been celebrated by license, or on production of certificate; and further, stating the number of licenses issued, and certificates granted, by the superintendent registrars in England and Wales; the said returns to be made up from the 30th of June, 1837, to the 31st of December, 1837.

	Number Returned.
In Registrar's Office	453
In Registered Places of Worship	1292
Total	1745

3. A return of the number of marriages celebrated according to the rites and ceremonies of the Established Church, within the Bills of Mortality, between the 30th of June, 1837, and the 31st of December, 1837; distinguishing whether the same were celebrated after publication by banns, or on production of license.

Banns	5108
License	911
Total	6032

From the data in these returns, it appears, that of the places licensed rather more than 100 are Roman Catholic Chapels; but it is not easy to ascertain this exactly, because some of them are merely described by the name of the saint to whom they are dedicated, and are therefore easily mistaken for chapels of ease. About 40 are chapels, or district churches, belonging to the Church of England; and the rest, in round numbers about 1000, are dissenting chapels. The Roman Catholic chapels amount therefore to about a tenth of the separatist chapels licensed under the act.

The number of persons married during the six months within the bills of mortality were—Churchmen, 6032; Dissenters, 285. Among these Dissenters are included Roman Catholics, Quakers, and Jews. So that the whole of the marriages of Separatists, of every class, does not amount to one twenty-first part; and, in some districts, it is less than one hundredth part of the whole!

The following are the only districts in which the marriages of Separatists exceed twenty in number:

Ashton-under-line	30	Manchester	82
Birmingham	31	Marylebone	24
Bristol	30	Prescott	29
Leeds	40	Preston	44
Liverpool	113	Whitechapel	32
London, city of	79	Wigan	20

It will be seen, from these causes, that generally the greatest number of Separatist marriages has taken place where the number of Roman Catholics is greatest; and from the numbers of the lower classes of Irish usually attached to their chapels in these large places, it is evident that Roman Catholic marriages must form a very considerable portion of the whole.

Nothing therefore could show more clearly the numerical weakness of the Dissenters, or the attachment of the people at large to the rites of the Church, than this statement. And we feel much indebted to Sir Robert Inglis for having obtained these returns.

THE VESTRY BILL.

This Bill, which has passed the House of Lords, and is now in the Commons, is one of considerable importance to the interests of the Church. It has been strongly opposed in the House of Commons.

The preamble declares, that whereas in Parishes where the Vestry-room is not sufficiently large and commodious for the holding of Vestry or other Meetings, such Meetings are frequently holden in the body of the Parish Church, which practice is productive of scandal to religion, and of other great inconveniences.

The Bill enacts, that Vestry and other Meetings not to be held in Churches or Chapels of Parishes where the population exceeds 1000.

HINDOO SUPERSTITIONS.

The BISHOP of LONDON said he held in his hand a petition from the Bath Auxiliary British Bible Society, complaining of the superstitious practices continued in India by the government there. The subject was one of great importance as regarded the interests and feelings of the Christian public. The subject was comparatively new in this country, one upon which but little had been said; but unless something satisfactory was stated by her Majesty's ministers, it would cause such an exhibition of feeling that the government in India was little aware of. He was very sorry to see that the conduct of the government of India was calculated not only not to establish Christianity, but to discourage it; and unless they were prepared to alter it, he must say they acted not only in an unchristian, but an anti-christian manner. (The petition was then read; it complained of the Pilgrim Tax not being abolished, according to the despatch of the Court of Directors, dated in Feb. 1833; and also that no steps had been taken to carry that despatch into execution.) The right rev. prelate having presented a similar petition from the city of Waterford, begged to put a question to the noble Viscount—viz., whether her Majesty's government had taken any steps in order to set this most important question upon a basis which should prove satisfactory to the country?

VISCOUNT MELBOURNE begged, in answer to the question put to him, to assure the right rev. prelate that it was the intention of her Majesty's government to take the subject into their consideration, with a view of carrying into effect the object of the despatch of Feb. 1833.

REPORT OF THE TITHE COMMISSIONERS FOR ENGLAND AND WALES, TO HER MAJESTY'S PRINCIPAL SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE HOME DEPARTMENT.

(Pursuant to 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 71.)

TO THE RIGHT HON. LORD JOHN RUSSELL, SECRETARY OF STATE.

Tithe Commission Office, May 1, 1838.

MR. LORD.—The Tithe Commissioners are directed by the Act for the Commutation of Tithes in England and Wales to certify and report to one of her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, before the first of May, 1838, in what manner certain discretionary powers given to the said commissioners by that act ought in their judgment to be exercised, and to lay down such rules as to them seem expedient for the guidance of assistant commissioners.

In obedience to that enactment we have the honour to lay the following report before your lordship.

Those discretionary powers, on the proper mode of using which we are to report, enable us, while commutating tithes for rent-charges, to increase or diminish the amount of the tithe-owners' receipts or compositions by one-fifth; and further enable us, in certain special cases, (each of which is to be separately reported on by us to one of her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State,) to disregard the past compositions altogether, and to award rent charges with reference to the average rate which shall be established in respect of lands of like description, and similarly situated, in the neighbouring parishes.

By another enactment of the Tithe Commutation Act we are further directed to include in our report rules for the guidance of the assistant commissioners in estimating the value of the tithes of coppice-wood.

Our report will consist, therefore, of three parts.

The first part will relate to the increase or decrease (to the extent of one-fifth) of the amount of the tithe-owners' receipts when the tithes are commuted for rent-charges.

The second, to those cases reserved for special adjudication, in which the past receipts or compositions are to be altogether neglected.

The third part, to the mode of estimating the tithe of coppice.

We have thought it expedient to add some remarks as to the proper mode of assessing the expenses incurred in certain processes of the commutation.

ON THE INCREASE OR DECREASE OF THE RECEIPTS OF TITHE-OWNERS WHEN THE TITHES ARE COMMUTED FOR RENT-CHARGES.

A demand for an increase or decrease of the average compositions for tithe, or the amount of receipts of tithe in kind, may have reference to the compositions generally, or especially to that part of them which, instead of being paid directly to the tithe-owner, has been paid for him as rates or taxes. With the exception of one class of cases, which shall be hereafter pointed out, whenever a party applies to have an addition made to the average compositions of the seven years preceding Christmas, 1835, the assistant commissioner we think should, as a preliminary and indispensable step, require the tithe-owner to produce proof that the value of the titheable produce during that seven years exceeded the amount of the compositions, after deducting the expenses of collecting, and making due allowance for the inferiority in value produced by the mixture in the tithe-owner's samples, and by the hazard and damage incident to his mode of collecting and housing his produce. When such proof has been adduced, the tithe-payer may support the reasonableness of the composition—first, by showing any facts which make it probable that, if the tithe had been taken in kind, or if a higher rate of composition had been demanded, the average titheable produce would have been less than it was, to an extent which made the actual compositions a reasonable equivalent for the rights of the tithe-owner; or, secondly, by proving any facts which make it probable that the amount of titheable produce raised during the seven years which are to govern the average, was only temporary, and was not likely to be a permanent production.

We are somewhat reluctant to attempt any enumeration of the facts, or classes of facts, which might be produced in proof of either of these propositions, because we do not wish to narrow the discretion of the assistant commissioners, who, when on the spot, will be the best judges of the nature of the evidence calculated to throw light on each particular case.

In order, however, to make our own views more intelligible, we will point out some of the facts which, it may be assumed, will be most commonly relied on, without meaning to exclude others which may at any time appear to the assistants to bear upon the cases immediately before them. Proof may be received, we think, on the part of the tithe-payer, that the collection of tithes in kind would have been more than ordinarily troublesome and expensive; that difficulties as to roads and markets would have reduced the value of the titheable produce, when collected, more than usual; that unusual and expensive crops have been grown on the faith of continued compositions; that an unusually expensive system of tilling and manuring has been adopted on the faith of continued compositions; or that peculiar facilities exist for changing the culture from arable to grass. If one or more of these, or any analogous circumstances, satisfy the assistant commissioner that the compositions, though not representing the full value of the titheable produce, were still a fair equivalent for the rights of the tithe-owner, he should refuse to increase the rent-charge. If, after making full allowance for all such circumstances, he thinks the average compositions fell below a fair equivalent for the rights of the tithe-owner, he should increase the rent-charge by adding to the average compositions either a whole fifth of their amount, or such a proportion of that sum as appears to him reasonable.

When a tithe-payer applies to have the average of the compositions or the amount of receipts for tithe in kind diminished before a rent-charge is declared, it will be for him to show, either first, that the compositions have actually exceeded the real net value of the titheable produce during the seven years; or, secondly, that there is valid ground for believing that the cultivation and produce would not have continued to be what it was during the seven years preceding Christmas, 1835, if the full rate of past compositions had continued to be exacted.

The assistant commissioner may receive in evidence any facts which tend to establish either of these propositions. Two are obvious. Land may have been laid down to grass during the seven years preceding Christmas, 1835, or indeed at any time before the passing of the Tithe Act, under circumstances which make it probable that it will continue in grass; or the cultivation, the produce, and the compositions, may have been gradually and continuously declining during the seven years preceding 1835, and the decrease may be likely to be permanent. If these or any analogous circumstances satisfy the assistant commissioner that the average compositions or net receipts of tithe in kind of the seven years preceding Christmas, 1835, would form a rent-charge which would be more than an equivalent for the rights of the tithe-owner, he will diminish the rent-charge either by a whole fifth of the average amount of the compositions or receipts, or by such a proportion of that sum as appears to him reasonable. If he is not so satisfied, he will refuse to diminish the rent-charge.

Where tithe has been taken in kind continuously, and for a considerable period, it may be assumed that the cultivation of the land has been accommodated to that state of things. In such cases the assistant commissioner will only have to make proper allowances for the expenses of collection, and for the inferior value (as compared with other produce) of the produce collected and housed by the tithe-owner. But when the tithe has been taken in kind unexpectedly, discontinuously, and for a portion only of the seven years preceding Christmas, 1835, then the titheable produce may have been greater, because the actual cultivation had been adopted on the faith of a continued composition. In such a case, we are of opinion that the average should be amended and lowered, by substituting for the receipts of those years the succeeding compositions; or, if there have been no succeeding compositions, then such a composition as may appear to the assistant would have been reasonable under the circumstances. It must be understood, however, that this substitution is not to be carried so far as to reduce the rent-charge by more than one-fifth of the average receipts, for that would be exceeding our powers. Subject to this limitation the average obtained by such a substitution should still be open to objection, as too high or too low to be perpetuated.

We have already intimated that there is one class of cases in which the tithe-owner, making an application for an increase, should not be obliged, as a preliminary step, to prove that the actual net value of the titheable produce during the seven years preceding Christmas, 1835, exceeded the amount of the compositions.

In making this exception from the general rule, we had in view certain cases in which the accounts of the seven years may shew a progressively increasing amount of titheable produce, arising from the spread of tillage, from improved, though not unusually expensive, farming, from the restoration of lands to a productive state, which litigation and doubtful ownership, or the misfortunes of the occupiers, had caused to be temporarily neglected or abandoned, or from analogous causes. In some such cases the assistant commissioner may have a decided conviction that the increased production will be permanent, and is not dependent on the continuance of the average rate of past compositions or receipts. In such cases we are of opinion that grounds would be laid for an addition to the rent-charge to the extent of one-fifth of the compositions or receipts for tithe in kind, or some portion of that sum; as, in the corresponding case of a progressive decrease of titheable produce from the decreasing breadth of arable land, or from other causes, we have already stated that grounds would be laid for a reduction of the average of the compositions, or amount of receipts, whenever the assistant is satisfied that the decrease in the produce is likely to be permanent.

We have pointed at the facts, or rather classes of facts, best calculated to guide the decisions of the assistants when they are called on to increase or diminish the average compositions, and in many cases direct evidence of such facts may be adduced sufficient to satisfy their minds; but this will not be the case in all. In many instances it may be impossible to obtain direct and satisfactory evidence as to the alterations which would have taken place in the efficiency or the modes of cultivation, if a higher rate of composition had been demanded, or if tithes had been taken in kind. The assistants will diligently obtain all the local information possible, and carefully weigh all such evidence as may be adduced by either party, and still considerable doubts may remain on their minds as to what effects a more rigorous exaction of tithe would have had on the produce. In all such cases of doubt it appears to us clear that the rates of composition which they find prevailing in neighbouring parishes similar in quality and position, ought to have considerable weight in determining their decisions. Circumstances, which it may be impossible to detect in an examination of a few days, have, in many cases, influenced in the long run the rates of composition in large districts, and accommodated those rates to the inferior state of cultivation which would gradually have followed any attempt, on the part of the tithe-owner, to have exacted his full legal rights. In districts in which numerous cases of voluntary commutation have already occurred, the rent-charges established by the parties themselves will, of course, afford a yet safer standard of comparison, when the assistant is called on to decide cases which the direct evidence adduced has left doubtful.

Circumstances connected with the payment of parochial rates may occasionally form a special ground for applications to increase or diminish the sum formed by the joint amount of compositions and rates. We understand the main object of the Tithe-Commutation Act to be, to perpetuate, in the form of rent-charges, the sums which the parties themselves have treated tithes as worth during the seven years preceding Christmas, 1835, with the exception of certain special cases, and subject to a variation in all to the extent of one-fifth of the whole of such sums. While doing this, it is also the purpose of the Act to put upon exactly the same footing the tithe-owners, who have paid their own parochial rates, and the tithe-owners, whose rates have been paid for them by the tithe-payers. If, therefore, in two parishes, in both of which the tithes have been treated as worth 600*l.*, the tithe-owner in one has received 600*l.*, and paid his own rates, and in the other the tithe-owner has received 400*l.*, and 200*l.* has been paid for him as rates, that 200*l.* must be added to the 400*l.*, to make up the tithe-owner's real average, and put him on a footing with his neighbour.

There are cases, however, in which the tithe-payers having contracted to pay rates for the tithe-owner, have proceeded to assess the tithes at a much smaller sum than they would have been assessed at had the rates been paid by the tithe-owner himself. The fact, of course, can only be established by shewing the principle on which tithes had customarily been assessed in that immediate neighbourhood; and that being shewn, a ground may be laid for adding something to the joint amount of rates and compositions, not strictly perhaps under the twenty per cent. clause, but because in all such cases the joint amount of the compositions, and of the rates which are shewn to have been paid on the actual assessments, do not represent either the sums agreed to be paid by the tithe-payers, or the sums really paid by them when the greater amount of rates necessarily levied on their own farms, in consequence of the low assessment of the tithe, is taken into account. On the other hand, there are cases where the sums paid by the tithe-payers, as rates on their tithe, represent larger sums than those which were in the contemplation of either party at the time the agreement between them was made, and form with the compositions, therefore, a larger sum than either party can be said to have treated the tithes as worth. These are cases in which unusual, and therefore unexpected, circumstances have swelled the rates in particular years beyond the amount of the expenditure of the parish for ordinary objects, and beyond the amount, therefore, which either party reckoned on at the time their contract was made.

The rules which we have here established appear to us such as, when fairly and steadily applied to individual cases, will do justice to both parties. Our conviction is, that while doing such justice they will carry on the compulsory commutation very much in the spirit, and with the results, that have hitherto characterized the voluntary commutation. It appears from the returns made to parliament that the rent-charges fixed by voluntary agreement in the different counties have oscillated, within moderate limits, on each side of the past compositions; and we believe that the rules which we now submit, for the guidance of the assistant-commissioners, will have the effect of making the rent-charges, established by compulsory awards, oscillate in a similar manner.

SPECIAL CASES.

Special cases are cases reserved by the 38th clause of the act for a separate adjudication. In these cases the past dealings of the parties are to be wholly neglected, and the rent-charges decreed are to be determined by the rent-charges established in lands of the like description, and similarly situated, in the neighbouring parishes. Such cases will probably be very much confined to the three classes enumerated in the Commutation Act; namely, cases of direct fraud and collusion; cases in which a great length of time has elapsed since the making a composition which remained in force during the seven years preceding Christmas, 1835; and cases in which the parties have stood in some peculiar relation to each other, by which the free agency of one of them was restrained, or in consequence of which the composition nominally made for tithes was only part of a bargain, including other property demised, and affords no evidence of the separate value of the tithes. But as we are in every case to report to the Secretary of State the grounds upon which we have reserved a parish for such separate adjudication, and as we are confined to the establishment of rent-charges limited by the rate of those fixed on similar lands in the neighbouring districts, we think the rule, as to those cases, may, without any danger, and with some advantage, be put in a more general form; and that every case should be declared to be a special case, in which it appears that, from some peculiar circumstances, the past compositions afford no evidence of what the parties themselves considered the tithe-owners' rights as worth during the seven years preceding Christmas, 1835.

COPPIC.

The difficulty of fixing rent-charges in lieu of the tithe of coppice-wood arises mainly from the fact, that from different coppices being at the present moment in different stages of growth, there would be injustice in fixing the same annual payment on coppice lands of equal quality, if that payment were to commence at once on all.

To avoid this, a certain sum might be paid down as an equivalent for the value of the tithe of the actual growth of the wood, which would vary according to its age, and then an uniform rent-charge might be fixed on lands of like quality; but this would, in some cases, be extremely inconvenient and objectionable to the tithe-payers.

It appears to us preferable that the tithe actually accrued should be considered as so much capital belonging to the tithe-owner, and that the tithe-payer should be charged only with interest on it at four per cent., in addition to the tithe he would pay in future, supposing the coppice to have been just cut.

This plan, besides being more convenient to the land-owners, has the additional recommendation of securing a somewhat larger permanent payment to the tithe-owners than they would hereafter receive if all the tithe due for the growing wood were paid down at once.

For the details of this plan, and some calculations as to its results, we refer your lordship to the paper marked "A," appended to this report.

These rules, as to coppices, will in most cases, we think, satisfy justice and the wishes of the parties; but in some few instances, such as those of very aged tithe-owners, or of tithe-payers, who are tenants for life, they may produce discontent and hardship. We are of opinion, therefore, that it will be expedient to reserve to this commission the power, on a special report from an assistant commissioner, to direct any particular case of the tithe of coppice-wood to be arranged in such a manner as may seem to them best suited to the peculiarities of that case.

EXPENSES.

Among the important duties of the assistant commissioners will be that of assessing the expenses of awards, in cases where applications are made for an increase or diminution of the averages, or where an appeal is made against the decision of the assistant commissioner, on the ground that he has not correctly calculated those averages. It does not appear to us to be expedient, or even clearly legal, to take wholly away from the assistants the power given them by the 73rd section of the act, to assess costs between parties in such proportions as in each case they shall think fit and reasonable; but for their guidance in the exercise of that power, we declare it to be our opinion, that when notice of such an application to vary the average is given under the 38th clause of the Commutation Act, or when parties appeal against the award, to save the expense of unnecessary preparation on the part of the opposite party, the parties applying, or appealing, should set forth in a written notice the grounds of their application, or appeal, and that the applicant, or appellant, should not afterwards be allowed to enlarge or change those grounds.

On the hearing, we think each party should support his own case by such evidence as he may think it expedient to produce, and that the assistant commissioner shall, if he see fit, decide on such evidence alone, leaving him always the power of directing valuations and admeasurements, if, in order to resolve his doubts, he finds it necessary to do so.

The expenses incurred by the parties themselves should, as a general rule, be paid by them respectively.

The expenses incurred by the directions of the assistant-commissioner he will assess as the justice of the case may seem to him to require.

But if cases arise, in which either the application or the resistance to it appears to be officiously frivolous and vexatious, he should state that fact to us, and the grounds of his decision, and charge all the expenses of both parties, and all the expenses incurred by his direction, on the party making such frivolous or vexatious application or opposition.

And although, as a general rule, the expenses incurred by the parties should be defrayed by themselves, yet, when they are clearly driven to such expenses by the perverseness of their opponents, and by refusals to admit facts which the assistant thinks ought not to have been contested, then we think the assistant may properly assess on the party whose perverseness and litigious refusals have led to unnecessary expenses, the whole of such expense, although incurred in the first instance by his adversary, and that even in cases as to which he is not prepared to report the whole contest as frivolous and vexatious.

A portion of the expenses incurred by the parties themselves, or by order of the assistant, may be for the purpose of obtaining information which will lessen the expenses of the apportionment; we are of opinion that, in all such cases, the assistant should be directed to levy such expenses as expenses incident to the apportionment; and when such expenses have been incurred by the parties themselves, he should order the repayment to them of such sums as he has so levied. We have the honour to be, your lordship's most obedient and faithful servants,

LAW.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER, GRAY'S INN HALL,

THURSDAY, JULY 5.

(Sittings in Equity, before BARON ALDERSON.)

JESUS COLLEGE, OXFORD, v. TYRELL AND OTHERS.

It will be recollected that in this case a series of suits had been instituted by the master, fellows, and scholars, of Jesus' College, Oxford, as lessees of the rectorial tithes of the parish of Treddington, in Worcestershire, for tithe in kind of the land within the parish. The defendants set up a composition in lieu of the tithes in kind. The question was argued a short time since, and to-day.

His Lordship gave judgment. He said that the Court had already laid down the rule by which its decision was to be governed, and there remained only to apply the rule to the leases still to be disposed of. In these cases there was strong ground for doubt whether the payments set up by the defendants as moduses were not rather to be considered as old compositions, having their origin at a period long subsequent to that at which a modus, to be valid, must have originated. This amount, which was considerable when compared with the value of the whole parish in ancient times, and the inferences to be drawn from ancient documents given in evidence by the plaintiffs, would lead naturally to this conclusion. Nevertheless, as the Court was very desirous of giving effect to a usage of confessedly long duration, and by which the transmission and value of land in this parish might and probably had been materially affected, he had come to the conclusion that in those cases in which the payments had been so uniform and unvaried that he might reasonably treat them as evidence of some one fixed payment for definite land, which had been made from time immemorial, he ought to draw that inference. Whether in the application of this rule to the two cases already decided he was right, might, perhaps, admit of some doubt; but, however that might be, it was the rule which he proposed to take. In those cases where the payments had been made sometimes in one sum and sometimes in another, he did not think the evidence sufficient to establish the defendants' case. The proof was not distinct of any given sum being paid immemorially in respect of any given land. His lordship then referred to the particular cases of the different defendants, and concluded by saying that he was of opinion that, in the cases of the "King v. Potter" the uniform payment had been satisfactorily proved, but that in the cases of "Tyrrell v. Gibbs" the same observation did not apply. His Lordship said that, as the Lord Chief Baron was not sitting at nisi prius, he (Baron Alderson) had no jurisdiction to hear any but part-heard cases, or cases which the parties should consent to let him decide. The present state of the jurisdiction was most inconvenient, and called loudly for reform; but, as it would be a useful and practical reform, he supposed nobody would bother his head about it. It was a disgrace to the Legislature of this country that a court of justice should be so situated; and he should consider whether he ought to sit there again, unless he obtained a proper authority.

METROPOLIS.

Consecration of St. James's Church, Holloway.—On Tuesday, the 19th of June, this neat and elegant edifice, which is the first completed of three district churches now in course of erection in the parishes of Islington and Holloway, was consecrated by the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of London, in the presence of a most crowded and respectable congregation. This structure is the first raised by the united contributions from the "Bishops' Fund" and the parishioners.

Consecration of Trinity Church.—A new and very neat Gothic church, standing in Gough-square, Fleet-street, and erected chiefly through parish contribution, was yesterday (June 21) consecrated by the Right Reverend the Bishop of London, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Dale, vicar, and the Rev. Mr. Kelly, minister of the church, and several clergymen of the neighbouring parishes. After the usual service had been performed, his Lordship preached a sermon in aid of the fund required to pay off a debt of 700*l.* still due on the outlay for the building.

All Saints Church, King's Cross.—Yesterday (July 3) the above structure, which is the second completed out of three district churches within the parish of Islington, underwent the ceremony of consecration by the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of London, in the presence of a crowded congregation. The usual solemnities having been performed, the right rev. prelate preached an excellent and appropriate sermon, in which he expatiated upon the increasing demand for spiritual instruction in this vast metropolis, and the gratifying feelings with which he viewed the frequent calls upon him to perform that important ceremony for which they were then assembled. This edifice is the second erected in the parish of Islington, by the united exertions of the parishioners, and the aid of the Bishop's or Metropolis Churches Fund. It is of the Gothic order, standing in the main road to Holloway, near its entrance at Battle-bridge. It is calculated to accommodate 1100 persons, to nearly 300 of whom are allotted free sittings, and the whole cost of the building will not exceed 3200*l.*, 1000*l.* of which is subscribed by the Metropolis Churches Fund, and the remainder by the voluntary subscriptions of the parishioners. The same sum has been subscribed to another church recently consecrated at Holloway, and to the third now in course of erection at the further extremity of the parish, which, it is understood, will also be consecrated in the course of two or three weeks.

New Chapel in Lambeth.—The Archbishop of Canterbury has given a piece of ground, in Carlisle lane Lambeth, upon which a chapel will be forthwith erected, and will, when completed, afford accommodation for 1000 persons. The cost of the building (3400*l.*) will be defrayed by the commissioners appointed for the rebuilding of churches, &c. Edward Blore, Esq., of Welbeck-street, Cavendish-square, is the architect.—Morning Herald.

Greenwich.—The radical faction of this town have just sustained a signal defeat on the question of church-rates. At the latter end of last week a vestry was held for the purpose of making a rate, when the radicals moved an amendment to postpone the question for twelve months. The amount of the rate proposed was 2*d.* in the pound. After a stormy altercation and much personal abuse, not worth describing, the affair ended in a demand for a poll. The polling went on vigorously for two days, and concluded on Saturday evening, when the result was declared to be—For the rate, 736; against it, 451; majority, 285. As the rev. vicar was leaving the chair, after having declared the numbers, a violent blow was aimed at him, which fell on the shoulder of one of the churchwardens.—Morning Herald, June 27.

Parish of Christchurch, Surrey.—In this parish, where a church-rate has been twice refused during the last twelve months, a rate of 2d. in the pound for the necessary expenses of the church, and the decent performance of Divine service, has been triumphantly carried after a two days' contest.

PROVINCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

New Church at Clevedon.—On Tuesday last, the foundation stone of a new church, at Clevedon, Somerset, was laid by Lady Elton, in the presence of a crowded and attentive assembly. The site of the building is on the brow of the hill leading from the entrance of the village to Stokes's Hotel. By eleven o'clock the procession began to assemble at Sir Abraham Elton's mansion. Arrived on the spot, the Rev. Sir Abraham, in his clerical, addressed the assembly; and after the usual preliminaries, a brass plate was laid down, inscribed as follows:—"The corner stone of this church, dedicated to Christ, was laid by Lady Elton, on the 29th May, 1838, in the first year of our gracious Queen Victoria, which church was endowed with 1000*l.* by George Braikenridge, Esq., of Brislington. Rev. xxii. 13, 'I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last.'"

Consecration of a New Church at Out-Rawcliffe.—St. John's Church, Out-Rawcliffe, in the parish of St. Michael's-on-Wyre, was consecrated on the 5th of June, by the Lord Bishop of Chester. After the morning prayers had been read by the Rev. Wm. Hornby, M.A., of St. Michael's, the bishop delivered a most excellent and appropriate sermon, from Heb. xii. 23,—"The spirits of just men made perfect." The contributions received at the door by Mrs. Ffrance and Mrs. H. Birley, amounted to the handsome sum of 92*l.* 2*s.* 3*d.* The interest shown on the occasion, and the numerous attendance of all ranks, notwithstanding the unfavourable state of the weather, were truly gratifying. The church was crowded to excess, many being obliged to stand throughout the whole service. It is calculated that about 500 persons were present within the church, and that about 200 more were obliged to depart without gaining admittance.—The church, which is a neat structure, built of brick, in the Norman style of architecture, is calculated to contain 300 sittings, of which about 170 are free. The Rev. Hugh Hornby, vicar and patron of St. Michael's, has most liberally endowed it with 75*l.* per annum. Mr. Ffrance has given an acre and a half of land, in a most eligible situation, for the site of the church, church-yard, parsonage house, orchard, and garden. In addition to which, he and his family have subscribed the handsome sum of about 600*l.* towards the building fund. It is estimated that the total expense of building the church, a parsonage house, and school, will not be less than 1950*l.*, towards which the sum of 137*l.* 10*s.* 9*d.* has already been raised; leaving a deficiency of nearly 600*l.*

Poor Law and Tithe Commutation Acts.—An interesting decision under the Poor Law and Tithe Commutation Acts took place a few days since, before a very full bench of magistrates, at the sessions holden for that purpose, at the Carnarvon Arms, Whitway, near Newbury. It was an appeal by the rector of East Woodhay. The commutation was made at a rent charge of 102*l.* 1*s.*, including 2*l.* 4*s.* as an equivalent for rates. The clergyman was assessed at 900*l.* to the poor's rate, against which he appealed. The decision was—
Less by the value of Corn last year 25 18 0
By rates.....132 2 3
Ecclesiastical Dues.....8 1 7

One half to be rated.....£854 18 2
That is, half the sum of 854*l.* 18*s.* 2*d.* only is to be rated, because the occupier of land is not rated for his profits (only on the full value of his land), and it is supposed that the occupier's profit is equal to his rental, and ought to be so rated, and as it is not, the clergyman is entitled to a deduction of one half, besides all other deductions as above.—Salisbury Herald.

Sunday Wakes in Hereford.—A petition against Sunday wakes from the city of Hereford, signed by the dean, the mayor, the archdeacon, two deputy lieutenants, 44 clergymen, several magistrates, and a great number of respectable farmers and tradesmen, was presented to the House of Commons by Sir Robert Price, and it was printed on the motion of the honourable baronet. A petition, most numerously signed, was also presented on the same subject, from the town of Ross and its neighbourhood. We mention this, as we believe that no notice was taken of the presentation of the petition in any of the London journals. Other petitions are in course of signature.

IRELAND.

Extract from a Circular addressed by the Secretary of the Lord Lieutenant to the Lieutenants of Counties.

"Dublin Castle, 4th May, 1838.

"It appears to his Excellency that many of the duties of a magistrate are not suitable to the sacred character, and that, in the present state of the country, the discharge of them may involve clergymen in embarrassing consequences; and, however prudently and impartially exercised, may tend to raise dissatisfaction and doubt as to the due administration of justice. His Excellency is, therefore, of opinion that clergymen, not in the situation of independent landed proprietors, should not be continued in the commission merely on account of their being ministers in the church; and that this rule should not be departed from unless in cases of absolute necessity, where, from local circumstances, the attendance of a sufficient number of magistrates cannot otherwise be obtained.

COLONIAL.

COLONIAL CHURCH, BOMBAY.—The Lord Bishop was installed on Sunday, Feb. 25th, during the performance of the forenoon service, in St. Thomas's church, which, it is presumed, is now to be considered a cathedral. He was introduced into his stall by the acting archdeacon, the Rev. H. Jeffreys, and the acting senior chaplain, the Rev. W.

Ward, attended by Mr. Patch, registrar of the Consistory Court; after which, the acting archdeacon, addressing his lordship, stated that he had the honour, by order of the governor in council, to announce his lordship as the bishop of the diocese of Bombay. Agreeably to the form of worship observed in cathedrals, the "Jubilato Deo" was chanted, instead of being rehearsed. After the communion-service, the bishop ascended the pulpit, and delivered his charge to the clergy, which was marked by a spirit of humility, Christian charity, and benevolence, for which his lordship is so eminent, and a tone of genuine liberality, kindness, earnestness, and good-will, which could not fail to touch the hearts of the congregation,—one of the fullest ever seen in St. Thomas's church.—Church of England Gazette.

FOREIGN.

Religious Liberty in France.—The charter of 1830 guarantees in words the right of every Frenchman to profess freely his religious opinions, but the authorities have contrived to elude the force of this declaration by having recourse to an unrepellent article of the penal code, which requires the authorisation of government for every religious worship not recognized and salaried by the state.

Even in the instance of the recognized and salaried religions, numerous attempts have been lately made to impede the free exercise of religious worship. It is understood that any religion "consecrated by time" may be freely exercised with the permission of the mayor only, without having recourse to the Supreme Government for authorisation. The religions which come under this denomination are, the Roman Catholic, the Lutheran, the Reformed, or Calvinistic, and the Jewish, which are also the salaried religions, the three former in virtue of the charter, and the latter by a vote of the Chamber of Deputies. The mayor, as I have observed, may permit a congregation composed of the members of any of these denominations to enjoy the public exercise of their worship; but this permission, unless in the case of a minister regularly appointed and salaried by the state, has been in many instances refused, under the pretence of the small number of Protestants, the danger of provoking controversy, and other such futile pretences. An attempt also which was made by some of the consistories of the Reformed Church to supply the place of regular ministers by sending a description of lay-missionaries, with the title of evangelists, to conduct those religious offices of the church which did not absolutely require the office of the minister (such as reading and expounding the Scriptures), was attempted to be put down by the Prefect, and the so-called evangelists were tried before the police tribunal, and condemned to pay a fine; but, on an appeal to the higher tribunal of the department (the Cour Royale of Orleans), this judgment was reversed, and the court resting its judgment altogether on the charter, declared that the profession of every religion was free, and that the censorship attempted to be imposed by the penal code, under the form of an authorisation from government, was inconsistent with the toleration and freedom of conscience guaranteed by the charter to all Frenchmen. The Procureur du Roi, however, having appealed from this decision, it came to a re-hearing not many days ago before the Court of Cassation, which, while it confirmed the decision of the Royal Court of Orleans in the present instance, on the principle that the missionaries had the authority of the consistory for the exercise of their ministry, totally reversed the grounds on which the judgment of the Cour Royale was founded, and ruled that the charter was to be explained by the penal code, which forbids the profession of any opinions not recognised by the state, without the express authority of the government. Religious liberty in France is thus an empty name.—Dublin Univ. Mag.

TESTIMONIES OF RESPECT TO CLERGYMEN.

The Rev. T. B. Murray, M.A., Rector of St. Dunstan's in the East, has been presented with a Silver Vase and Salver, by the Parishioners of St. Olave, Hart-street, London, of which parish he was eleven years Curate.

A magnificent testimony of respect and affection has been lately presented to Archdeacon Robinson, of Trinity College, and Lord Almoner's reader and professor of Arabic in the University of Cambridge, on resigning the Archdeaconry of Madras, by his numerous friends and admirers in that presidency.

A very beautiful piece of plate has recently been presented to the Rev. John R. In Part VIII. (for August) will appear, Sermons on the Origin and Nature of the Marriage Contract, and the Purposes and Mode of Solemnizing it, according to the Church of England.

The Editor, in desiring to attract particular attention to these subjects, feels that (if his own character were not) they are sufficient to secure him from suspicion of selfish motives, in urging that attention. Many circumstances conspire to render it of the greatest importance to the morals and happiness of the community, that the sanctions of Matrimony should be generally understood and felt.

THE CLASSIC and CONNOISSEUR in ITALY and SICILY.

By the Rev. G. W. D. EVANS, A.M.
 Late of St. John's College, Cambridge, and Vicar of Reculver cum Hothe, Kent.

This Work, as might indeed be inferred from its name, relates principally, though not exclusively, to subjects connected with Literature and the Arts. Eustace, in the Preface to his Classical Tour, while he points out the fitness of the title which he had chosen for his performance—a performance which abounds with classical allusion—makes the following admission:—"Of the state of painting and sculpture, though these arts reflect so much lustre on Italy, little is said: an acknowledgment which may surprise and disappoint many readers. But, on the one hand, to give a long catalogue of pictures and statues, without explanatory observations, appeared absurd; and, on the other, to execute such a work in a becoming manner requires leisure, technical information, and the pen of a professed artist, perhaps of a Reynolds. The subject is therefore touched incidentally only; but as it is extensive and amusing, and affords scope to the display of skill, taste, and erudition, it will, it is hoped, ere long attract the attention of some writer capable of doing it justice."

The Author of the Classic and Connoisseur, readily acquiescing in the justness of Eustace's observations, has endeavoured to supply the desideratum by appending to his work an abridged Translation of

to which his observations on the different galleries are made to refer. Many who are acquainted with the original must, while they acknowledge its high authority and reputation, as combining the elegance of the scholar and the experience of the artist (for Lanzi, without relying implicitly on his own strong sense and exquisite taste, adduces, for the most part, the authority of Mengs or some other eminent painter in support of his opinions, and seldom indulges either in panegyric or censure, without alleging sufficient reasons), have regretted its prolixity, arising chiefly from the admission of a great number of names of very little note. The translator has not scrupled to lop off many of these redundancies, though, he trusts, without much impairing the utility of the work as a Companion to the Picture Galleries of Europe, and certainly without striking out any thing likely to interest the English reader—the lives of the more eminent Masters being given nearly at full length, and few names of much currency having been omitted. This is more especially the case with the sections which treat of the Caracci and their followers, exhibiting—the fierce opposition against which they had to contend—the patient industry with which they laboured after the honours rather than the profits of the profession—and their final triumph over their envious rivals—and thus holding out to the artist a lesson in the highest degree interesting and instructive.

The Translation contains the following Schools:—

THE FLORENTINE, the SIENNESE, the ROMAN, the NEAPOLITAN, the VENETIAN, the MANTUAN, the MODENESE, the PARMESAN, the CREMONENSE, the MILANESE, and the BOLOGNESE.

HISTORY OF THE POPES.

ONE important and interesting branch of Ecclesiastical History, that of the Popes, remains to the present time almost inaccessible to the student in this country. Although a large compilation by Bower on the History of the Popes was published during the last century, the cumbersome character of the Work in question, the unphilosophical spirit in which it is conceived, its meagre nature in parts, and the vast additions subsequently made to our historical knowledge in this branch, render it unfit for a textbook at the present day. Nor is it a wanton reproach on constituted authorities to say, the student, who in default of more particular sources of information, should turn to the general Works of Mosheim, Milner, and Waddington, would be perplexed or disappointed. The dry barren annals of the first author, the unphilosophical memoir-like form of the second, and the hasty and ill-proportioned (although graphic) sketch of the last would alike fail to leave a correct impression of the workings, through so many centuries, of the mighty engine of papal power.

An attempt, the results of which will appear in about a year from the present time, has been made in some measure to supply this deficiency. To the ordinary aids and authorities in such an undertaking, have been added others of later date, or valuable for the sake of illustration. Much attention has been given to tracing the gradual usurpation by the bishops of Rome of the powers of other bishops.

The gradual unfolding of the unscriptural and judaizing doctrines of the Church of Rome has been followed out.

The consistency given to the pretensions of Rome by the territorial grant of the Frank sovereigns—the long struggle of the Middle Ages between pope and emperor—the aid given to Romish supremacy by canonists and schoolmen—the successful assertion of their independence by national Churches—the causes which, even without Luther, would have rendered the Reformation inevitable, (the means and methods by which, to the present day, Rome has so constantly endeavoured to restore to the large remnants of her empire what she has lost,) have been illustrated from Muratori, Martin, Chemnitzius, Bramhall, Giannone, Crevier, Walch, Ränke, Walters, Cramer, and Ullmann.

A few words may be permitted to the Author, with regard to the spirit in which his remarks have been written. To some, perhaps, it may seem, that he has adopted a tone of inappropriate clemency. But the true means of exposing the errors of "Babylone falsa et ria," or any other parent of frauds, consists not in the indiscriminate use of terms of censure and condemnation. Such language is not only sinful, as coming short of Christian kindness, but it is that of arrogant and unscriptural self-confidence. The errors of the Romish system are founded in the longings of human nature, otherwise it would have been impossible to have woven them into a form of such tenacity. To guard against their reappearance, under whatever name or shape, is the duty of every Protestant, more especially at a season like the present, when Rome has pushed her outposts, as in her former days of revival, to the north of the Alps. There is much to attract in the errors of Romanism; there are great evils in that reaction from priestcraft to infidelity, which follows inevitably in the train of the first. It is hoped, accordingly, that in the forthcoming sketch may be found not only matter of instruction, in that we may see the gradual rise and progress of error, until the admission into a dogmatic system; of thankfulness, for our deliverance from an unprofitable burden; and of warning, against what may so easily beset us, within in our own hearts, as in attempts at proselytism from without.

THE CHRISTIAN EXPOSITOR, or, a Practical Guide to the Study of the New Testament: intended for the Use of General Readers.

By the Rev. GEORGE HOLDEN, M.A.

Though many Expositions of the Bible of great and deserved celebrity exist in our language, a Commentary sufficiently short to be read by those who have not leisure to consult learned works, yet sufficiently comprehensive to serve as a guide to the study of the Sacred Scriptures, appears to be still wanting. To supply this deficiency is the design of the present Work, in which it has been the aim and study of the Author to embrace, in a condensed form, such information as will enable the general reader to ascertain the real meaning of the Inspired Writers.

THE CHURCH YEAR-BOOK:

COMPRISING

A CHURCH REPORT, A CHURCH CALENDAR, AND THE ANNUAL STATISTICS

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

UNDER the title above specified, it is proposed to publish towards the end of the present year, and to continue annually, a methodized and panoramic survey of the condition and operations of the Established Church, so that it may be regarded both in its unity and its variety; so that the constituent portions may be observed in their relation and subordination to the whole, and not be mistaken for it; so that all its affairs may be seen both at one view, and in their separate aspects. In one way, it is proposed to enlarge the plan to the widest extension, and in another way to confine it within the strictest limitations; that is, to give all the facts, and nothing but the facts; or at least to give opinions, where they must be given, simply as the opinions of those who have entertained and expressed them, without any admixture whatsoever of the speculative notions of the compilers. The work, therefore, will be a simple record of actual occurrences, partly written and partly tabular. It is proposed to bring it within the shortest and most definite compass, the clearest and most compact form, which can be made compatible with the nature and dimensions of the design; and so to render it both a contemporary history and a book of reference—a mirror of the state and prospects of the Establishment—a register of ecclesiastical events—a Calendar of the Church, as there are now University Calendars,—and a Report of the Church at large, as there are now Reports of particular Societies.

It is impossible in this Prospectus to specify the entire contents of such a publication, or the order in which they should be placed, or the exact mode of arranging and exhibiting them. Matters, too, might, perhaps, sometimes remain, which would require to be thrown either into an Appendix, or into some kind of "Supplement," or "Companion." The main features, however, would be as follows:—

I. A Summary, or brief Review, both positive and comparative, of the Resources and Proceedings of the Church for the past year, a General Abstract, or Conspectus, of the subsequent portions of the Work.

II. The several provinces and relations of the Ecclesiastical Establishment; and, therefore, the Political and External Relations of the Church of England; the Legislative Enactments bearing upon it during the year; Acts of Parliament, or Abstracts of them; Documents, or Substance of Documents; List of Voters on important questions, &c., &c.; Church Commissions, Tythe Commissions, &c., &c.

III. The Spiritual and Internal Relations of the Church:

1. In its collective character, if there should have occurred any Synod, Convocation, or General Arrangement.

2. In the different Dioceses:—e. g. Number of Ordinations; Want and Supply of Church Room; New Churches built, &c.; particular Plans, Transactions, Alterations, &c.

3. In Parishes and Parochial Machinery, &c.; Territorial and other Changes from Poor Law Unions, &c.

These things to be shown, immediately, as to England, and hereafter, it is hoped, as to Ireland.

IV. The Colonial Relations of the Church:—A view of all that has been done ecclesiastically in the Colonies, and dependencies of the Empire: comparison of Spiritual Wants and Spiritual Agency, &c.

V. The Foreign Relations of the Church:—Provision made for its members on the Continent of Europe, and other places not under the dominion of the British crown; as likewise the implantation and diffusion of Christianity in heathen countries, &c.

VI. The Relations and Intercourse of the Church of England with Kindred Churches, such as the Episcopal Church of Scotland, of America, &c.

VII. After the Spiritual, or Religious Ministrations of the Church, the less direct, but constant and universal agency of the Church and Churchmen; as, for instance, the Moral and Economical Agency, that is, the operations in the vast domain of social and domestic economy, in the work of moral and even physical melioration, in the formation and management of provident and charitable institutions, associations for mutual aid, mutual insurance, &c., &c.—the influence of the Church, as far as it can be traced in the diminution of pauperism, the prevention of crime, the increase of health and comfort in the population, the promotion of moral and industrious habits:—the plans proposed for all, or any of these purposes, &c.

VIII. The Educational System of the Church:

1. Education of, or for, the Church; Universities, Clerical Education, Examinations for Orders, &c.

2. Education by, or in connection with, the Church, from such institutions as the Durham University, King's College, &c., down to the Parochial Schools; showing what extent, and what classes, of the people this education covers, and what is the range of its instructions.

IX. Church Societies:

1. Collectively:—A scheme, or conspectus, of them all, tracing their relation to the Church at large, and to each other.

2. Separately:—Abstract of their Proceedings, Reports, &c.

X. Synopsis of Church Literature for the Year:—Admitting from authors and publishers a brief and simple statement, not, of course, of the merits, but of the nature and object, of their publications; and giving at least a classified sketch of their number and their subjects, as some indication and measure of the learning, studies, and researches of Churchmen.

XI. Miscellaneous Department:—As, for instance, Obituary, or Necrological Report; or a Statement at least of the number of Deaths among the Clergy, as also the number of Preferments; with other matters, which need not be particularized: e. g. Public Meetings, Popular Demonstrations for, or against, the Church, &c.

XII. A Copious Alphabetical Index:—Pointing out all that refers to any person, or class of persons, to any place, or subject, mentioned in the Volume.

There would be no difficulty in showing, that a work, such as has been sketched, is not in existence, and yet that it ought to be in existence;—that an adequate record of the proceedings of the Church is not furnished to the country,—and yet that, without it, the Ecclesiastical Establishment of a mighty nation cannot do justice to itself. At the same time, moreover, the Church of England possesses both peculiar facilities and peculiar advantages for the prosecution of such a work. For, while statistical researches are now pushed in many directions, and grouped into many shapes and combinations, there is not one among them all, which is more proper or natural in itself, or which has a compass at once nobler and more manageable, than that investigation which takes, for its scope and object, the Church of England and Ireland, through the whole extent of its magnificent operations; there is not one, which, whether from the character of the materials, or from the opportunities and organization of those who might collect and supply them, gives higher promise of fulness and accuracy; there is not one which is likely to be attended with more interesting and instructive results, or to make a larger accession to the general stock of human intelligence.

The benefits, indeed, of a Church Report, provided the execution be at all worthy of the subject, must be obvious in every way. Without pretending to adjudicate, it might supply the best materials for forming a right judgment. It might afford the most precious data to men of different positions and professions, to the statistician, to the legislator, to the historian, to the political economist, to the Christian philanthropist. While helping to extend and consolidate the action of the Church, it might prove its manifold and inestimable uses, not merely for time, but for eternity; as augmenting the sum, not merely of public and temporal, but of personal and everlasting well-being; not merely as a social institution, but as an instrument, under Providence, of promoting the glory of God, and the religion of his Son Jesus Christ. It might make men think, with juster and steadier, with more precise and more serious contemplations, what the Church does for the people, and what the people do for the Church; what are the functions of our Religious Establishment, and how it discharges them; what its revenues, and how it employs them; what the means and engines at its disposal, and how it turns them to account:—how, in short, it fulfils its high and holy purposes, as a branch of the Church Catholic, as a religious communion having its own peculiar character, as an Establishment connected with the State, and as a mighty machinery for beneficially affecting the condition, not only of the British empire, but of the human race. As to those without the Church it might remove many cavils, and rectify many misconceptions, in a manner at once the most efficacious, and the least offensive: while, as to those within, it might act both as an encouragement, by showing what is done, and a stimulus, by showing where there are still chasms and deficiencies. In going over the whole ground, it might point out what space is tillied and planted as it ought to be, and also what space still remains unoccupied, or occupied only with a partial and imperfect culture. By a statement of the actual, it might lead up to the progressive attainment of the practicable and the desirable. It might even serve as a bond of union, by affording a neutral ground to Churchmen of every shade of opinion, without the surrender or compromise of their respective principles. It is one way, in which all Churchmen might act together, and have a publication equally appertaining to them all.

As some guarantee that it will perform all that it promises, and that it will not attempt more, the editor is at liberty to state that the Archbishop of Canterbury has granted permission that the work be dedicated to his Grace, on the stipulation that it shall not depart from its avowed design, nor transgress its prescribed limits. The Archbishop of York, and the Bishop of London, have also given their sanction on the same terms. On the same terms, likewise, these distinguished prelates have allowed access to the sources of information which are at their command; and from many other quarters the kindest encouragement has been held out.

The Publisher will throw his best exertions into the scale, that nothing may be wanting, which his resources and experience can provide, in the way of capital, or mechanical skill, or the most efficient means of circulation.

The Editor, therefore, appeals, with, he would trust, no unreasonable confidence, to the attached members of the Established Church, whether lay or clerical. He would invite their suggestions: he would ask for information, for assistance, for support;—as to a work, which belongs hardly more to one member of the same communion than to another, as to a common object in which all have a common interest.

It only remains to add that the Church Year Book has been long in contemplation; that months have elapsed since actual steps were taken for the execution of the design; and that a more detailed prospectus has been in print for many weeks.

It is requested that all Communications for the CHURCH YEAR-BOOK be addressed (post paid) to the Rev. JAMES SHERGOLD BOONE, to the care of the Publisher, JOHN W. PARKER, West Strand, London.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE;

REGISTER OF

THE AFFAIRS OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND, AND

OF ITS RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES AND INSTITUTIONS.

No. 2.

LONDON, TUESDAY, AUGUST 14, 1838.

PRICE SIXPENCE.

The ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE is published on the second Tuesday in every month, and may be obtained by ordering it of any Newsmen in the Kingdom.

THE First Number of the ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE has been received in a manner which requires especial notice and acknowledgment. The communications which have been received from all parts of the kingdom are of such a kind, as to leave no doubt that it will be generally acceptable to those who feel an interest in the affairs of the Church, and especially so to the Clergy. The number of these communications renders it impossible to acknowledge the receipt of them separately; but the list of Subscribers which we publish will be, in many cases, an acknowledgment that they have been received; and we beg to assure our Correspondents generally, that the observations and suggestions which they have made will not be lost sight of. With reference to letters upon various subjects, which have been sent for insertion, it is necessary to state, that the principle upon which the work has been established is, that it shall not be a vehicle for discussion, but a record of facts, and a medium of Ecclesiastical Intelligence only. One enquiry which has been made from several quarters, seems however to require a distinct answer. It has been asked, whether there is any exclusiveness with regard to the admission of reports or papers of any particular Societies, in connection with the Church of England? We answer distinctly, that there is no such exclusiveness. The line drawn is that which is indicated by the Church itself, namely,—Church Societies, as distinguished from those which are avowedly not in connexion with the Church. Within that line it is our desire to include all the Societies which are engaged in carrying forward the great objects of the Church, and to afford them, as far as we are able, the benefit of our circulation. The plan which we have adopted, of sending the work gratis, monthly, to the resident Clergyman of every parish throughout England and Wales, and the Episcopal sanction which has been afforded to it, will bring their claims continually under the notice of those who are best able to judge of their objects and give them efficient support, in every part of the kingdom.

The gratuitous circulation of the first Number of the ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE exceeded Eleven Thousand. And this, as we have now ascertained, will be about the number ordinarily required for the Clergy alone. Our best thanks, therefore, are due to those Clergymen, who have contributed to lighten the pressure of this great circulation, by subscribing for their copies. It will be satisfactory to them to know, that there is now every prospect of the stability and success of the work. We are desirous, however, that it should obtain an extended circulation amongst the Laity, and we shall feel much obliged to those Clergymen who feel an interest in the undertaking, if they will endeavour to promote its objects among their Parishioners.

They will thus contribute greatly to its prosperity, and, at the same time, assist in diffusing correct information upon Ecclesiastical matters, at a period when it is so essentially needful to the best interests of Religion and of the Church.

We are also indebted to those Clergymen, who, having the sole charge of more than one parish, have returned the copies which they have received over and above that which was intended for their own use. And we beg to state, that in case of any of these Parishes being hereafter placed under the separate charge of any other Clergyman, he will receive the ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE gratis, upon writing for it, post paid, to the Publisher.

For the present month the press of matter has obliged us to enlarge the dimensions of the ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE, by Eight additional Pages.

SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE.

Report of the Foreign Translation Committee, for the Year 1838, read and adopted at the General Meeting, Tuesday, July 3, 1838.

THE Committee for Foreign Translations of the Holy Scriptures, and of the Liturgy, have to present their Annual Report to the Board.

The Committee have continued during the past year to carry on the objects for which they were appointed, according to the principles indicated in their previous Reports.

The Committee have the pleasure to lay before the Board, copies of the New Translation of the Liturgy into Dutch, with the English in parallel columns. The difficulty of getting the Work thus printed in Holland, has been far greater than was anticipated, and has occasioned considerable delay; but it is hoped that the pains which have thus been bestowed upon it, will make the book more acceptable to Dutch scholars, and to the readers of the Dutch language generally. Applications have been long made from several of the Anglo-Dutch Colonies for supplies of this Work. These will now be furnished as soon as possible; and as it has been stated in the last Report, that the Work had excited considerable interest in Holland, there seems to be a reasonable hope, that this portion of the SOCIETY'S expenditure and labours will be repaid by the extensive circulation which it will acquire, and by the advantages which must arise from rendering the primitive Services of our Church available in quarters where they have hitherto been imperfectly or not at all understood.

Shortly after the last Report, the Committee published the revised Translation of the Liturgy in Spanish. The greater part of this edition, and also of that of the Spanish New Testament, consisting of 1000 each, have already been put into circulation, and new editions will shortly be required. From the testimonies which have reached the Committee, it appears that both these works are very acceptable to Spaniards. And the Committee rejoice to learn, that through the liberality of the SOCIETY, a Spanish congregation at Gibraltar is now enabled to use this Liturgy, and to have the Sacraments administered by a Spanish Clergyman in their own language, according to the ritual of the Church of England.

The revision of the Old Testament in Spanish is in progress. The Pentateuch and the Psalms have been prepared for the press, and are now in the course of being printed.

The Committee have continued their labours in the Revision of the French Version of the Holy Scriptures; and though they have not been able to make as much progress as they had expected, they, nevertheless, continue to look forward to favourable results from this portion of their operations. Soon after their last Report they found it advisable, in consequence of a wish which was generally expressed for further improvements, to commence the work of revision anew. By this means a further delay has necessarily arisen; yet the Committee feel assured, that the time which has thus been consumed has not been spent in vain: objections have been removed; the work has been made more satisfactory to those who felt the greatest interest in it; and the repeated revisions which it will thus undergo, will make it substantially a new Version. The Paris Committee have again gone through the whole of the New Testament: the revision of the Gospels is now completed, and they are in type; but some time will yet elapse before the Epistles can have undergone complete revision by this Committee, and by the Committees of the Channel Islands.

The Committee are preparing in Paris a quarto edition of this work, with the marginal readings and references of the English Bible adapted to the French. And as no existing edition of the French Bible possesses these advantages to such an extent, it is hoped that the work will thus be made more generally acceptable; and that, by this means, additional facilities will be afforded for the study of the Word of God wherever the French language is read.

The Committee have the pleasure to report that, by the exertions of the Rev. W. D. Leeves, of Athens, the New Version of the Liturgy, in modern Greek, is now quite ready for publication. The Psalms and other portions of the Scriptures have been supplied from the New Version, which has been made for the Bible Society under his superintendence; and the whole will shortly be sent to press. The completion of this Translation of the Liturgy at Athens, simultaneously with the foundation of an English church in that city, to be erected partly from the funds of this SOCIETY, are incidents too striking to be passed over without notice. They surely afford reasonable ground of hope, that the advantages which our Liturgy has derived from the monuments of the ancient Greek church, will be better seen and appreciated, and that its publication will serve, in some degree, to bring back the attention of the modern Greeks to the earlier and purer days of their forefathers.

The Arabic Version of the Liturgy is now quite finished; and the printing of the work has only been delayed on account of the new type, which has been preparing for the purpose at Malta. It is considered to be a matter of some importance to let it appear in such a form as will render it acceptable to Oriental Christians. And on this account also, it is proposed to print the Rubrics in their appropriate colour of red.

From the information which the Committee have received during the progress of this work, they are of opinion that it will be well received among the Churches of the East, as conveying to them a better notion than they at present possess, of the doctrines and principles of the Church of England; more especially when it is understood, that there is no intention on the part of the SOCIETY to use any means for forcing the adoption of our Liturgy upon other Churches, or to interfere in any way with their affairs. As this is a point upon which the Oriental Churches are known to be very sensitive, the Committee have thought proper to order, that in this and in other versions intended for the East, a short advertisement should be inserted before the preface, disclaiming any such intention. By this means they hope, that any fears which might otherwise arise upon this subject, will be prevented or removed.

With regard to the proposed New Arabic Translation of the Bible, the Committee have to state, that the Rev. C. F. Schlienz is now on a journey to Egypt and Syria, collecting materials for the work, and endeavouring to ascertain the disposition of the Eastern Churches towards it.

The Committee have felt great pleasure in hearing that the Board had made a liberal grant towards opening a communication with the ancient Churches in the countries bordering upon the Euphrates and the Tigris; and having learned that no edition of the whole New Testament has ever been printed in the Chaldee character, and that such an edition would prove acceptable to those Churches in which that character is in use, they have agreed to undertake such an edition. They propose, however, to consult the views of the Ecclesiastical Authorities in those Churches, as to the form in which they would prefer it to be printed; and, consequently, some time must elapse before it is actually commenced. There are several valuable MSS. in this country which will serve to assist in the work; and more such may perhaps be expected when the proposed communication shall have been opened with the ancient Churches in Chaldæa and Kurdistan.

The Committee have not yet been enabled to come to any determination upon the subject of Versions for the Island of Ceylon and the South of India, beyond what was stated in the last Report; but they are in communication with the Committees in that Island, and with the Bishops of Madras and Bombay; and hope soon to come to some conclusion respecting these Versions.

With regard to the Russian Version of the Liturgy, the Committee have to report, that on account of certain difficulties connected with its circulation in Russia, they have, for the present, suspended the printing of the work.

The Committee have taken measures to procure a MS. Version of the Liturgy into Slavonic, which has been made, under very interesting circumstances, by an ecclesiastic of high rank in the Russian Church.

The Committee have been happy to learn, that the Resolution respecting the Apocrypha, which they communicated to the Board in their last Report, has afforded general satisfaction; but some misapprehension having arisen upon this subject, in the case of one important association, they feel it incumbent upon them to state more particularly the circumstances connected with that Resolution.

The Committee were appointed for the purpose of superintending the publication, and promoting the circulation, of the Holy Scriptures in Foreign Languages, and also of Versions of the Liturgy; and it has been supposed, that the circulation of the Apocrypha was excluded by the words "Holy Scriptures," as thus used. The Committee, therefore, think it necessary to state, that in the discussion which took place at the General Meeting of the SOCIETY, at which they were appointed, it was distinctly intimated to them, that they were to follow the practice of the SOCIETY with regard to the Apocrypha; which practice has always been to circulate the Apocrypha when called for, but not otherwise. And, accordingly, the Committee, in their first Report, stated, that it would be their object, in conducting their operations, to adhere, in all respects, to the rules and principles of the SOCIETY. But having afterwards had several representations on this subject, from District Committees, and from individual members of the SOCIETY, the Committee determined, after much consultation, and after having obtained the approbation of His Grace the President of the SOCIETY, to agree to the Resolution contained in their last Report, of prefixing to the Apocrypha the extract from the sixth Article of the Church of England, on the names and number of the canonical books. They now have the pleasure to state, that in the opinion of many members of Foreign Churches, as well as of our own, this will be a strong testimony against the receiving of these books as canonical, and a most effectual means of preventing them from being taken as any portion of the inspired Word of God.

The Committee feel that, while adhering strictly to the practice of the SOCIETY, they are at the same time fulfilling its wishes in thus endeavouring to draw a broad and distinct line between the Apocryphal books and the books of Holy Scripture.

The Committee beg to present a statement of their accounts for the present year.

NOBLE BEQUESTS.

THE late Rev. William Richardson, for fifty-three years the respected vicar of St. John's parish, in the city of Chester, has left the sum of two thousand pounds to the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge; two thousand pounds to the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts; and two thousand pounds to the Incorporated Society for Promoting the Enlargement, Building, and Repairing of Churches and Chapels. He has also bequeathed the sum of six hundred pounds for the erection of an organ in the venerable church belonging to the parish, over which he had been for so long a period the worthy vicar.

SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL IN FOREIGN PARTS.

PROCEEDINGS at a Public Meeting of the members and friends of the Incorporated SOCIETY for the PROPAGATION of the GOSPEL in FOREIGN PARTS, holden at Willis's Rooms, St. James's, on Friday, June 22, his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury in the chair.

Prayers having been read by the Chairman, the Secretary read the Report *.

HIS GRACE the ARCHBISHOP of ARMAGH.—I rise, my Lord Archbishop, with peculiar satisfaction, to discharge the duty which has been assigned me; namely, to propose that the Report which has been just read, shall be received, printed, and circulated. This Report contains a statement of the objects of this SOCIETY, of the success which has attended its operations, and of the claims it has on your liberality for support, to enable it to continue and increase its exertions in the sacred cause in which it is engaged. My Lord, whatever good has been done, or is now being done, by other Associations, this SOCIETY has at least the merit of precedency, whilst others can only boast of the wisdom of following a good example. But what gives this SOCIETY a peculiar title to your favour and protection, in my mind, is this—that it is the close ally of the Established Church, and has been conducted in accordance with the Catholic principles and sober practice of the Church.

For my own part, I do not hesitate to declare, that no one act in my life ever gave me more pleasure than having been instrumental, under the guidance of our most revered chairman, in placing at the disposal of the SOCIETY, the sum of 1000*l.* a-year, an amount left as a bequest, and placed in the hands of trustees, of whom I had the happiness to be one, by Mr. Jackson, of Forkhill, in the county of Armagh, for the Propagation of the Gospel in the East. We learn from the Report which has just been read, that the operations of this SOCIETY have been carried on in the provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Bermuda, and Newfoundland. They have founded a Missionary College at Calcutta; they are taking an active part to provide for the religious instruction of the Negro population in the West India Islands; and they have contributed very largely towards the maintenance and support of additional clergymen in New South Wales and Van Diemen's Land.

These, then, my Lord, are the objects of this SOCIETY, and this has been the manner in which its funds have been expended. And when we consider the undisputed maritime superiority of England,—when we reflect that she is the emporium of the commerce of the world, and that to her ports the countless wealth of all nations flows with undisturbed regularity and order,—may we not hope, without being liable to the charge of presumption, that she has been selected by Divine Providence as the instrument, and been furnished with the means of promoting these glorious objects, which this SOCIETY, under the blessing of God, has so extensively carried out? But, my Lord, I have had too much experience of the exhaustless munificence of the British public, to doubt that the claims now made upon them by this SOCIETY, will be made in vain. This SOCIETY has always had in view to conciliate the affectionate regards of all classes; and to that end I cannot doubt this vast assembly will contribute, as I am persuaded that this Association will ever be found to be the most faithful almoner of your bounty. I, however, refer this topic to others, who are more competent to excite the public feeling in favour of this ancient Institution, by explaining to them the various subjects set forth in the Report which I now beg leave to move be received, printed, and circulated.

SIR JAMES GRAHAM.—I can assure your Grace, that I consider it a great honour to be allowed to second the motion which has just been made by the most Reverend Prelate, the Lord Primate of Ireland. I have ever felt the most affectionate regard for this SOCIETY, intimately connected as it is with that Church, of which I am an unworthy member, in account of the determination which it has ever evinced, soberly and steadily to extend the bounds of that Church. This is a great and noble work, and to the last moment of my life I shall feel proud in having been allowed to take part in your proceedings. I am proud to acknowledge and proclaim myself a nephew of the late Bishop of Quebec [Dr. Stewart], who contributed so largely to the dissemination of the blessings which this SOCIETY, under Divine Providence, extends to the remotest parts of the world. And here you will allow me to say one word in passing, in allusion to my late relative; for perhaps I may be pardoned in entertaining a partiality for his views. Allow me to draw a slight sketch of his career. The late Bishop of Quebec left his native country early in life;—he was willing to forego all the advantages of extensive connections,—the society of his dearest and most attached friends,—the prospect of preferment in his native country;—and he went forth on his good work, upon a voluntary mission, to the remote parts of the provinces of Canada; and rising gradually by his unassuming manner, his character, and his exemplary merits as a Christian pastor, he attained the highest clerical station in the country. True it is, that for some period of his life he was able to bestow considerable sums in establishing endowments in that prelacy; but he felt as a Prelate, and as a faithful steward should feel, that he was bound to supply the religious wants, and to relieve the religious destitution, of the flocks committed to his charge. He died indeed a poor man, but rich in good works. He left behind him an imperishable name; and to him I may most aptly apply the words of the poet:—

"That, as a bird each fond endearment tries
To tempt its new-fledged offspring to the skies;
He tried each art, reproved each dull delusion,
Allured to brighter worlds, and led the way."

In the Report which we have heard read, the question has been asked, whether we shall advance or halt in our labours? But I think that question has been answered by another, also contained in the Report; "Are not the people of England religious as well as charitable?" I am satisfied that they are religious and charitable; and that whether you appeal to their charity or their religion, the claim will be irresistible and successful. It has, unhappily, been the policy of the State to diminish the grant to the Canadian Church, and to diminish it at the moment when the demands upon it were most urgent; and I am persuaded that the real position of that Church requires only to be known, to excite the sympathy of their fellow-Christians, and to insure the support of the Church Establishment in that colony. The Archbishop of Armagh might have stated in clearer terms than I can do, the large emigration to the colonies from the country with which he is connected. Irish Protestants emigrate in vast numbers; and I contend it is the duty of the State (and I say the State does not perform that which is the paramount duty of all Christian governments unless it does so) to stretch forth its aid, and the hand of good fellowship, to those who, impelled by circumstances, seek in distant lands that religious freedom which is to be found in the desert, but which they cannot enjoy at home. I say it is the paramount duty of the State not to deprive those who are compelled to leave their native land under circumstances which touch the heart to the quick, of that consolation, which, when the bitterest sorrows of life oppress us, is ever found to avail us; of that religious support which teaches us that happiness is to be found beyond the grave, when time shall be no more. If I look to the disorganized and distressing state of Canada, and to the general circumstances of the country, I know nothing so essential to its prosperity, as the employing of Parochial Clergy in connexion with the State. I pass by all panegyric on the Clergy in distant parts,—those ministers of peace who exercise the best influence, founded, as that influence is, on their own goodly lives, on their exemplary tempers and habits; and this it is which must conduce to the stability of our Church in the most distant parts of the empire. And whether as Christians or as Citizens, I say it is our duty to increase the members of the Church, and to extend the boundaries of its pure and blessed faith. I am almost afraid, in these times, to express an opinion on the subject; but, after all, I find that the Reformed Religion is the only sure and safe guard which ought to direct us in all our doings. You will excuse me, but at this moment Bishop Warburton's remark occurs to me: he says, "Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty." There is a general sublimity of feeling which the Spirit of the Lord inspires, which will ever be pushing us on to the attainment of those civil rights which we are taught by reason to know to be most indispensable. This is the real foundation to rational freedom. It is this faith, combined with good works, that the great Author of our religion came down from heaven to inculcate; and surely it is our duty to do all in our power "to perpetuate that faith." If I mistake not, these are the principles on which this SOCIETY proceeds; and these are the principles which attach me so sincerely to it. If I might venture to auspicate the proceedings of this day, I hope that all will use their influence in their respective neighbourhoods to promote the interests of this SOCIETY by enlarging its means.

THE LORD BISHOP of LONDON.—It has fallen to my province, my Lord, to move the second Resolution, which is to this effect:—"That in order to provide the means of education and religious instruction for the colonists in general, and especially for emigrants recently removed to British North America, this Meeting recommend that the SOCIETY for the PROPAGATION of the GOSPEL in FOREIGN PARTS undertake to contribute towards the maintenance of forty additional Clergymen, employed as Chaplains or Missionaries in the British colonies; and that the imperial and local governments, together with individual settlers, be strongly urged to assist in this most necessary work." I need hardly point out to the Meeting the two great ends of Missionary exertions: the one is, to provide such spiritual relief as the Church affords for those who are removed from its fostering care, and deprived of the advantages enjoyed by those who are more immediately within its bosom: the second object is, to extend the kingdom of our Lord, to lengthen the cords of the Church, to strengthen its stakes, and to carry forth the light that burns in its sanctuary to enlighten the people who are still in darkness. We are called upon, as means enable us, to advance the boundaries of our Redeemer's kingdom by every possible exertion. But our first duty is to provide for the wants of our brethren who are destitute of the means of public worship and instruction. It was for this purpose that this SOCIETY was first instituted, and in this track its efforts have proceeded, but they have not been entirely confined to the attainment of that one object; for of late years the SOCIETY has extended its operations to the bringing within the pale of the Church a portion of those of their fellow-creatures whose countries have come within the range of the British empire. The SOCIETY has provided Clergymen and Churches for those who were distant and destitute, and for neglected members of the Church, who complained that they were abandoned to atheism or to popish superstitions. There are in our records many affecting appeals made from the North American Provinces, in the early years of the last century, calling upon us to come over and help them, and to provide that spiritual instruction and consolation for which they were famishing; and for the want of which the Christian religion was in danger of being first forgotten in its ordinances, then in its practice. The SOCIETY responded to this call, and its exertions were productive of the most glorious results. We owe it, under the blessing of God, to the agency of this SOCIETY, that in the North American provinces the Christian religion exists in its fairest and purest form, and that we have there the model of an Apostolical Church, with regularly ordained Clergymen. That fact is almost altogether owing to the efforts of this SOCIETY; nor let it be forgotten, that for this inestimable advantage, not only are those places indebted which acknowledge the sway of the British sovereign,—not only those colonies, but I may say without presumption, that it is to this SOCIETY that the existence of an Episcopal Church in North America is to be attributed. I know from my own experience, and from the publications of many able and amiable men, that no persons are more ready or forward to acknowledge what they owe to this venerable Institution, as the mother and fosterer of the American Church, than the people of that country are. We call upon the public in the full confidence that in the results of the labours of this SOCIETY we have the strongest arguments for supporting it. We point to those results, not as being on so extensive a scale as may be commensurate with the spiritual wants of our Christian brethren, but as giving to the Christian public this assurance,—that if additional means are provided, additional good will be achieved, that we want only more ample opportunity for the fuller development of those blessings which are to be found in the true Church. I know it may be said that it is the duty of the Government to do that which we are now called upon to do. I know it may be said, and I am amongst the foremost to say it, that it is the duty of the Government of a country professing Christianity, to do something towards the dissemination of the Christian religion; a duty at least as stringent as any which can bind it to any measure of policy or economy, as being entrusted by the Supreme Ruler of the universe with the administration of one province of his empire, and as being accountable to God for neglect of every opportunity afforded to them, not only of maintaining the kingdom of Christ as it exists, but of pushing out its boundaries whenever an opening presents itself. And I am not without hope, that, questioned as this duty has been, and set at nought by worldly men, it yet will be acknowledged to such an extent, as to give the country a greater claim than it now has to the character of a Christian country, with reference to the fulfilment of its religious obligations. I do not wish to be understood as saying that the Government have wholly neglected their duty, but that they have not performed it to that extent which was incumbent upon them. If I am asked what measures should be taken to bring the Government to a sense of their duty with reference to these obligations,—first, I should say, do it by argument, and by entreaty, and by public opinion, expressed in a calm and temperate manner. Secondly (and this will be the more effectual argument), by the readiness evinced by a Christian people to come forward and show the Legislature, that whatever may be their sense of the duty incumbent upon them, we, as individual Christians, do not forget the religious obligations which rest upon ourselves. This, I believe, will have the effect, not of discharging the Government from that duty which is required to be exercised by individuals,—because, after all, the utmost exertions of individual generosity must fall short of the exigencies of the case,—but it will have all the effect of a good example, embodying a right principle of action,—it will, I trust, have the effect of inducing the Government to follow so good an example. It was our duty to provide for the spiritual wants of our brethren, who for many years were settled in North America; but it is a more important duty still to make some provision for the spiritual necessities of the almost countless numbers of our countrymen who have migrated from the mother country to distant regions. I say here again, that if the condition of an augmented population be such as to render it necessary for the preservation of peace and tranquillity at home, that numbers of that population should be encouraged to emigrate, it is the duty of a Christian Government to take care that those members of the community, who are driven to this sad necessity, should not be excluded from their share of those most precious blessings, which they have enjoyed as members of the Church. For, what case is more calculated to raise our pity and our sympathy, than that of the man who is compelled by circumstances of worldly consideration to break the dearest ties of this life, to expatriate himself and his family, or what is much worse, a part of his family, to what may be an inhospitable land, and not to find there those consolations which sweetened the cup of life at home, and lightened his sorrows and his cares,—to be deprived of the solace of that Church whose ordinances his fathers have enjoyed,—and to be deprived of that, the loss of which must be the bitterest privation of his existence? Placed in the deep recesses of the back woods of America, what must be the reflections of a man imbued with religious feelings? I will suppose him on each returning Sabbath, with nothing but ancient recollections to remind him of that holy day,—with no chimes of the village church-bell to summon him to prayer,—with no village spire rising above the woods which surround his miserable habitation, and pointing out that building within which he shall receive the assurances of eternal bliss,—no friendly counsel, no person authorized to administer to him the holy word of our blessed Redeemer,—no social intercourse with a pious and kind pastor to soothe his grief, and teach him to rely on the mercies of his God. What an aggravated picture of human destination is this! I call upon you then,—I mean, I call upon the Christian people of this country, to obviate these crying evils, not in the case of one, or of five hundred, but of hundreds of thousands of their fellow-creatures, who are thus left destitute of the ordinances of our holy religion. I know it is not usual on these occasions to enter into minute details; the general picture is not overdrawn; and I am sure it is not necessary to awaken, or rather to revive those feelings which have guided the operations of the SOCIETY; but let me state some facts in respect to those spiritual wants, for the relief of which we are this day met. I hold in my hands an address from the late Bishop of Quebec, to whose character his excellent and highly-gifted relative (Sir James Graham) has borne such just and feeling testimony. A more simple-minded,—a more single-hearted,—a more self-denying servant of his Lord, I never had the happiness to meet; never did I see a man more fitted to teach me a lesson as a minister of Christ than that venerated Prelate. He states in his address, that the Protestant population in Canada have never at any time been well supplied with the ministers of religion; but that the want of those public means of grace had greatly increased, by the numerous emigrants from Great Britain and Ireland; who, in very many instances, were placed in stations far remote from the residence of a Clergyman. And let it not be forgotten what is the meaning of the Reverend Prelate when he talks of these people being far from the Clergy. You think yourselves, my friends, unfortunate, if you are only removed a short distance from your spiritual pastors; but in the case of these emigrants, they are separated from the Clergy by distances of twenty or thirty miles, and often much more remote distances, so that the most zealous servant of his Lord is unable to provide effectually for the spiritual wants of his Christian brethren; and let it be remembered, that if you do, what I am confident you hope to do this day, these poor emigrants will still be but indifferently supplied with those blessings which the Parochial Clergy of your own country are enabled to dispense, and which the members of the Roman Catholic Church in Canada enjoy in greater abundance. I regret to say that the members of the Protestant Church may take advantage of the example of the clergy of another and a less pure form of our holy religion. The members of a less scriptural Church pay more attention to the duty of providing for the religious instruction of emigrants of their own persuasion, than Protestants do. I hope that we shall wipe away this reproach from the Established Church, and that we shall be as zealous in disseminating the pure word of God, as the members of the Church of Rome are in propagating their faith. The part of Upper Canada already settled, exceeds in extent the whole of England and Wales. In this province, the number of Clergy is fifty-six, many of whom will soon be chargeable on means hereafter to be raised; in the province of Lower Canada the number of the Clergy and teachers is thirty-six, of whom two-and-twenty are paid wholly from the funds of this SOCIETY. The diocese of Quebec is one thousand three hundred miles in length, and the labours of the Clergy are not to be estimated merely from the number of people whose spiritual wants they have to attend to, but from the difficulties which they have to encounter by reason of local circumstances. There are eleven districts in Upper Canada, and to supply the increasing wants of her people, by travelling Missionaries, and other means, at least one hundred and twenty more teachers are absolutely needed. Each Clergyman is required to perform three services on the Sabbath; three hundred and sixty Churches have been raised, at a cost of two hundred pounds each. With regard to Lower Canada, we labour under great disadvantages, for a Roman Catholic Establishment is guaranteed and secured to the inhabitants, by a treaty made with the Crown of England. The Roman Catholic Clergy are all single men, and the least stipend which they receive is two hundred pounds. These incomes are enjoyed by them still, whilst our own Protestant Clergy have to obtain a precarious living from the bounty of the public, and must look to means, which I hope, under the pressure of public opinion, will soon be largely increased. We do not call upon the Government to put their hands into the public purse; all that we call upon them to do, in the first instance, is, to preserve that property to which the Church has a claim as valid as that which secures to any body corporate whatever, the property which belongs to it by ancient law or charter. I speak, of course, of the clergy-reserve lands in Canada; a subject upon which, however, I do not think it necessary to enter on the present occasion; it is enough to say that the Church has a right to those lands; and if they are secured to her, and properly improved, they will be sufficient to afford the means of spiritual instruction to the members of the Established Church in Canada. I had intended to touch on another most important topic, that of the condition of Australia, but I feel that I have too long trespassed on the time of the meeting.

J. S. PAKINGTON, Esq. M.P.—I cannot but feel that, after the very able manner in which the resolution has been introduced by the Right Rev. Prelate, it is necessary for me to do little more than state, that there exists no one who more highly appreciates the objects and exertions of this SOCIETY in every part of the world than myself. It was well expressed in the Report of the SOCIETY for 1837, that the original design of this SOCIETY was to provide for that which was neglected by the Government,—namely, the religious instruction of our Christian brethren in the remote parts of the world. I cannot but deeply regret, while at the same time I cannot but admire, the extent to which this SOCIETY has supplied that which the Government has neglected to afford. When we reflect on the gigantic empire of this country,—when we look to the extent which she has attained through her maritime superiority,—or if we look to her free institutions, by which her commercial energies have been fostered, and the name of England extended to every quarter of the globe,—we must admit, that there never was, in the pages of historical events, a period when it was more incumbent upon us all to provide for the spiritual instruction of our fellow-subjects, far distant from the mother country, and give to remote parts of the world the blessings of the Protestant faith. At the same time I may be permitted to say, that there never was a country which has more neglected the spiritual wants of her colonies, than England. It is certainly matter of surprise, that the same religious feeling which has upheld the proceedings and principles of this SOCIETY, for a century and a half, should not long since have forced upon the country the fact, that it was their bounden duty to make provision for their distant brethren; a duty which I grieve to say England has entirely neglected, or has inadequately performed only, through the medium of this SOCIETY. But, in proportion as neglect has been the distinguishing policy of the Government, in the same proportion must we admire the manner and extent to which, through the generosity of the British public, this SOCIETY has been enabled to supply the deficiency, and has evinced the determination to extend the field of its exertions. There is no quarter of the world where those exertions have been more needed, or have been more beneficially exercised than in those North American colonies which form the subject of the resolution which I am now about to second. There are, in my humble opinion, many circumstances connected with the North American provinces, which, in some degree, make it a matter of wonder that the eyes of former Governments were not opened to the errors of that policy, and that they should not have seen the necessity of making alteration in the manner in which the religious institutions of our Church were treated. I am aware that I may be told that the larger portion of population of the Canadas is not in connection with the Church of England; but I believe that this of the argument is greatly exaggerated. I believe that the portion of the emigrants who attend the vice of the Church of England is much greater than is generally supposed. But be that as it may, I know that distant and remote settlements are not able to draw those nice distinctions which we do in the mother country. I say, therefore, it becomes the more necessary that the spirit of charity at home should be fully extended to the colonies, in order that the poor may have the Gospel of Christ preached to them. I hope that this important question will become the subject of discussion in Parliament. I think that the circumstances of the case do conclusively prove that something must be done in some quarter, and that the Government of the country must be aroused to the necessity of a change of policy in respect to the spiritual condition of Canada and our other colonies. I am not without the hope, that the late unhappy crisis in Canada, where those whose cause we advocate have shown such a genuine spirit of loyalty and attachment to their country and the institutions of their native land, will impress upon the Government the duty of providing for the spiritual instruction of those individuals who are so eminently entitled to our assistance. I will only conclude by expressing my earnest and anxious hope, that should circumstances render it necessary, this SOCIETY will receive that enlarged support from the country which it demands; and that, not only in the present day, but in future ages, it may continue to receive the admiration and gratitude of this enlightened country.

THE LORD BISHOP OF NOVA SCOTIA.—I am probably called upon, my Lord Archbishop, on the present occasion, not so much for the purpose of assisting what has already been forcibly and admirably said by others, in reference to the Resolution now before this Meeting, but because, from my connexion with that part of the empire to which the Resolution refers, it may be thought that I have information to communicate, which this Meeting may be ready to receive with a kind indulgence.

You have already been told of the serious embarrassment which has been thrown upon this venerable SOCIETY by the loss of that important assistance which was derived during a long period, from yearly grants of money by the Imperial Parliament. It may be interesting to inquire into the effect of this embarrassment upon the Missionaries of the SOCIETY. Many were involved in distress, and some had to endure the most severe privations. Few, however, very few were induced, even by such suffering, to shrink from the trials which thus came upon them; they bowed in humble submission to the dispensation of Providence; and, in faithful reliance upon the protection and blessing of their Heavenly Master, they used their sufferings as calls to increased exertion in the holy cause to which they have devoted themselves. I owe it to the estimable body of Missionaries employed by the SOCIETY in that extensive portion of their charge which constitutes the diocese of Nova Scotia, to bear this testimony to their merit, and to the respect and affection which is entertained for them in the sphere of their labours.

In some respects the condition of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island, is similar to that of the Canadas, which has already been explained. In these portions of my diocese there are many interesting settlements of emigrants; and frequently in my visits to these settlements, where I have mourned over the spiritual wants of these affectionate people, the thought has rushed upon my mind, that if those wants could be fully brought, in all their force, to the notice of such a meeting as is now assembled in this place, and if the feeling those wants would excite could be carried from a Meeting like this through all the sections of this favoured kingdom, the means for their complete supply would no longer be withheld. The sufferings and privations of our brethren, who may especially be regarded as of our own family, would not plead in vain; for nothing can be more affecting than the deep sorrow which they manifest, when they lament their separation from the joy and the consolation of the ordinances of their Church, which were once their portion in their native land.

This feeling is strongly manifested by the affectionate regard with which they receive the occasional visits of a Missionary in their scattered settlements; they surround him in the houses where he is lodged; they follow him from place to place, often for many miles, that they may gather comfort and instruction from the repetition of his prayers and his counsel. I have been followed upon such an occasion by a little vessel, that all her crew might be present at every service that was performed along an extensive line of coast; they sailed when I sailed, and anchored when I anchored, that they might land and join in worship, with their brethren, in many different harbours.

It has been my happiness to consecrate nearly one hundred churches in the last twelve years; and there is scarcely an instance in which the building of a new church does not speedily supply evidence that another is required at no great distance from it. Those who have been nobly engaged in promoting the building of churches and chapels in this kingdom, will easily understand how this effect is produced; for among the many new churches that have lately been erected in this island to the glory of God, there are few, I believe, which have not furnished evidence, first of the great need of that which has been built, and next of the extreme want of more churches for the thousands who are still unsupplied with church room.

I have to regret that the Archdeacon of Bermudas has been suddenly called away from London by the dangerous illness of a near relative, as he could have furnished a particular and interesting account of the progress of religious knowledge in his archdeaconry. In the three visits which I have been enabled to make to those islands of perpetual summer, I have found largely increasing numbers of candidates for confirmation among the coloured population. Immediate and complete emancipation was granted to the slaves of that colony, without the intervention of the offered apprenticeship. This measure served to call for additional exertion for dispensing religious instruction to the coloured population, and this SOCIETY have readily attended to that call, and greatly assisted the benevolent object.

I must allude to another very engaging topic—the religious destitution of the island of Newfoundland—a destitution most deplorable, and most difficult of full relief. There can be little hope of any assistance from the settlers in the out-harbours of this extensive island, where the people are so poor, that they are frequently in danger of starvation, which has often been averted only by public contributions of food. In more favoured and richer districts assistance may be hoped for, and ought to be obtained for the support of the clergyman. This, indeed, has been partially procured in many places in other parts of the diocese, and the good work is making progress; but in much of Newfoundland it now is, and probably will always be, impossible. But there is no part of the British dominions where the services of devoted clergymen are more affectionately welcomed, and no place where such services appear to be more eminently blest. I have seen boat after boat follow the visiting Missionary from settlement to settlement; and it is impossible to behold a more becoming and cordial regard for the ministers and ordinances of the Church, than is manifested by this warm-hearted people. It is most deplorable, therefore, that large numbers of them should be left entirely destitute of the spiritual instruction which they desire above all things. Thousands of them remain for years—for ten, twenty years—without seeing a clergyman, and without the consolations of the Church of Christ.

I am happy to have an opportunity for stating these facts in the presence of a distinguished officer, [Sir Thomas Cochrane,] who for some years was the governor of Newfoundland, where he rendered essential services, and was most zealous in his endeavours to promote the religious improvement of the colony.

I feel the necessity for being as brief as possible in noticing the several objects, among a multitude that I am compelled to omit, though well worthy of attention, that claim my regard, and for passing rapidly from one to another. I cannot, however, omit to mention the University of King's College at Windsor, in Nova Scotia. This institution was founded by a monarch whose memory is revered by all of us; and with a special design that it should be an handmaid to the Church. It was honoured by the particular regard of its royal founder, king George the Third, and has been eminently useful in promoting the pious designs of this SOCIETY. The most Reverend Primate of Ireland directed your attention to the splendid benevolence of one individual, which he was enabled to guide into the treasury of the SOCIETY; and I am most happy in being able to call your attention to the bounty of another individual, who, at the suggestion of an old and distinguished Member of your Board, when endeavouring to save his executors from trouble, most benevolently determined to devote 2000*l.* at once to the objects of this SOCIETY, desiring that one half of that sum should be appropriated to the Church in Australia, and the other half to King's College in Nova Scotia. Such examples can hardly be without an happy influence; they will surely be thought well worthy of imitation. I hardly know whether the individual who has made this noble gift will be pleased with the mention of his name; but it appears to be called for, and I need hardly say, that those who have had opportunities of knowing the extent of his charitable acts, will have no surprise when they hear that this is the deed of the Rev. Dr. Warneford.

I will occupy the attention of the Meeting no longer; but conclude with the expression of a firm and confident hope, which is greatly encouraged by the number and respectability of this large Meeting, that the determination of this SOCIETY to put forth all its strength, will be so met by all the members of the Church in every part of this great kingdom, of every rank and station, that, under the heavenly blessing, the means of the SOCIETY will be made commensurate with the great and increasing calls which are made upon them by hundreds of thousands of our countrymen, in the numerous and extended colonies of this vast empire, and by the millions of the heathen who are now under her dominion.

THE LORD BISHOP OF WINCHESTER.—The Resolution which has been entrusted to me to propose, for the adoption and sanction of the Meeting, is this:—"That this Meeting has heard with great satisfaction of the part taken by the SOCIETY in the building of churches and school-houses, and the payment of salaries to clergymen and schoolmasters, throughout the British West Indies, and of the important measures now in progress there, with a view to promote the spiritual interest of the emancipated Negroes." After what has been stated by the preceding speakers, it is needless for me to enter into any general remarks upon the subject of this SOCIETY, else I might have been desirous of congratulating your Grace on the hopes which we may venture to entertain from the measures which are now in progress with a view to the extension of the designs of this SOCIETY. Whether we consider the increasing interest which is taken in its operations by the public at large, or whether we may anticipate great and glorious things, such as this SOCIETY has not been yet permitted to witness, as the results of the attendance of this day, and the result of the appeal which is shortly to be made to the country at large, our future prospects may be regarded as full of hope and promise. But I forbear to address the Meeting on topics of this kind, interesting as they are, and to none more so than to myself, from the deep and sincere interest I have ever taken in the affairs of this SOCIETY, and particularly in the manner and spirit in which its designs are carried out in the colonies. Permit me rather to direct your attention to the subject of the Resolution which I hold in my hand, which has reference to the British West India Islands; a field large indeed, and full of interest, and pregnant with importance, especially at the present moment. There is especially one subject of congratulation, which has been briefly touched upon in the Report which has been submitted to the Meeting this day,—I mean the favourable disposition which now prevails in the West India Islands towards the extension of Christianity. We have all heard, and with deep interest, through authentic documents and channels, and upon authority which no one can doubt, of the manner in which the emancipated Negroes have received the boon of religious and civil freedom. It was my good fortune to be present with the Right Reverend Prelate, the Bishop of Barbados, when he heard of the manner in which the Negroes attended divine service on the memorable first of August, and I shall not forget the feeling which I then witnessed; and as I have heard a well-merited testimony to one of the departed prelates of our colonies, in which I rejoiced to join, I trust that I may be permitted to bear my testimony to the living worth of one whom God has spared so many years to preach his Holy Word. I think it a great instance of God's mercy towards his Church in Barbados and Jamaica, that the first bishops established in the West Indies have been permitted, under God, to mature, to a certain extent, the objects of their missions; and long may they live to see their labours carried out, in a degree more commensurate with their own wishes, and the spiritual wants of their dioceses. Nor are we without good hope of such a result. There are not a few circumstances, in themselves most auspicious, which encourage us in this expectation: and amongst these encouraging appearances, I would advert especially to the important fact, that the legislature of Jamaica is coming forward, impelled by so strong a sense of the necessity of religious instruction, that it has been difficult to meet the demand for teachers. It cannot be doubted that the Church principles on which this SOCIETY acts, in conjunction with the means which have been placed at its command, has not only contributed to bring together twice the number of clergy and school-teachers that would have been employed without its aid, but has roused others to a spirit of independent exertion on plans of their own, with the same object in view. In Barbados, in the year 1812, many years before a prelate of our own Church was sent out to these islands, there were only thirty-seven clergy within the islands which now constitute the diocese of Barbados. In the year 1825, (the year in which the bishopric was founded,) the thirty-seven had increased to fifty clergy; but at the present time there are no fewer than ninety-nine clergy; one-fourth of whom receive a portion of their maintenance through the medium of this SOCIETY. I may add,—and express at the same time my hope that the period is not far distant, when we may look to the natives of the soil, the legitimate source for supporting and strengthening the Church in those parts,—that of the number of clergy ordained for the service of the diocese one is of the coloured population. Within the last ten years, out of twenty-five churches now existing in the island of Barbados, no less than twenty-two have been built as additional churches, or have been re-erected after the damage they sustained from the late hurricanes. This encouraging disposition on the part of the people to multiply their places of worship, and increase the means of religious instruction, has been met by the prompt liberality of this venerable SOCIETY. Again, the school-houses in the year 1812 were only two in number; in 1825, there were thirty-four; in 1838, the number has increased to between four and five hundred; forty of which are maintained by means of this SOCIETY. In Jamaica, the number of clergy is seventy-four, fifteen of whom are in whole or in part supported by this SOCIETY; the number of schoolmasters paid by the SOCIETY is twenty-nine, with subordinate teachers; and the demands upon the SOCIETY, to meet the increased call for religious instruction, are to a large amount. For Barbados the SOCIETY has advanced, in aid of building churches, not less than between six and seven thousand pounds within the last few years, besides further payments for the erection of school-houses to the amount of nine thousand pounds. I might multiply these details to an almost unlimited extent, but enough perhaps has been already stated to prove at once the usefulness of this SOCIETY, and its readiness to give its aid, within the wide sphere of its labours, to the extent of its ability. I might refer to the testimony of Mr. Latrobe, and to the Report of that gentleman, lately laid before Parliament, on the state of schools within the West Indian islands. That Report is of a character peculiarly calculated to give satisfaction to the friends of the SOCIETY. It is the testimony of one who is not in connexion with the SOCIETY, of one not looking with a hasty and superficial view upon its operations; of one not regarding the SOCIETY with any peculiar favour. It is the testimony of one who was unbiassed, who states things as he found them, after personal inspection; who has no interest in representing them either better or worse than they really are, and who was sent out for the purpose of making this strict and searching scrutiny by the State, and not by the SOCIETY. What then is it that remains for us to do, in this encouraging state of things? we are called to labour with increasing energy for the relief of the spiritual destitution of our colonies. We are called upon to commend the subject to the kind sympathies of all the members of the Christian Church. We are called upon to concentrate our means, and to act with vigour and unity in our operations, in bringing the objects we have in view fearlessly and honestly before the public. It is by unity alone that we can become effective in spreading the doctrines of our blessed Lord; in carrying out the spirit of his Gospel, and the knowledge of his salvation; and in obtaining eventually yet more glorious triumphs over the enemies of Christ's Church! But this unity must be a real, vital, and scriptural unity; not the unity of opinion, in the bond of ignorance,—not the unity of profession in the bond of hypocrisy,—but the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. In the full exercise of this unity, I trust that this SOCIETY, under God, may be permitted to carry out its designs to completion.

The Rev. C. BENSON.—I need scarcely remind this Meeting that the SOCIETY which we are now met to uphold is truly Christian and benevolent in its nature; and I believe I may say that no society, having these two characteristics impressed upon it, ever came before a British public, and appealed in vain. I am satisfied, therefore, that ours will not be a vain appeal on the present occasion. When I look back to the many societies that have held meetings during the present spring, and to the reports that have been made, I find that in every case where the objects of the society were Christian and benevolent, the funds have increased rather than diminished during the last year: it would then I think be a shame, indeed, for the members of the Church of England to allow a Society so connected with that Establishment as is the SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL IN FOREIGN PARTS, to remain an exception to the general rule, and that we should find others not having equal claims receiving a greater share of public patronage. I would especially impress upon the attention of this Meeting, that at the very time when the calls upon the SOCIETY are increasing, its means and its powers have been diminished: we have, on the one hand, the emancipated negroes, while, on the other, we have to provide for the spiritual welfare of those tides of emigration which are constantly flowing from this country to our colonies—for all these it is our duty to furnish Christian instruction—for it is Christian instruction alone that teaches men to abstain from the works of sin, and brings them to practise virtue, and submit to those whom God has placed in authority over them. It is the deplorable state of darkness in which so many thousands of our fellow-men are now placed in our various colonies, that must plead our excuse for the increased expense which the SOCIETY has incurred, and which renders it necessary to make this appeal. At this very time, when the calls upon us are so urgent, 16,000*l.* a year has been taken from our funds; and where are we to look to supply this deficiency? I should hope that there is still a power of repentance, and that the Government, who have taken it from us, may yet turn and give it us back; but if not, suppose they plead, what perhaps they may justly do, the state of the revenues of the country, where then are we to look? I say the Government have still the means of assisting us very materially, without touching the public revenues; and if they have the power, it is surely their duty to exercise it. I will tell the Government how they might assist us. In almost all our colonies there are large tracts of lands still unappropriated, of which they are continually making grants, and extensive grants, to persons for the purpose of colonization. Now where would be the hardship, and where the difficulty, of making reserves of those lands for the support of the clergy, in the same manner as the clergy reserves were formed in Canada? Would that increase the expenses of the nation, or place the Chancellor of the Exchequer in any difficulty? No; but it would materially assist the objects of this SOCIETY, viz. the propagation of the Gospel, and the extension of the Christian religion. I am aware that the Government plead that they lie under this difficulty—that they are constantly applied to for assistance by many sects of Christians, all having the same object in view. But the answer to such a plea is obvious, it is the duty of the Government to select one religion only as that which the State should support; for if they, or any government, go on giving equal encouragement to all classes and all sects of Christians, they will give the greatest inducement to disunion in the Church. They are bound to select one religion, one form of Christianity, as that which is essential to the well-being of mankind here, and to their eternal welfare hereafter, and that has a right to demand the undivided countenance and assistance of the State. I say then, looking at the circumstances in which this country is placed—seeing that the royal authority is vested in the hands of a member of the Church of England—seeing that the members of the Government are themselves members of that Church—they surely can have but one choice to make; and if they make that choice, they must aid this SOCIETY, by extending its usefulness,—that is, its means of diffusing the Gospel of Christ to all parts of the world. Whether this will be done or not by the Government, I cannot pretend to say; but in the mean time, I would impress on those who now hear me, that we also have a duty to perform. It is our duty to endeavour to supply, as far as possible, the deficiency that has been already created; and also, as far as we can, to give the SOCIETY the means of meeting the growing spiritual wants of the colonies of this country. The Archbishop of Armagh, who has already addressed you, has alluded to the position in which this country appeared in past times. It was distinguished above all the nations of the earth, as the great instrument which God has chosen for promoting the Protestant faith throughout the world. It has the same powers and the same means now; God has blessed us with wealth, with power, with religion, and with every blessing which a nation can enjoy—but what do we do? We send out to our colonies a large portion of our superabundant population, and we refuse to send with them any part of our superabundant wealth to provide for their spiritual welfare. We admit the duty of providing the colonists with the means of civil government, and shall we take from them the means of religious instruction? I hope not; I trust not; but that in sending forth its people to the distant parts of the earth, England will show some anxiety to provide for them the blessings of Christian instruction. On these grounds, I would appeal to all who are here assembled to support this SOCIETY by every means in their power. I assure them that their assistance is required. The usefulness of the SOCIETY has not been diminished because of its restricted means. On the contrary, at the very time when the Government withdrew that assistance which had been so long afforded, its operations were extended, and this was done in the confident hope, that even if the Government should continue to withhold their support, the people of England would not leave the SOCIETY to itself; and that knowing its object to be to afford to their fellow-men Christian instruction in the faith of the Church of England, they would not permit us to appeal in vain for their assistance.

The LORD BISHOP OF LINCOLN.—I have now to submit to the adoption of this Meeting the following Resolution:—"That the promising condition of Bishop's College, Calcutta, especially as relates to the class of native students now under education within its walls; the gathering together of native Christian congregations in the neighbourhood of the Presidency, and the rapid improvement of the native Churches in Southern India; furnish the strongest motives for perseverance and for sincere gratitude to Him by whose mercy alone can the great work of the propagation of the Gospel in the East be accomplished."

About fifteen years ago, at a meeting, not of this, but of a sister Society, which then had the charge of the East Indian Mission, I expressed an opinion that causes appeared to be in operation tending to the entire subversion of the dominion of idolatry in India; and it was most gratifying to me when my attention was called to the last printed Report of the Society, to find that the appearances on which I had formed that opinion, were not illusory. In that Report it is said, "A great change is gradually taking place in the minds of the natives, which promises to prepare the way for the downfall of idolatry, and for the propagation of the Gospel. We must not expect that the natives will speedily abandon their superstitions, or that the knowledge of the Gospel will rapidly proceed there; but that it will go on steadily and surely, the framers of this Report entertain no doubt." It is stated also, and most painful it must be either to make that statement, or to read it, "that one grand obstacle to the progress of the Gospel in the East Indies, has been the line of policy adopted by those who have been entrusted with the administration of the government there; a line of policy, which, while it protected and encouraged idolatry, discouraged the Christian converts, and exposed them to injury and insult;" but in the course of the present week, in answer to certain remarks made in the House of Lords by a Right Reverend Prelate (the Bishop of London), the noble Viscount at the head of Her Majesty's Government said, that this matter was under the serious consideration of the Government. And can we for a moment doubt what will be the result of that "serious consideration?" Can we doubt that it will be other than the complete removal of those obstacles of which we now complain? Can we doubt that the reigning power in India will henceforth be induced to adopt a more enlightened and more Christian course of policy? Can we doubt that those fears by which their minds have hitherto been haunted, of dangers likely to arise to the stability of the British empire in India, from endeavours to diffuse the Gospel, will be dispelled, or at least that the disgrace that now attaches to the national character,—the disgrace of converting the superstitions of the natives into a source of revenue to the Government, thus giving a direct sanction to the practice of idolatry,—will be removed? It is gratifying to me to say, that I may calculate from the Report to which I have alluded, that one improvement, at least, has taken place in the policy of the ruling powers in India. It appears that formerly the restriction upon education in India was not confined to the communication of religious knowledge only, but extended to the communication of all European knowledge whatever. This latter barrier has at length been happily displaced. It appears that now the study of the English language is encouraged in that country; and we cannot doubt that the most beneficial results must arise as to the progress of the Gospel in that part of the world; and we may indulge in a confident hope, to use the words of the Report, that the English language may become the means of conveying the truths of religion and philosophy to the natives of India, as was the Latin language the means of communicating those blessings to our own forefathers.

I will proceed at once to advert to those points which are more especially mentioned in the Resolution which I have the honour to submit for your consideration—"the promising condition of Bishop's College, Calcutta, especially as relates to the class of native students now under education within its walls." We have heard in the Report that has been read, the communications that have been made by the Bishop of Calcutta on all these points—on the steady progress of the Gospel under the auspices of those Missionaries who have been educated in Bishop's College, on the importance to be attached to the formation of a class of native students. And this cannot be better expressed than in the words of that bishop, who says, "that Christianity will not be introduced into India until such a body of Missionaries shall exist." The education of such persons, then, must be a subject of congratulation to all Christians; but no human satisfaction is without its alloy; and while we contemplate with pleasure the flourishing condition of Bishop's College at Calcutta, we cannot but lament the loss of the services of Principal Mill, who has been compelled to resign his office in consequence of the shattered state of his health. I hold in my hand the addresses that were presented to him on his embarkation. I will not detain the Meeting by reading them, and to read extracts from them would not do justice to the subject; for it is only by reading the whole that we can duly estimate the value of the labours of that truly Christian and highly talented man—the difficulties he has overcome, the good he has effected, and the gratitude that is due to him, not from that institution only, but from all persons who have the propagation of the Gospel in India at heart. I hope these addresses will be read universally; and I know that all who do read them will join with me in fervent prayer to the throne of Divine Mercy, that the return of Dr. Mill to England may be speedily followed by the restoration of his health, and that he may be long spared to witness the prosperity of that institution which has been brought to its present state by his fostering care.

The Rev. C. W. LE BAR.—My Lord Archbishop, for twenty-five years have I been connected with the East India College; an institution which, I would gladly hope, has contributed to elevate the British name and character in India. I have always regarded it as, in one sense, a Missionary College. For, although it sends forth no preachers of the Gospel, still its object has ever been to send forth men who, by their lives, might do the work of evangelists, and appear as ambassadors of Christ, and as servants of the living God. My long connexion with that institution has raised, in my mind, one predominant feeling. The question has, at all times, presented itself to me—what could have been the purpose of Divine Providence in placing within our grasp the sceptre of that gigantic empire? Surely it never can have been for our own righteousness, or to gratify our lust of dominion, or our passion for renown. Was it not rather that we should be the instruments, the agents, and, if I may so speak, the fellow-workers of the living God in spreading the knowledge of his name throughout that vast extent of country? This being so, it seems to follow—and the conclusion will be familiar to all who hear me—that the State and the Church of England neglect their duty and abandon their high privilege, when they cease to execute the missionary office throughout not only all those regions of the East, but in all places where British dominion extends. The Church of England is by far the most efficient and legitimate of all Missionary Societies, when she discharges that duty to the best of her ability; and when, with heart and purse, she is aided and supported by those who embrace her doctrines. It was in this spirit, and under this view, that the subject was considered by an honoured and revered friend of mine, whose confidence it was my happiness to enjoy. It was in this view that Bishop Middleton went forth to lay the foundation of that Missionary College which is now calling for your support. I well remember it so happened, that though not the first, I was one of the first, to whom he communicated that project. I well remember how he described himself as musing on the banks of the Ganges when the College floated but in vision before his eyes; and how he looked forward to the time when the air-built fabric of his imagination should gather substance, and stand before the world, a monument of Christian zeal and piety. We have seen the result—we have heard it read;—we find in the document before the Society, that, in the opinion of the present successor of Bishop Middleton, those views have been realized; and that the institution stands forth as a tangible monument of the piety and perseverance of that excellent and zealous servant of Christ. It is, however, but just to say, that the suggestions of Bishop Middleton have been furthered in a great degree, and that the present solidity of the institution is due much to that distinguished scholar (Dr. Mill), who undertook to nurture it in its infancy, and who, by his indefatigable exertions, has brought it on to its present state of prosperity. And the prospects thus opening before us lead, naturally, to an animating contrast between the present state of our hopes, and the despair which seemed to overshadow us in former days. I have been recently engaged in reading a work that has, I have no doubt, attracted the attention of almost all whom I have now the honour of addressing; I mean the biography of one who was known to the world as the advocate-general of suffering humanity, William Wilberforce; and I happened to turn to a page which speaks of his labours with reference to the spiritual condition of India, and what do I find? He says, "Thirty years ago every third man who thought on the subject, would probably have set up the monstrous fictions of Hindoo superstition against the truths of the Bible, and have considered the religion of the Brahmin as a proper thing to oppose against Christianity; and would have supposed that the progress of the Gospel in the East was a rank absurdity. But, how is it now? Why that Gospel, the whispers of which then could scarcely be heard out of the dust, now sounds trumpet-tongued. The name of Christ was then almost proscribed from the regions of the East; now we have a Life of Christ written in the Sanscrit language. The language of the Brahmin priests is now employed to proclaim the name of the Redeemer." And to whom are we indebted for this glorious change, but to that distinguished scholar to whom Bishop Middleton left the task of maturing what he had so nobly begun? Now we find men are sent to the natives of India, whose labours and whose office it is to inform and instruct, and to give to our exertions in that country an uniform and orderly character. At the period to which I have alluded, the Church of England had scarcely a representative in India. Now she raises her mitred head in the midst of the follies and abominations of heathenism. Here, then, amid much that is conflicting, much that is painful, we have that which is cheering, and gives hope to our Church. When I speak of the Church, I speak of it in its comprehensive sense; that is, not only of its ministers, but those who profit from their labours. And shall it be said that we trust in the living God to keep those dominions safe for us, and make no sacrifice to show ourselves anxious for his glory, and for the success of his truth? One word more, and I have done. We have all heard with much sorrow, of the withdrawal of the countenance and assistance of the State from these our Missionary labours; but the only useful inference from that circumstance is, that we must fall back on our own resources; and, considering the great object we have in view, I cannot bring myself to believe that those resources will fail. We have heard much of the difficulties of converting the heathen from his idolatry to a knowledge of the true religion; but we know that the light of the Gospel is needful for man; and knowing this, we cannot for a moment suppose that the Maker of man would have sent into the world any race of men incapable of receiving the Gospel. In surveying the march of the Divine dispensations, we may, perhaps, be sometimes tempted to meditate upon the slowness with which the merciful ways of the Lord are made known among men; but this is no theme to speculate upon. We are called upon to remember that we are doing the work of One that inhabits eternity, and with whom one day is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day. Therefore cast your seed on the waters hopefully and liberally; and though it may be there many days, surely it shall be found by us, or by our children. If we sow unsparingly, we shall reap in due time if we faint not: and then only conceive how glorious will be the harvest to be gathered in.

ARCHDEACON ROBINSON.—I should scarcely be justified in intruding upon your Grace's attention, and that of this Meeting, but that I fear silence might be misinterpreted, and I should be unfaithful to the feelings of my heart, and to that office I have had the honour to hold in the Indian Church, and to those sympathies which will continue to animate me to the last hour of my life, if I neglected the opportunity of stating to your Grace, and to this Meeting, some topics which appear to me yet unexplained, and which my peculiar position enables me to touch upon. There are circumstances connected with this Society which peculiarly adapt it to the religious wants of India; above all, its firm and undeviating attachment to the discipline of the Church of England. And there is one fact connected with this part of the subject, which I would beg the Meeting to remark; it is, that in all the various forms by which our common Christianity is propagated, I have at all times found a strong tendency to adopt the Liturgy, and the other forms and usages of the Church of England; this is done by many dissenting congregations in India. The Liturgy of our Church has been translated into most of the dialects of India, and is frequently purchased and adopted in their missionary labours by our dissenting brethren throughout the East. This is an important fact, and proves in the strongest manner that our Church is peculiarly adapted to meet the spiritual wants of our fellow-men in that part of the world. I have witnessed the inestimable benefits which this SOCIETY confers; I have seen and I have heard of its force and influence on the minds of the people of India; and I know if ever Christianity triumphs in that country—and it must do so—it will do so—it will be in the faith of our own apostolic Church, and in the blessedness of her communion. There is one point that I am especially anxious to bring to the notice of the Meeting; it is the high and exemplary character of the Missionaries sent out by this SOCIETY, and of the great piety and zeal with which they devote themselves to the work with which they are entrusted; and, I must say, that in this respect great honour is due to those who select them. I speak from long personal intercourse with the Missionaries of our apostolic Church, and from having witnessed the result of their labours. I do not speak this to the prejudice of other Missionaries; I honour and love the Missionaries of all Christian denominations, and I appreciate their labours; but I am bound to say, that the Missionaries connected with this SOCIETY yield to none in the zeal with which they discharge their arduous duties, nor in the success which attends their efforts. It must be most satisfactory to you, my Lord, to know that the bounty of the SOCIETY is not misapplied, and that the holy religion of our Divine Master goes forth with truth and energy from those whom you send out to minister it.

There are in Southern India millions who have not even heard the word of Christ, but there are also thousands and tens of thousands who are now members of Christ's Church, who are in communion with the Churches and educated in the Schools of this SOCIETY; there are in South India thousands of Christian brethren who for the last century have looked to these shores for help. They have not looked in vain. There are the Churches which were first planted by the labours of Zeigenbalg and Schwartz, and which are now looking to you for the full meridian splendour of that glorious day, whose dawn they have already witnessed; and I know they will not look to you in vain. When I first visited that Church the people flocked around me; they brought me petitions upon petitions, not for temporal assistance, but I was loaded with their petitions for spiritual aid. They implored me to plead their cause with you, and to pray you to come forward to relieve their spiritual destitution. From that time till now I have longed to meet such an assembly as I have now the honour to address; and I entreat you, I implore you, as I then promised that I would—you, the nobility, the clergy, the laity, each in your several stations,—I implore, I entreat you in the name of the thousands of your Christian brethren in India, to stretch forth a more abundant aid, a more open hand, and a still wider policy towards them. Do that which has not yet been done; lay a firm and permanent foundation of our Church in India. The wisdom of the Divine counsels alone can work with full and complete efficiency; but we are bound to fill up the deficiencies of past years of experiment and trial, by wiser counsels and more vigorous efforts. We are bound to do that which experience has taught us to be the most successful course, viz., to educate from among the people themselves their future teachers. That is the principle upon which we go; to imitate as far as we can in our limited capacities the wisdom as well as the bounty of Providence, in all its great achievements, for the benefit of mankind. There are, in Southern India, eleven or twelve principal stations; among these are many churches, some surrounded by persecuting heathens; all depend on you, all look to you for support. I have visited the villages of almost all of them; I have seen their destitution; and I have heard the cry they raise for aid. I would that cry could reach the ears and the hearts of all before me. I have visited the different fields of our missionary exertions; I have seen there the inhabitants debased in morality, and without the means of spiritual instruction, for the want of sufficient means of extending these missionary truths; but let it be known that five additional Missionaries were sent out by the SOCIETY last year to Madras alone, to supply the religious wants there. It was there, where the love of God and of the Saviour is now felt by thousands, that the last days of the lamented Heber were passed; the anxious care of whose life was the eternal welfare of that people. He grieved deeply for their neglected condition; he grieved for the want of power to aid and succour them; it was there that he breathed out his last prayer, and within but a few moments of his death, his words to me were, "The destitution of these Missions breaks my heart." In a few moments that noble heart was still for ever. Its last throb was for the welfare of those Missions and the prosperity of this SOCIETY. You will pardon me for dwelling on these reminiscences; but I cannot avoid it. They belong to the dearest and best moments of my life. They consecrate the interests of this SOCIETY to my affections as well as to my judgment, and bind it on my regard by the ties of memory no less than by those of hope. What then is the boon I crave for Southern India? I ask you only to nourish the children which God has given to you; to see that they do not want the bread of heaven, which can be administered by your hands. But do you inquire what are the further prospects and capabilities of the SOCIETY? They are to be measured by the length and breadth, not of India alone, but of the habitable world. Such is your field of labour; but the strength by which you are sustained, and the motives by which you are encouraged in this holy enterprise, are more than adequate—no less than the length and breadth and depth and height of that love which passeth knowledge.

MR. JUSTICE COLERIDGE.—My Lord Archbishop, the motion I have to submit to your Grace, and to this Meeting, is the following:—"That it is the opinion of this Meeting, that the success of the SOCIETY's endeavours to send out Chaplains to Australia, the recent applications from the Bishop of the Diocese for more assistance, and the large sums raised within the colonies of New South Wales and Van Diemen's Land for the building of Churches and the maintenance of Clergymen, should determine the SOCIETY to shrink from no exertion tending to counteract the numerous evils which have arisen from the neglected state of the convict population." You see from the resolution, that the state of Australia and of the convict population there, is submitted especially to your notice. You must be aware how extremely painful it is to me, and to those who hold situations similar to mine, to send from the country of their birth, men, women, and children, sometimes of tender years, to that unhappy colony. You have been asked to-day if you have a right to legislate in favour of emigration, while you do not provide for the spiritual support of those whom you encourage to try their fortunes in a distant land; and we might be tempted to ask—and it is a consideration that will come home to us—can we calmly and cheerfully send persons abroad to those penal colonies, changing imprisonment in this country for banishment in another, where they are deprived of all religious consolation?—can we send those who have committed offences, not of so deep a character as to make their reformation hopeless—can we send them to a colony where they will have none of that careful religious attention to which every inmate of a prison is by the law of this country entitled, and which by its practice he always receives?—can we justify ourselves in sending them to a country possessing every disadvantage, and the inhabitants of which are little short of heathens? In a recent report of the Australian Society connected with this institution, I find, in a statement made by the Bishop, an account of his labours in visiting the various parts of his diocese. He says, he saw "large bodies of your fellow-countrymen, just victims to your penal laws, but whom you have sent from a Christian land, from a country where it was in the power of every man to receive, from some Clergyman or other, some amount of religious instruction, some spiritual food and assistance." I read in that account, which, we may be sure, is no exaggeration, the following statement, which I will take the liberty of presenting to you:—"I found them living in a state of concubinage, frequently promiscuous; without books, or means of instruction of any sort; the Sabbath neglected; children growing up without baptism, and almost unacquainted with the name of their Creator."—"These persons, judging from the accounts I have received, are placed in a situation as dreadful as that of any race of heathens in the world." Such is the language in which Bishop Broughton describes parts of his own diocese. Need I then say, that this is a case that presses on this country as a crying and manifest evil? It is well known, that in any gaol in this country there is as ample religious assistance provided by the law, and enforced by the magistracy, and acted upon by the Chaplains, as there can be in any place in the kingdom. A man is brought up to the bar of justice, wicked and ignorant, but perhaps not hardened in crime; he has committed an offence for which he is liable to be imprisoned or transported; we cannot imprison all, therefore we must resort to transportation; we send him to our penal colonies, because we have not the means of keeping him at home; and have we a right, or has the country the right thus to change the mode of imprisonment—for that is, in fact, what it is—and to send criminals to a place of which a Christian Bishop could give such a description as you have just heard? For a temporal crime we have a right only to inflict a temporal punishment; and it is our duty to take especial care that no incidental consequence shall result to the person on whom we inflict the punishment beyond that which he is, by its terms, condemned to suffer. Yet in this most essential, this most important point, we have transported convicts to a condition which no Christian can contemplate without pain. I pass by, for time will not permit me now to go into them, the religious wants of the other colonies; but I must say, that the colony of Australia stands in a peculiar position. All colonists going out from this country, labour under some disadvantages; they go out under considerable difficulties. They are sometimes persons of doubtful character; and this country has not provided (with shame be it spoken) for their spiritual wants: but the state of the persons you send to Australia is infinitely worse. Thither you send every year thousands of the most depraved of your overflowing population. You do not allow the colony to purge and improve itself, but you continue to send out these masses of corruption, year after year. By a special report which I have seen to-day, I find that from Middlesex alone 900 persons were transported during the last year; and that from the whole of England and Wales, upwards of 4,000 convicts were sent out to Australia, besides a considerable number from Ireland, and, I hope a smaller number, from Scotland. I believe I do not at all over-estimate the fact, when I say that 6,000 persons are sent out to that colony, as transported felons, every year. Now knowing the existence of this state of things, I ask every one who now hears me, whether, without great exertions on our part, we can expect or look for the continuance of those blessings which Divine Providence has hitherto vouchsafed unto us? I say that this state of things can only go on from bad to worse. There is want of Clergy, want of churches, want of schools and of schoolmasters, throughout that colony. These are wants naturally to be expected, but which must be supplied, if we expect to remedy the existing evils. I know that all who have done me the honour to listen to me are convinced of the existence of the evil. The only question then is, how is it to be met? The SOCIETY to which we, I hope all, belong, is anxious to stretch out its hand to the utmost. We have heard to-day that twenty Clergymen are to be sent out to the colony; that eighteen have already gone out; and that the Bishop who has been alluded to has said, that the circumstance of having even the four additional Clergymen that had arrived when he wrote, is likely to prolong his days upon earth. But this SOCIETY cannot proceed without funds. We who are not able from the nature of our occupations, and from various circumstances, to take part in the meetings of the SOCIETY; attending only occasionally, and benefitting by such proceedings as these; we who cannot give so much of our attention, ought to give liberally of that which is in our power to give, and which is so essential to enable the SOCIETY to maintain its usefulness. Every person who is now present is the centre of some little circle of his own; all have friends and acquaintances, among whom they can exert some influence; and we should not, if our intentions are sincere, allow our present feelings to evaporate, but remember what has passed to-day; the subjects which have been presented to our notice; the claims put forth on our Christian charity; and do all in our power to urge these necessities on the attention of all over whom we have the slightest influence.

SIR WILLIAM HEATHCOTE.—My Lord Archbishop, I have been called upon to recommend to the notice of your Grace, and of this Meeting, the resolution which the learned Judge who has just addressed you has read. I think that if there is any country towards which our anxiety ought to be more especially directed, it is the convict colony to which this resolution refers. Seeing that this population is placed in a vast continent, increasing daily in its resources of all kinds, and that we must look forward to the day which sooner or later will arrive, when that continent will not be a dependent colony, but a mighty empire; surely all those who think on these matters must perceive the importance as well as the difficulty of providing that when that day does arrive, it shall find the inhabitants of Australasia so far advanced in civilization, morals, and religion, as to be able to conduct their government on principles worthy of a Christian nation. I will not presume, after all that has been said by those who have gone before me, to offer a word as to the general objects of this SOCIETY, on which I hope we are all agreed. I will conclude by pressing most earnestly to your notice and adoption, the resolution which has been read.

The Rev. Dr. Hook proposed the following resolution:—"That to defray the cost of the extensive designs announced in the foregoing resolutions, it is the opinion of this Meeting that Public Meetings should be held in all large towns for the purpose of increasing the number of Subscribers and other contributors to the SOCIETY, and more especially for forming additional District and Parochial Committees in every part of the kingdom, and for stimulating the exertions of those already established."

SIR THOMAS DYKE ACLAND, M.P.—The resolution which has now been submitted to you is of a peculiar nature; and I think I shall best perform the duty of seconding it by viewing it in its practical light, and of urging it upon those whom, like me, Providence has thrown among the distant towns and villages of this kingdom, and to state my firm attachment to the SOCIETY, and my determination to support its objects by every means in my power. But allow me to say, that if you would have the pulse beat well at the extremities, it must first do so at the heart. At this time, and under all the circumstances that have been pressed on your attention, what person can doubt that a more than ordinary duty is required from members of the Church of England, to use their best exertions to respond to those calls, and to forward the noble objects we all have in view. Now, London is the heart of England: set us the example, and we will try to compete with it. Still, before the time arrives when the agents of the SOCIETY shall go through the length and breadth of the land, stimulating old societies, and forming new, place in their hands large and liberal statements of what you have done here, and I will answer for it that the extremities of the land will not be backward in the good work.

MR. JUSTICE PATTERSON.—One duty yet remains to be performed. One debt of gratitude, which I am glad it has fallen to me to bring under your notice; I mean the thanks of this Meeting to the most Rev. Archbishop for his presence here to-day. I will not enlarge before him on the uniform and earnest attention which he at all times evinces to the affairs of this SOCIETY; and not only to this, but of all societies having for their object the spreading of the word of God; although I know if I were to do so, I should carry with me the feelings, not only of every person who now hears me, but of all who have the honour and the pleasure to know him, either in his public or private character. We all know the zeal and readiness with which he attends on all of these occasions, and with which he devotes himself to the duties he undertakes; we know also the zealous care with which he governs that Church over which he presides, so that it has lost none of its influence, but I believe that it is daily increasing in its numbers and influence under his superintendence. At the same time that he has by his mild but firm conduct, not only not offended, but so conciliated those who differ from that Church and its doctrines, that they speak of him at all times with the highest respect. I beg to propose that the thanks of this Meeting be offered to the Archbishop of Canterbury, for his Grace's presence here this day, and for his uniform attention to the affairs of the SOCIETY.

MR. ACLAND.—I am proud to have the honour of seconding this motion, and in doing so I will not offer any observations of my own, other than calling on the Meeting to join with me in discharging the debt of gratitude which is due to his Grace for his able superintendence over this day's proceedings, and to call for their exertions to ensure that success which the Church of England must and will have over all competitors.

THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY.—I beg to return my most sincere and cordial thanks for this mark of your kind respect and attention. I can most truly assure you, that I shall never be wanting in my utmost exertions in promoting the welfare of a SOCIETY, the objects of which involve the best interests of mankind; and I beg to add, that I look on this Meeting with the greater satisfaction and pleasure, because I consider it as the beginning of a great effort that will be made in this country in support of this SOCIETY, to vindicate the national character from the charge of indifference to the preservation of religion in our colonies, and to the conversion of the heathen; as the commencement of a great effort, co-ordinate and corresponding with the extent of our dominions, and of the wealth of the country and of individuals, and with that spirit of Christianity which is at all times remarkable in this country, but which of late years has shown itself in a form beyond former example, and which I believe is still increasing. At this late hour, and after the unexampled display of eloquence we have heard to-day, from the advocates of the SOCIETY, I will trespass on your time only to express my hope that the strong and practical remarks and recommendations of the Hon. Baronet (Sir T. Acland), who has just now addressed you, will meet with the utmost attention; and that those who are present at this meeting, having come up from the country to attend it, will, when they return to their homes, do the utmost in their power to make collections for this SOCIETY, through the means of public meetings, and of district and parochial associations. In this way will the nation at large be enabled to pour in their numerous contributions, which, though small in themselves, collectively may form an immense sum, and may be applied in such a way as to carry out those purposes which we cannot doubt, Divine Providence had in view when He bestowed on this country so large an extent of empire in all parts of the world. I beg again to return you my most hearty thanks.

His Grace then retired, and the Meeting broke up.

(From a Jamaica Paper.)

The apprentices on the estates in this island, belonging to the Honourable Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, were set free on Wednesday, the 30th April, by the two local representatives, the Lord Bishop, and Thomas King, Esq., the agricultural attorney. His Lordship read to the people the Governor's proclamation, and addressed them on various subjects in connexion with their new state, after which an agreement to the following effect was entered into between the parties:—

After reading and explaining the agreement, the Bishop mentioned to the people the different rates of wages, varying according to the nature or efficiency of the labour, which they would receive as free labourers, whether in money, or, as in the case of the cottagers, in houses or extra allotments of land. They were also given to understand that whilst they laboured for the estate, their houses and grounds would be continued to them, and medical attendance provided free of expense. His Lordship then concluded by expressing his confidence in the people, that he should be able on Tuesday to stand up in his place in Council, and say of them, that they had behaved well under this great change.

SYNOPSIS OF THE SOCIETY.

Object.—The salvation of souls, with a single eye to the glory of God, and in humble dependence on His blessing, by granting aid towards maintaining faithful and devoted men to assist the Incumbents of parishes in their pastoral charge.

Principles.—That in a Christian land a Church established should adequately provide for the spiritual instruction of all the people; and that it is part of the duty of a Christian legislature to furnish the Church with means to this end; but that, if the legislature should fail of this duty, then, rather than souls should perish, Christian men must join together to supply the deficiency, and make the Church as effective as it is in their power to do.

Plan.—The Church Pastoral Aid Society adheres strictly to the wants of the Church on the one hand, and the order of the Church on the other. It would make the Church efficient; it would carry the Gospel, by means of the Church, to every man's door, but it never obtrudes its aid; the Incumbent must apply for aid, or sanction the application; and till this is done, the SOCIETY cannot move. When aid is sought and granted, the Parochial Minister must say how it is to be employed;—he must nominate the persons to be employed;—he must engage them, as well as superintend and entirely control them; all that the SOCIETY does is to provide for their remuneration; and while so doing, to ask satisfactory proof of their qualifications.

Operations.—The SOCIETY up to the present time has voted grants to 146 Incumbents of parishes and districts, having an aggregate population of 1,156,000 souls, in whose spiritual care, before the aid of the SOCIETY, only 147 Ministers were employed; the Incumbents having on an average a charge of about 8,000 souls each, with an average income of only 165*l.* a year each, and 76 of them being without Glebe-house or Parsonage. The grants of the SOCIETY provide for an addition of 137 Clergymen, and 24 Lay-Assistants. By the express terms on which the SOCIETY's aid is given, the Lay-Assistant is simply to be employed as a District-Visitor, Tract Distributor, and Scripture Reader, and by no means as a public instructor or preacher.

Extracts from the Report to the Third Annual Meeting, May, 1838.

It is with no ordinary cause for thankfulness to God, and with no small degree of satisfaction to their own minds, that the Committee of the CHURCH PASTORAL-AID SOCIETY have addressed themselves to the duty of preparing this their third Report. The proceedings of the past year may not, indeed, present any facts more remarkable than those adduced on former occasions, in proof of the wants of the Church and of the country, or in illustration of the benefits likely to result, under the Divine favour, from such an institution. But that which gives the Committee confidence in again meeting the members of the SOCIETY is, the persuasion which they have that the account now to be rendered will only tend to strengthen in every mind the belief, that this scheme of Christian benevolence, so imperatively called for by the circumstances of our times, was not attempted, nor has been prosecuted hitherto, but with the guidance and blessing of Almighty God.

In reference to the SOCIETY'S finances, the Committee have a gratifying statement to make of progressive increase. The amount received during the year ending at March 31, 1838, was £8001. 1s. 10d. But with the constantly increasing demands upon their funds, the Committee feel that they must earnestly entreat their friends to form local associations in their respective neighbourhoods, for the purpose of enlisting a larger number of annual contributors in support of the SOCIETY; and whatever information may be necessary for this end, by supplies of the Occasional Papers, and other publications, they will most gladly furnish. Especially do the Committee venture to solicit from the clergy, in their pastoral office, an advocacy of the claims of the SOCIETY with their parishioners and congregations, feeling, as they do, that, from the peculiar character of this institution, its cause is one which can never be more fully or effectively presented to the members of the Church of England, than by her own ministers, in the midst of their own people.

The most numerous class of cases which the SOCIETY is relieving is, as might be expected, that in which clergymen stand charged with the pastoral care of large populations; and being unable, from their own resources, to provide for an adequate performance of the duties of their ministry, avail themselves of the SOCIETY'S assistance in engaging additional clergymen to share their labours with them. The grants of the SOCIETY for this purpose are in number 118.

I. In the last Occasional Paper, the second of the cases there specified as assisted, was one of peculiar and painful interest. The parish is in Staffordshire, and contains a population of 8000 souls. The clergyman aided writes as follows:—

"Allow me to make a few observations on the advantages which we have derived from the grant. I believe that, in my application for it, I described the extraordinary difficulties in the proper discharge of the ministerial duties of this parish; that it extended over 22,000 acres of land,—that it had many populous hamlets scattered over it, of from one to five miles and a half from the parish church,—that in these hamlets, for many years, I had cottage lectures almost every night in the week; this being the only means I had, in consequence of the extreme distance from the church, and want of accommodation in it, of bringing the Gospel to the ears and hearts of my people; and that, in consequence of the great want of church-accommodation, especially for the poor, I volunteered a Sunday evening lecture in the church, in addition to the morning and afternoon services. Though, under the blessing of God, I sustained these services for many years, my health at length gave way, and I was compelled to relinquish my cottage lectures, one after another, and also abridge my exertions in other particulars of my ministerial duties. In this situation, and having a young family entirely dependent on me, consequently being unable to pay a curate, and besides, having been ordained to this charge, and spent all my ministerial life in this parish, and, of course, deeply and feelingly interwoven into, not only the spiritual, but also the temporal interests of the people, and quite unwilling to make up my mind, under any considerations regarding myself, to leave them, I applied to your SOCIETY for help, which was kindly given; and by the assistance of your grant I have sincere pleasure in informing you that I soon recovered my strength, and renewed all my cottage lectures, and also commenced another, in a very populous hamlet; and, from my curate's incessant application to the schools, they have increased since he came, I may safely say, one half. We are now in the midst of Lent-lectures in the church every Wednesday night, which was never before attempted; and the most important and painful of all duties, the visiting of the sick and dying, has been more satisfactorily performed, and many anxious and inquiring souls, now in eternity, have been instructed and comforted in their last moments, by means of your grant. In behalf, then, of the parish and myself, I beg most cordially to thank you for the kind assistance you have given us."

II. The minister of a manufacturing district in Lancashire writes:—

"It is little more than six months since the assistant provided me by the SOCIETY entered upon his ministerial labours, yet I have great satisfaction in stating my belief that much has been done in a short time. We have a considerable increase in the number of attendants on public worship; and have recently had many applications for sittings at the church, which we have been unable to accommodate. I am thankful, however, to inform you, that a new church, it is expected, will be completed in the course of the ensuing autumn. Our communicants have increased from between 30 and 40 to upwards of 90."

III. Another clergyman, in Yorkshire, having charge of 7000 souls, states, that "The increased services are, in many parts of the district, very acceptable, and well attended; and, I believe, by persons anxious to be benefitted by the means of grace thus afforded. We have now three full services in this church, and two in schools at the distance of a mile from the church, every Lord's-day, and three regular weekly lectures, besides daily visiting. Still the darkness of the most gross ignorance greatly prevails; and vice and immorality, especially in the shape of drunkenness, is appalling. We hope much good will result to a future generation from our schools. There are about 550 children receiving Sabbath-school instruction, and about 300 are taught daily. I hope our next year's remittance of subscriptions will prove that a strong feeling of gratitude has been excited."

IV. The incumbent of a parish in Cheshire, containing 9000 souls, writes thus:—

"On my own behalf, and that of my parishioners generally, I beg leave to tender my best thanks to your SOCIETY for its very great and very welcome assistance. I feel confident that your grant has not been in vain; and that, in an increasing attachment to the Established Church, and, which is far better, to the hopes, promises, and practices of the Gospel, among the people. The most satisfactory, I may say plentiful fruits, have been reaped here, in consequence of your assistance. The numbers in our Sunday lecture-room were taken a fortnight since, not by order, but merely through curiosity, and they were found to be 604, and this in a congregation not the most numerous which has been seen in the room; so that this may be considered about the average of persons from all classes, though chiefly the poorest, and also chiefly adults, who meet us to hear the word of God preached at an unwonted hour, and an extra and unusual service. Where these 600 persons would otherwise be at that hour but for this lecture, we cannot say. Besides this lecture, we have another in the country, upon the Sundays, also fully attended, and three during the week. In short, as the incumbent of the parish, and responsible for its spiritual state, I feel thankful that I can regard the progress of religion amongst those committed to me with so much satisfaction. Our gratitude to the SOCIETY we hope to evince in a more substantial way than in mere verbal thanks."

V. From the minister of a parish in Yorkshire, to whom, but a short time since, a grant was made, the following gratifying fact, among other particulars, has been reported:—

"The additional service on Sundays provided for by your vote, has been beneficial in exciting a desire, with several influential people, to have a church built in the place:—land has been given, and a very considerable sum has been promised towards the undertaking."

And this, the Committee would remark, is becoming, they trust, no unusual result of this SOCIETY'S operations. An increase of the means of grace begets an increase of demand for the benefits of church ordinances and pastoral instruction; and they are persuaded, from accounts they receive from all quarters, that if only the Church of England be now supplied with adequate means and faithful ministers for the extension of her services, an abundant harvest of good to men, and glory to God, will speedily ensue. May every member of the church be awakened to energetic, self-denying exertion in providing the means, and to still more earnest supplication to the Lord of the harvest that he will raise up able ministers for the gathering in, from every side, such as shall be saved!

In leaving this part of their Report, the Committee must express the mingled feelings of pleasure and of pain, which the contemplation of such cases as those to which they have been adverting awakens in their minds. They are the cases, it will be remembered, in which from five to fifteen and twenty thousand souls were found nominally under the care of but one pastor, provided by the church. It is, doubtless, a just occasion of much joy to see in such parishes one or two more ministers introduced. Still, how lamentable a disparity remains, in too many instances, between the multitudes to be attended, and the number of their appointed overseers! Instead of one or two additional ministers in these overwhelming populations, twice or thrice that number are required. The Committee would rejoice to see a clergyman provided for every 3000 of the people: and they cannot but think that until some such provision is effected, the Church of England can scarcely be regarded as effectively prepared for the duties incumbent upon her.

But it is not in very densely-peopled districts only that the help of the SOCIETY has been found available; other spheres there are, and of a different character, to which its benefits have been extended. Many of our rural districts exhibit some of the strongest possible claims on Christian piety. Villages and hamlets are to be found without church or school, their inhabitants, by reason of their distant and secluded situation, almost cut off from pastoral supervision, and living in deplorable ignorance of Christian faith and duty.

On behalf of such spots, applications have been made to the SOCIETY; and it has been urged, that places of worship might be provided for them, but the difficulty has been to raise, at least for some few years, the smallest stipend suitable for a resident minister. This deficiency the "PASTORAL-AID SOCIETY" has been solicited, either in whole or in part, to supply. And the Committee now feel much satisfaction in reporting, that the aid requested having been given, churches and chapels, which, without such help, would not have been attempted, are rising; clergymen are stationed in these hitherto-neglected hamlets; congregations are gathering, and most happy consequences, temporal and spiritual, are resulting. In one part of Hampshire, especially, this has taken place.

VII. The following is a statement received from a clerical correspondent of the SOCIETY, residing in that part of the country. Alluding particularly to one instance of village destitution, relieved by the SOCIETY, he writes:—

"The details connected with the hamlet are of necessity very brief, as three months only have elapsed since the SOCIETY'S grant became operative; still the dawning moral renovation is of a soul-stirring and cheerful character. The secluded position of this colony had practically severed it from Episcopal communion; the extent of the parish being 24 miles in circumference, with a diameter of ten miles, and this hamlet being five miles distant from the church, with a population of 1000 souls. In January last, Divine service was commenced in a school-room, and nothing could have been more gratifying than the progressively-increasing influx of orderly and attentive hearers, from that time to the present. The ministrations of the Curate, maintained by the SOCIETY, are gladly welcomed; the word preached seems to be received with all readiness of mind, and a corresponding desire is manifested to obtain Bibles and Prayer-books, kindly presented by the 'Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge.' Those who are locally connected with this population have, indeed, great reason to thank the Lord for his goodness, who, through the instrumentality of the SOCIETY, is 'making the wilderness a standing water, and water-springs of a dry-ground.' The hand of man, under the guidance and blessing of God, has in a few short months created a garden in the wilderness. The erection of a chapel to cor-tain 380 persons has been commenced, and will be ready for service by September next."

The Committee are happy in being able to record, that no less than six chapels have been raised in this one locality, in connexion with grants from the SOCIETY, and that there are other similar cases.

In addition to these statements, showing the effects of increased ministerial services in various places, by the SOCIETY's aid, the Committee will make but one or two extracts from the correspondence of those clergymen who have been enabled to engage lay-helpers to assist them in their parishes. The number of grants for this end is 20, and the Committee are much gratified in being able to report, that in every instance in which the SOCIETY's aid is thus employed, the effects are altogether those which, as Christians and as Churchmen, they would desire.

VIII. The Incumbent of a parish in Norfolk writes:—

"The industry, zeal, and discretion of my Lay-Assistant continue to give me great satisfaction. I found his services very useful during the late winter. I am better acquainted with the wants and character of the poor than I could be without his aid. He is daily engaged in leaving tracts and books, reading to the sick and aged, and conversing with the ignorant and thoughtless. I believe that much profitable instruction has by these means been communicated, and many of the poor, through the assistance of God the Holy Spirit, have been strengthened in the faith and practice of Christians."

IX. The Minister of a District Church, in one of the large towns of Lancashire, who has employed a graduate of one of our Universities, as his Lay-Assistant, states, that he "Has been instrumental in effecting a change of considerable importance throughout that portion of the district wherein his visiting chiefly lies. He is very acceptable to the poor, and has gained considerable influence over them. There is a growing spirit of inquiry manifestly pervading my people, while the free sittings in my church are more fully and regularly attended, and many who had neither a Bible nor a Prayer-book have been provided with them. Exclusive of our Sunday services, I have now seven stations for Cottage Lectures, a Thursday evening lecture in our Sunday-school, a Teacher's Bible-class every Wednesday evening, a juvenile catechetical class every Thursday afternoon, and my Lay-Assistant is on the eve of organizing an adult class of the working people. By these means we are endeavouring to evangelize the deeply destitute district; but when compared with our 20,000 population, I am constrained to cry out, What are they among so many!"

These extracts, the Committee would observe, just serve to illustrate the views of the SOCIETY, as to the proper sphere of duty assignable to Lay-Assistants, being employed in accordance with the SOCIETY's regulations, as the visitors of families, and by no means as public instructors.

X. Thus, another clergyman, situated in a manufacturing town in Yorkshire, writes of his Lay-Assistant:—

"Besides visiting the sick, he has been diligently engaged in collecting subscriptions for Bibles, Prayer-books, Testaments and Psalters. He has distributed tracts, and taken an active part in our Church Provident Society. In the prosecution of these two latter departments of his services, he is in the habit of entering the cottages of 60 or 70 poor persons every Monday morning, and of taking this excellent opportunity of exhorting the parents to send their children to our school, and to come themselves to church. Two evenings in the week he gives to the duties of Librarian of a collection of religious books, and, in short, endeavours in all things, and by all means, to do his duty, under my direction and superintendence."

Such, then, are a few, and but a few, of very many facts which the Committee thank God that it is in their power to record, as the first-fruits of his blessing on the SOCIETY's labours; and to these facts they point as the best recompense of past effort, and the strongest encouragement to perseverance in this sacred work which they can receive.

The Committee feel, however, that they must not conclude, without adverting to a subject upon which they have indeed touched in the opening of this Report, but the importance of which is daily becoming more and more urgent, in consequence of the perpetual widening sphere of this SOCIETY's operations. They allude to the formation of local Auxiliaries, as well in the metropolis and large towns, as in other parts of the country.

But while the Committee will endeavour, to the best of their ability, to provide the needful machinery for effectively conducting the SOCIETY's affairs, they must entreat their friends, the clergy especially, in every part of the country, to exert themselves, associating with them all who wish well to so holy a cause, that, by their united effort, permanent provision may be made for maintaining and multiplying the grants of the SOCIETY.

Fresh applications for help are continually occurring; and the Committee trust that the Church will not permit the work begun to cease for want of requisite support.

But they will not yield to this apprehension; they are resolved, by the help of God, still to go forward, and while so many of the laborious clergy of the land are soliciting their aid—while multitudes of their countrymen are craving the blessings of Christian instruction, and Church ordinances—while multitudes, again, are living and dying in utter indifference to spiritual things, because the Church which should have instructed them, has, for lack of means, been compelled to leave them hitherto unwarned and untaught; the Committee are persuaded that Christian men cannot refuse their help, their liberal, self-denying contributions, their combined exertions, and their fervent prayers, in furtherance of a work, the simple object of which is, the saving of souls from death, by an extension of the means of grace, and of the knowledge of God's word, through the ministrations of the Church of the land.

Annexed to the Annual Report is a Tabular Statement of particulars of some cases aided.

A BILL, INTITULED AN ACT FOR THE MORE EFFECTUALLY ENFORCING CHURCH DISCIPLINE.

[Presented by the Lord Chancellor, but withdrawn for the present session.]

WHEREAS the present mode of proceeding in causes for the correction of clerks is attended with great expense, delay, and uncertainty, occasioned as well by the number of courts which now have jurisdiction in such causes as by the multiplicity of appeals allowed by law from the decrees of such courts: And whereas it would tend very materially to diminish the evil aforesaid, and to promote a more uniform, speedy, and effectual administration of justice, if one court were appointed to have exclusive jurisdiction in all such causes, subject to an appeal to Her Majesty in Council: Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, That an Act passed in the first year of the reign of King Henry the Seventh, intituled "An Act for Bishops to punish Priests and other Religious Men for dishonest Lives," shall be and the same is hereby repealed.

II. And be it enacted, That from and after the passing of this Act no ecclesiastical court whatsoever, whether royal, peculiar or otherwise, now possessing any jurisdiction to hear, determine, adjudicate, or pass sentence upon any charge or suit against any spiritual person below the rank or degree of a bishop, for the purpose of procuring any sentence of excommunication, suspension ab officio or ab officio et beneficio, deprivation, deposition, or degradation, or any other spiritual censure, shall possess or exercise any such jurisdiction, save and except the Court of Arches, which Court shall exclusively possess and exercise such jurisdiction in the manner herein-after directed, subject nevertheless to an appeal to Her Majesty in Council, to be referred to the Judicial Committee of Her Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council.

III. And be it enacted, That all such suits now pending in any ecclesiastical court (other than the Court of Arches) shall be and the same are hereby removed and transferred before the Court of Arches; and the same suits, and all suits for the correction of clerks now pending in the Court of Arches, shall there be proceeded in, either according to the law and forms and in the manner heretofore in force and use in the said court, or in the manner directed by this Act with respect to suits hereafter to be instituted, according to the discretion of the judge of the said court; and the decisions of the Court of Arches in such suits may be appealed from and such suits proceeded with before the Judicial Committee of Her Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council as if this Act had not passed.

IV. And be it enacted, That all such suits now pending before the Judicial Committee of Her Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council shall proceed in all respects as if this Act had not passed.

V. And be it enacted, That in all suits to be hereafter instituted in the Court of Arches in pursuance of this Act, the citations and all other processes shall issue, and all the proceedings shall be conducted in the same form and manner as if the suit had been commenced and originated by letters of request from some diocesan or other jurisdiction, and such letters of request had been accepted by the said court, save as such proceedings may be altered by any order or orders of court which may from time to time be issued by the judge of the said Court of Arches to adapt such proceedings more conveniently and summarily to carry into effect the provisions of this Act, and which order or orders such judge is hereby empowered to make and from time to time to rescind or alter, at his discretion; and the order or orders so to be made shall be as valid as if the same had been inserted in this Act.

VI. And be it enacted, That the jurisdiction of the said tribunal and of all its processes shall extend to every part of England and Wales.

VII. And be it enacted, That every such suit shall be commenced within two years after the commission of the offence in respect of which the suit shall be instituted, and not afterwards: Provided always, that whenever any such suit shall be brought in respect of an offence for which a conviction shall have been obtained in any court of common law, such suit may be brought against the person convicted at any time within six months after such conviction, although more than two years shall have elapsed since the commission of the offence in respect of which such suit shall be so brought.

VIII. And be it enacted, That upon the articles of charge in any such suit being allowed by the court as admissible, the defendant shall be required forthwith to give a separate issue to each of such articles, and, within a time to be limited by the judge of the said court, may give in a plea contradicting or explaining the articles, or such part or parts thereof as the defendant may think fit.

IX. And be it enacted, That if the promoter in any such suit desires to contradict any allegation or allegations in the defensive plea, he shall be required to give in such responsive plea forthwith, or within a time to be limited by the judge of the said court.

X. And be it enacted, That when all the several pleas in any such suit shall have been made up, and before any witnesses shall have been examined, but not afterwards, it shall be lawful for the bishop of the diocese to whose authority the defendant may be subject, or, if he is subject to the authority of more than one bishop, for the archbishop of the province, to enter a nolle prosequi in such suit, provided the judge of the said court shall have made such bishop or archbishop a special report that in his judgment the suit is frivolous or vexatious or otherwise improper to be proceeded with; and thereupon all proceedings in such suit shall be stayed; and it shall be lawful for the judge after hearing both parties, to make such order in respect of costs as he shall think fit.

XI. And be it enacted, That when all the several pleas in any such suit shall have been made up, and before witnesses shall have been examined, or afterwards, it shall be lawful for the judge, on motion in open court on behalf either of the promoter of the suit or of the bishop of the diocese to whose authority the defendant may be subject, or, if he is subject to more than one bishop, on behalf of the archbishop of the province, to suspend the defendant from performing any spiritual offices during the pendency of such proceedings; and thereupon it shall be lawful for the bishop of the diocese within which such defendant may be benefited, licensed, or serving, to provide in the meantime for the performing the duties of the cure, by sequestration or otherwise, as in the case of non-residence.

XII. And be it enacted, That witnesses shall not be examined in any such suit until all the several pleas shall have been made up, and then on such parts thereof only as the said judge shall, on motion in open court, direct.

XIII. And be it enacted, That the expenses of cross-examining witnesses shall in the first instance be paid by the party administering the interrogatories, but subject to the decision of the judge on the final question of costs.

XIV. And be it enacted, That when in any such suit a sentence of deprivation shall have passed upon the defendant, it shall be lawful for the said court to direct that the costs of the promoter shall nevertheless be charged upon the benefice of which the defendant shall be deprived by such sentence, and the same shall be accordingly raised out of the profits of such benefice by such instalments and in such manner as the said court shall by its order direct; and for the purpose of raising such costs it shall be lawful for the bishop of the diocese within which such benefice shall be situate to sequester the profits of such benefice.

XV. And be it enacted, That in all such suits there shall be an appeal from the said Court of Arches to Her Majesty in Council, to be referred to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, and to be proceeded in in the same manner as appeals from the said Court of Arches are now proceeded in: Provided always, that there shall be no appeal from any interlocutory decree or order not having the force or effect of a definitive sentence, and thereby ending the suit in that court.

XVI. And be it enacted, That the appellant shall be required to give such security as the said Court of Arches shall think fit for the costs to be incurred by such appeal, and for all other costs previously incurred.

XVII. And be it declared and enacted, That so much of an Act passed in the twenty-seventh year of the reign of His late Majesty King George the Third, intituled "An Act to prevent frivolous and vexatious Suits in Ecclesiastical Courts," as enacts that no suit shall be commenced in any ecclesiastical court for fornication or incontinence after the expiration of eight calendar months from the time when such offence shall have been committed, does not and shall not extend to charges or suits against spiritual persons for fornication or incontinence.

XVIII. And be it enacted, That this Act shall not extend to Scotland or Ireland.

XIX. And be it enacted, That this Act may be repealed or amended or altered by any Act or Acts to be passed in this present session of Parliament.

CHURCH DISCIPLINE BILL.

LORD MELBOURNE moved the order of the day for the third reading of this bill.

The BISHOP OF EXETER rose to oppose the further progress of this bill, which he characterised as one of the heaviest blows ever aimed at the Protestant Church of this country.

The ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY said, the measure had not been framed without consulting the entire bench of bishops, two preliminary meetings had taken place, which were numerously attended. Upon one of those occasions the right rev. prelate had attended, and objected to the bill. There was, he believed, only one other prelate who objected to the bill, upon that occasion, and who did so simply on the ground, that he was satisfied with the working of his own court. He (the Archbishop of Canterbury) was requested by that body of bishops to carry the heads of the bill to the Lord Chancellor, as having received their approbation. No remedy could be proposed for the existing evils which were admitted, that would not be met by objections from some parties; but still he trusted that their lordships would now allow the bill to be read a third time.

LORD BROUGHAM opposed the bill.

The BISHOP OF LINCOLN, in a few words, supported the bill.

LORD WYNDHAM recommended the withdrawal of the bill for the present session, pointing out several objectionable points in the project which required alteration.

The DUKE OF WELLINGTON, adopting the suggestion of Lord Wyndham, decidedly recommended the postponement of the measure till a future period. In the present session, or till the next session of parliament.

The LORD CHANCELLOR thought, if the third reading were delayed now, that there would be a risk of even another session passing before there was any reform in ecclesiastical jurisdiction.

The ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY said, that nothing that he had heard advanced against the bill had shaken his opinions respecting the desirableness of its passing into law; but as the sense of the house seemed to be against the bill, he was not disposed to urge the measure, and would therefore consent to its being withdrawn. The bill was then ordered to be read a third time that day six months.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

PAROCHIAL ASSESSMENTS BILL.

MR. SHAW LEFEBVRE rose to move the second reading of this bill. The object of the bill was to place the law, in reference to parochial assessment or rating, on a better footing, and to put an end to those many differences and heart burnings which sprang up every day. It went to affect not only the owners of the property, but other property. His object was to establish a uniform system of rating through the country. The hon. gentleman cited the decision given in the case of the King v. Jodrell, as that upon which he especially relied for a justification of the bill which he had ventured to introduce. He contended that the effect of the existing law had been to do great injustice to the landed proprietors.

MR. GOULBURN said that in this bill there was one object which the framers of it had, as it appeared to him, ingeniously kept out of sight. He was not disposed to contend that the clergy should pay less as a contribution to the state than others contributed, but he would always endeavour to prevent them being rendered liable to pay more than others. If this bill were to pass, which he trusted would not be the case, the consequences must be that every clergyman would have to pay more than was just, and more than ever he had been accustomed to pay hitherto. When the bill came to be fully discussed, and its latent object known, he trusted there was too much justice in the feelings of honourable members to sanction a bill acting so unfairly to a great and meritorious portion of her Majesty's subjects. The right honourable gentleman concluded by moving, as an amendment, that the bill be read a second time that day three months.

SIR R. INGLIS could not but regret that his hon. friend should have felt it his duty to introduce at this period a bill such as this, which would be highly objectionable at any time. At the present period of the session there was little chance of its passing through even that branch of the legislature. He trusted that the House would not pass a bill disturbing, as this would, the ordinary course of right.

SIR E. SUGDEN said that he was very much inclined to think that the principle of the bill was good; but he could not support it, for two grounds. The first was, that the judges having decided the point in favour of the clergy, and the Tithe Commutation Act having said that rent charges should bear the same rate as tithe, and the right of the clergyman being expressly reserved by the law, he could not usurp the power of a court of law, and decide against the titheowner. The second ground was, that the recital of the act was not correct, because there was no doubt as to the construction of Mr. Poulett Scrope's act.

THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL thought that there would be no injustice to the titheowner in pressing this declaratory bill, and that great advantage would arise from putting a stop to the litigation which, it appeared, was threatened.

DR. NICMOLL opposed the bill.

The house then divided, and the numbers were—

The bill was then read a second time.

JULY 19.

THE IRISH CHURCH.

In the debate upon the Irish Tithe Bill, Lord Howick said that in all previous measures of relief he had cordially voted for the appropriation clause; and he had never disguised his sense of the fact that the real results to be expected from the accordance of the House of Commons with the spirit that dictated the clause would far exceed the immediate practical consequences in the way of the appropriation of any surplus. He had never disguised his conviction, that had the people insisted on their clear undoubted rights much more important results than the resolution for appropriation might have been obtained by them. But the great end attained by the appropriation clause was the evidence which it afforded the people of Ireland that the government was disposed to consult their feelings and interests, and not those of the Church only. It tended to soothe the wounded feelings of the Irish people, and produced so long an interval of tranquillity that men's minds were far more disposed to come to some rational arrangement. He looked upon that clause at the time, and he looked upon it still, as the best chance which circumstances afforded for saving the Establishment in Ireland; for he was of opinion that if the Church of Ireland were reformed, and that secular spirit which had too often manifested itself in the debates on these questions were done away with, the real obstacles to the general diffusion of protestantism in Ireland would be done away with, and ultimately the Church itself, with reduced wealth perhaps, but based on a more enlarged foundation of good feeling and in a more enlarged sphere of utility, might become as secure as the Church of England at home. These were his sentiments; but, at the same time, he could not disguise his conviction that a far more difficult, more embarrassing, and more important question would one day or other, as regarded the Church of Ireland, come to be argued in that house. There was no mode by which the Irish people could be prevented from being sensible of the real state of things in that country—by no contrivance could the British legislature induce them willingly to support a Church alien, in some places, to 95 per cent. of the population. The causes were existent in human nature which must bring the question to a final settlement some day or other. He earnestly hoped that this final settlement would be put off for a considerable period, because every day's delay was of the utmost importance, as every day tended to remove the prejudices and animosities which stood in the way of an amicable settlement. Every succeeding year would diminish the force of those prejudices, so that they might hereafter come to the discussion of the subject under more favourable circumstances. He had now generally expressed his reasons for supporting the present measure for the adjustment of tithes, and the proposed grant of money. Many gentlemen would, no doubt, think that he had spoken too frankly on this occasion—(no, no!)—but he had felt it due to himself before this question finally left the house candidly to state his views and opinions respecting it, in order that should he find occasion hereafter at any time to act upon those views, he might not then be charged with the reproach of having been guilty of disguise—(cheers).

VESTRIES IN CHURCHES BILL.

DR. NICMOLL having moved that the House resolve into committee on the Vestries in Churches Bill.

MR. HUME moved, as an amendment, that it be further considered that day three months.

The house divided: the numbers were—

For the motion 76

For the amendment 78

Majority for the amendment ... —2

The announcement of the majority was hailed with violent cheering.

DR. NICMOLL rose to assure the gentlemen who constituted the small majority on this occasion, that he was not at all discouraged by the present failure, which he attributed to the circumstance of her Majesty's government having exerted its influence to the utmost to defeat a measure so intimately connected with the maintenance of the peace of society, in his opinion, and in that of many in whose judgment he could confide. He did not despair of bringing forward the same measure with better success, and now gave notice he should introduce the bill early next session—(cries of "oh, oh!" and laughter from the ministerial benches).

PRISONS.

LORD J. RUSSELL moved the resumption of the adjourned debate on the clause proposed on the third reading of the Prisons Bill (by Mr. Langdale), the clause being, "that where the average number of prisoners of a religion differing from the Established Church amount to [fifty], justices may appoint a teacher for the same."

The house divided, and the numbers were—

PAROCHIAL ASSESSMENTS.

The state of the law with regard to Parochial Assessments being of considerable importance at the present time, we think it may be serviceable to the clergy, to put before them the decision of the court in the case of Rex v. Joddrell, which we have copied from the British Magazine for March, 1832.

THE KING v. THE REV. P. W. JODDRELL, CLERK *.

THE following decision of the Court of King's Bench, on the method of rating tithes to the relief of the poor, is the most important matter, as affecting church property, which has occurred for years. It oversets all the wretched Quarter Session law, and sets the matter on a clear and just footing.

Upon appeal against a rate or assessment for the relief of the poor of the parish of Yelling, in the county of Huntingdon, the sessions confirmed the rate, subject to the opinion of this Court on the following case:—

The parish of Yelling was enclosed under an act of Parliament, passed in the fifty-ninth year of the reign of Geo. III. entitled, "An act for enclosing lands within the parish of Yelling, in the county of Huntingdon, and for making a compensation for the tithes." By this act the tithes were extinguished, and a compensation made in lieu thereof. On the part of the appellant it was proved, and on the other part not disputed, that the assessment for the rate appealed against was made on the bona fide amount of the rack-rent which the farms were letting at, and were worth to let at the time; that Elizabeth Bull, one of the respondents, the occupier of one farm, the assessment upon which was the subject of this appeal, was therefore assessed in the sum of 226*l.*, and that the said sum was the actual rack-rent paid by her for the same, and paid without any deduction whatsoever; that in the said assessment the said Elizabeth Bull was in no manner whatsoever assessed in respect of the corn-rent or compensation for tithe paid to the rector for the same, and that she paid annually to the rector in respect thereof 93*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.* That James Ford, the other respondent, and occupier of the other farm, the assessment on which was also the subject of this appeal, was assessed in the sum of 60*l.*, the actual rack-rent paid without deduction. That the said James Ford was not therein assessed in respect of the corn-rent, and that he paid 29*l.* 13*s.* for the same to the rector. That in the said assessment the appellant and rector is assessed in the sum of 368*l.*, in respect of the gross payments for compensation for tithes, amounting to 452*l.* 2*s.* 0*d.*, and that the deduction in the assessment allowed the rector (to wit, 83*l.* 2*s.* 0*d.*) is the amount of parochial dues levied on 451*l.* 2*s.* 0*d.* And it was objected by the appellant that the farms should have been assessed in the amount of the rent paid to the landlord, added to the amount of the compensation paid to the rector, such being the actual value of the land to let at rack-rent; but the Court did not allow the objection. And it was further objected by the appellant, that as he was assessed at such a sum as, with his poor-rate, made up the full gross amount of the corn-rent, the profit accruing to the occupiers beyond the amount of rent paid, and beyond the amount of the interest of capital employed, and of expense of cultivating lands, including compensation for the farmer's trouble and labour, and superintendence, ought to have been included in these assessments; and the appellant proposed to call evidence to prove the existence of such profit so accruing generally; the respondents, however, admitted such profits to have accrued generally. The Court did not allow this objection. It was further objected, that the corn-rent was not worth to the appellant any such sum as 368*l.*, he being liable, in respect of such sum, to the payment of land tax and ecclesiastical dues beyond the parochial rates, and having further to do or provide for the duties of the incumbency: and this objection was not allowed, but the rate confirmed, subject to the opinion of the Court of King's Bench, on the objections above stated. The case was argued at the sittings in banco, after last term.

COLERIDGE and KELLY in support of the order of sessions. The rate is perfectly right. The farmers are properly rated on the amount of the rack-rent paid to the landlord, for the rector is rateable in respect of the corn-rent, and if the tenant also were rateable for it, it would be rated

* By act of Parliament, the tithes in a parish were extinguished, and in lieu thereof, the rector entitled to a corn-rent. In a rate for the relief of the poor, he was assessed for the full amount of that corn-rent less the parochial rates. The farmers in the parish who paid the corn-rent to the rector, were rated upon the bona fide amount of the rack-rent paid by them to their landlords. Held first, that the tenants ought not to be rated for a sum made up of the rack-rent paid to their landlords and the corn-rent paid to the rector; but that they were properly rated on the amount of the rack-rent only. Held secondly, that the rate was unequal, on the ground that the farmer was rated, not for the full value of the land which comprised the landlord's and tenant's profit, but for the rack-rent, which was the landlord's profit only, while the rector was rated for the full value of his corn-rent. Held thirdly, that in estimating the amount at which the rector ought to be rated, the land-tax ought to be deducted from the full amount of his corn-rent, provided the tenants of the other lands in the manor paid the land-tax, without being allowed for it by the landlord, but not if such allowance was made. Held also, that allowance ought to be made to the rector for ecclesiastical dues, which were a charge upon the rector, but not for the expenses of providing for the duties of incumbency, because they were a personal charge only.

twice. Secondly, the tenants are not to be rated for their profits, for the rent is the criterion of the value of the occupation of land; and, therefore, in "Rex v. The Trustees of the Duke of Bridgewater," it was held that the proprietors of a canal were rateable for the sum at which it would let, and not for the gross receipts, minus their expenses. Thirdly, the rector has no right to any deduction for the land tax, for it is usually paid by the tenants in the first instance, but allowed to them by the landlord, and it is therefore in effect paid by the landlord; and if that be so, it ought to be paid by the rector. He certainly is not entitled to any deduction for the expenses of performing or providing for the duties of incumbency, for that is not a charge upon the land, but upon him personally.

THESE are the contra. The farmers ought to have been rated for the full amount of the rack-rent, including the corn-rent payable to the rector; for the rent payable by them would have been higher if they had not paid the corn-rent to the rector. Secondly, as the rector is rated for the full amount of the corn-rent, the farmers ought to have been rated not merely upon the rack-rent, which is the landlord's profit, but for the full annual value of the land, which includes both landlord's and tenant's profit. The rate, therefore, is unequal in this respect. Thirdly, the rector ought to have had the land-tax, ecclesiastical dues, and expenses of providing for the duties of incumbency, deducted from the full amount of his corn-rent.

First, as to the land-tax. It is clear if the tenants pay the land tax besides the rent, they have in effect not been rated for that proportion of the annual profits with which the land-tax is paid, and then the appellant must not be rated for an equal proportion of his profits. The ecclesiastical dues ought to be allowed, because they, pro tanto, are a diminution of the annual profits.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered in the Course of the Term by PARKER, J.—This was a question between the rector of a parish and the farmers in it, as to the extent to which he, on the one hand, and they, on the other ought to be rated. The tithes in the parish were extinguished, and the rector had a corn-rent or compensation in their stead. He was rated to the full extent of all he received, with the deduction only of what he paid for parochial dues. He claimed, as additional deductions, the amount of his land-tax, the amount of what he paid for ecclesiastical dues (which would include tenths, synodals, &c.), and a compensation for performing or providing for the duties of his incumbency. The farmers were rated at the bona fide amount of the rack-rent at which the farms were letting, or which they were worth to let, the tenants paying the corn-rent or compensation for tithe; and the rector contended that they ought to be rated in addition upon that corn-rent or compensation they paid him, and upon their share of profit beyond the rent. The great point to be aimed at in every rate is equality, and whatever is the proportion at which, according to its true rateable value, any property is rated, is the proportion in which every other property ought to be rated. The first thing upon every rate, therefore, is to ascertain the true rateable value of every property upon which the rate is to be imposed, and the next to see upon what proportion of that value a rate is in fact imposed. In the case of land, the rateable value is the amount of the annual average profit or value of the land, after every outgoing is paid, and every proper allowance made; not, however, including the interest of capital, as the sessions have done, for that is a part of the profit. Tithe is an outgoing, and therefore the corn-rent or compensation for tithe in this case is not to be added to the amount upon which the farmer is rateable; and in respect of that portion of the annual profit or value which consists of tithe or corn-rent, the rector is himself to be assessed. We think, therefore, that the sessions were right in over-ruling the first objection.

The second objection was, that the farmer's share of profit ought to have been rated, or which is the same thing, that the appellant should have been rated proportionally less; and that objection should, in our opinion, have prevailed. Of the whole of the annual profits or value of land, a part belongs to the landlord in the shape of rent, and part to the tenant; and whenever a rate is according to the rack-rent (the usual and most convenient mode), it is in effect a rate on a part of the profit only. It must, therefore, in the next place, be ascertained what proportion the rent bears to the total annual profit or value, and that will shew in what proportion all other property ought to be rated. If, for instance, the rent is one-half or two-thirds of the total annual profit or value of land, the rate on all other property should be on a half or two-thirds of its annual value. In this case it is clear that there was a share of profit received by the tenant, upon which there has been no rate, and, in that respect, the farmers were assessed in a less proportion of the true annual profit or value than the appellant. The sessions were therefore wrong in disallowing this objection, and they ought to ascertain the ratio which the rent of land bears to its average annual profit or value, and assess the appellant for his tithe-rent in the same ratio.

The last objection was, that the appellant ought to have had the land-tax, ecclesiastical dues, and the expenses of providing for the duties of incumbency deducted.

As to the land-tax, that is always in practice paid in the first instance by tenants; and whether it is to be deducted or not in this case, must depend upon the answer to a previous question, whether the tenants in the parish deduct it from the rents specified or not. If they do, the landlord pays it in effect out of the rent he receives; and the appellant, to be on the same footing, must do the same; in that case it must not be deducted in making the rate on him. But if the tenants pay the specified rents, and the land-tax besides, then they have in effect not been rated upon that portion of the annual profit or value with which the land-tax is paid, but upon a part of the residue only, after deducting the land-tax. Upon this supposition, the appellant must also be rated in a proportionate part of his profit, after deducting the land-tax.

The ecclesiastical dues ought to be allowed, because they are payable by the appellant in respect of his rectory, and the profits of the rectory constitute the only fund out of which they can be paid; but the expenses of providing for the duties of incumbency ought not to be deducted, because those duties are personal, and ought to be performed personally by the incumbent. The last objection, therefore, ought to prevail in part.

The case must, for these reasons, be sent back to the sessions, who must amend the rate, acting as nearly in conformity to the principle here laid down as their means of investigation will admit; a precise and accurate application of it is, we are well aware, impracticable.

MR. SHAW LEFEVRE'S BILL.

FOR DECLARING THE LAW OF ASSESSMENT WITH REGARD TO THE NEW RENT-CHARGES FOR TITHES UNDER THE COMMUTATION ACT.

"A Bill to declare the Effect of an Act of the Sixth and Seventh Years of King William the Fourth, to regulate Parochial Assessments.

"Whereas by an act passed in the sixth and seventh years of the reign of his late Majesty King William the Fourth, intituled an 'Act to regulate Parochial Assessments,' it was amongst other things enacted, that 'from and after such period, not being earlier than the 21st day of March next after the passing of the said act, as the poor law commissioners shall by any order under their seal of office direct, no rate for the relief of the poor in England and Wales shall be allowed by any Justices, or be of any force, which shall not be made upon an estimate of the net annual value of the several hereditaments rated thereunto (that is to say, of the rent at which the same might reasonably be expected to let from year to year, free of all usual tenants' rates and taxes, and tithe computation rent-charge, if any, and deducting therefrom the probable average annual cost of the repairs, insurance, and other expenses, if any, necessary to maintain them in a state to command such rent; and it was thereby provided, 'that nothing therein contained shall be construed to alter or affect the principles or different relative liabilities, if any, according to which different kinds of hereditaments are now by law rateable.'

"And whereas doubts have been entertained whether it be the intention of the said lastly recited provision, that as between hereditaments not producing an occupier's profit, and hereditaments producing an occupier's profit, the former hereditaments shall be rateable only in respect of the net annual value thereof, as defined by the said act, and the latter shall be rateable as well in respect of such net annual value as of the net profits of the occupiers thereof;

"Now for removal of such doubt, be it enacted, by the queen's most excellent majesty, and by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that nothing in the said act or in any other act contained, shall have or be deemed to have the effect of rendering any hereditaments liable to be rated for any occupier's profit in addition to the net annual value of such hereditaments, or of entitling any hereditaments not producing an occupier's profit in addition to the net annual value of such hereditaments, in or from rate, on the ground that other hereditaments producing an occupier's profit are rated only on the net annual value thereof."

LAW.

NEW REGISTRATION ACT.

Robert Warren, of Turvey, mason, was indicted for refusing to give the required particulars touching the birth of his child, to Mr. Godfrey, the registrar of the Turvey district, in the Bedford union.

The defendant pleaded guilty; upon which

Mr. Gunning, counsel for the prosecution, stated that the proceedings in this case were instituted by direction of the registrar-general, in consequence of the defendant having contumaciously refused to give the information respecting the birth of his child, upon being requested to do so by the registrar of the district, in accordance with the act 6th and 7th Will. IV. c. 86, the 20th clause of which enacts—

"That the father or mother of every child born in England after the said first day of March, or in case of the death, illness, absence, or inability of the father and mother, the occupier of the house or tenement in which such child shall have been born, shall, within forty-two days next after the day of every such birth, give information, upon being requested so to do, to the said registrar, according to the best of his or her knowledge and belief, of the several particulars hereby required to be known and registered, touching the birth of such child."

The learned gentleman remarked that it was to be regretted that persons should thus set themselves against a statute which would prove beneficial to the public, and the directions for complying with which were so simple, and he doubted not but that the court would visit for the future cases of this description with severe punishment. The defendant, however, having expressed his contrition by pleading guilty, he did not press for a severe sentence, conceiving that the justice of the case would be fully answered by the conviction having taken place, the object being to show the public that the law must be obeyed.

The defendant stated to the court, that he regretted having disobeyed the law, but that he was told by the clergyman of the parish that members of the Established Church could not be compelled to register the births of their children, and notices to that effect were stuck up in the parish.

The Chairman, in passing sentence, remarked that it was to be regretted that such notice should have been issued; there was no doubt the defendant had been misled by it. It was the duty of all good subjects to obey the law. Registrars were appointed in various parts of the country to register births that took place; and persons whose duty it was were required to give the necessary information. Under the circumstances, the Court sentenced the defendant to pay a fine of 1s. and be discharged.

REGINA V. DALE.

This was an indictment for a misdemeanour under the 21st section of the Act for the General Registration of Births, Deaths, and Marriages, which charged that the defendant had refused to give the required information to the registrar of Wolverhampton, as to the birth of one of his children.

Mr. Ferrard, for the defendant, said that his client would plead guilty.

Mr. Maule, for the prosecution, said that this case was not brought before the Court with any vindictive feeling, but merely to convince persons that the provisions of this Act of Parliament not only ought to be, but must be, attended to.

Mr. Justice Patteson ordered that the defendant should enter into surties to be of good behaviour, and to receive sentence if ever he should be called upon.

GUILDHALL, EXETER, JUNE 9th, 1838.

Mr. T. Milton, of the parish of Allhallows-on-the-Walls, was summoned, on the complaint of the Rev. J. Corfe, the rector of the said parish, to show cause why he refused to pay the amount of two years' dominicals, due from him as a householder in the said parish.

Mr. Moore, in opening his case, stated that a custom obtained in this city of paying an annual amount of 4s. 8d. to the officiating clergymen of different parishes, which was termed dominicals. The term itself was a conventional one, used to imply certain "oblations, offerings, and obventions," recognised by the 7th and 8th William III., cap. 6, and also by a compilation of ancient records, in the reign of Henry VIII., termed the "Valor Ecclesiasticus," which went so far as to call them "oblaciones dominicales," and which referred by name to the parish of Allhallows.

The sum due from Milton was two years' arrears of these dominicals, and he (Mr. Moore) was prepared to prove that the custom had existed for a long while in the parish of paying these dominicals, which might be taken in light of personal tithes, payable on land covered by houses. On this point he should offer convincing evidence. Mr. Moore then put in an extract from the "Valor Ecclesiasticus," and referred to the statute for enforcing the payment of "oblations, offerings, and obventions."

The case went off from the Court's alleged incompetency to entertain it; in consequence of which, the Rev. Mr. Corfe has no alternative but to go to the ecclesiastical court; and thence if his parishioners are still obstinate, to a higher tribunal.—Western Luminary.

SUBTRACTION OF CHURCH RATES.

Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, Saturday, June 30.

FARLAR V. CHESTERTON AND ANOTHER.

This was an appeal from the Ecclesiastical Court in a suit for subtraction of church-rate, originally instituted in the Consistory Court of London, by the churchwardens of St. Mary Abbott's, Kensington, against Mr. William Farlar. The grounds of opposition to the rate were, first, its inequality, by reason of certain persons not being rated who ought to be rated; and secondly, that the rate was intended to cover debts and expenses incurred in past years, and was consequently in part retrospective. The churchwardens in a responsive allegation stated, in answer to the first objection, that the persons exempted from the rate were either those whose rates were charged to the landlord, or those who from poverty were unable to pay the rate; and with respect to the second, that the debt was incurred for necessary expenses, with consent of the parish, and was paid off from year to year. The Judge of the Consistory Court rejected this part of the allegation, as offering no legal answer to the objection to the rate. Mr. Farlar appealed from this decision to the Court of Arches, which reversed the decision of the Consistory Court, and admitted the allegation. From this sentence the Churchwardens appealed to the Privy Council.

The Right Hon. T. Erskine delivered the judgment of their Lordships, reversing the sentence of the Judge of the Arches Court, on the ground that the rate, as admitted by the churchwardens, was made, not to cover expenses of the current year, but to include outstanding debts incurred in a preceding year; and though their Lordships would not have held the rate vitiated by a single item of a retrospective complexion, here was a considerable sum of that character. They were therefore of opinion, that the allegation was not admissible as an answer to Mr. Farlar's allegation, and they rejected this part of it, remitting the cause.—British Mag.

COURT OF CHANCERY, LINCOLN'S INN.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 8.

THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL V. DUPRE.

This was a petition praying a reference to the master to approve of a scheme for the better management of Berkhamstead School, and to report if it was fitting and proper that application should be made for an act of parliament to carry such scheme into effect.

The Solicitor-General and Mr. ANDERDON, for the petitioners, stated the foundation of the charity in the reign of Edward VI., and the different proceedings that had taken place in the Court of Chancery to work out the intentions of the founders to establish a free grammar school. All those proceedings had, however, failed, and an act of parliament, obtained for the purpose, had no better effect, for the school was now without a scholar, the school house in a state of decay, and the master in receipt of a large income out of the charity. Attempts had been made to induce him to meet the wishes of the inhabitants of Berkhamstead and the intentions of the founders, but he insisted that he was not bound to teach any but the children of Berkhamstead, and that he was not obliged to teach them any thing but Greek and Latin. If they required a general education he demanded for each boy a sum of five guineas annually. Under these circumstances, the petitioners prayed the interference of the court.

Mr. CALVERT appeared for a number of the inhabitants of Berkhamstead, to support the prayer of the petition.

Mr. WIGRAM and Mr. HAYTER, for Mr. Dupré, contended that, as nothing was prayed against him, he was entitled to the costs incurred by making allegations against him which were totally groundless. Mr. Dupré had always been willing to fulfil his duty to the utmost extent that could be required of him. He was willing to teach all the boys entitled to be put on the foundation, and he thought it was not too much to require the payment of a sum of two shillings each per week if their parents required them to have a general education. Mr. Dupré made no resistance to the petition, but he prayed permission to go before the master to protect his own rights, and to guard himself against being deprived of an appointment which he had held for thirty-four years.

The Lord Chancellor said the order prayed was a mere matter of course. The relations came to the Court of Chancery because the House of Lords would not countenance an act of parliament without the previous recommendation of the Court of Chancery. The matter must, therefore, go to the master to approve of a scheme, and Mr. Dupré could then attend and take such part in the proceedings as he might be advised. His Lordship made no order as to costs.

Consecration of the Bishop of Sodor and Man.—The Rev. Dr. Bowstead, Bishop of Sodor and Man, was consecrated on Sunday, July 22, at the chapel of Lambeth Palace. The Archbishop of Canterbury acted by commission for the Archbishop of York. The Bishops of Lincoln, Ely, and Hereford assisted at the ceremony. The sermon on the occasion was preached by the Rev. Henry Calthorp, B.D., Fellow and Tutor of Corpus Christi College, in this University.

METROPOLIS.

Lambeth.—The Archbishop of Canterbury has given a piece of ground, in Carlisle-lane, Lambeth, upon which a chapel will be forthwith erected, and will, when completed, afford accommodation for 1000 persons. The cost of the building (3400*l.*) will be defrayed by the commissioners appointed for the rebuilding of churches, &c. Edward Blore, Esq., of Welbeck-street, Cavendish-square, is the architect.—Morning Herald.

CHURCH RATES.—Parish of St. John, Hackney.—A vestry meeting of the inhabitants of this parish was recently held in the vestry room, at the church, for the purposes of receiving the report of the auditors of the churchwardens' accounts for the last year; of passing such accounts; and of making a church rate for the current year. This meeting was attended by a great majority of the wealthy and influential residents of this extensive and opulent parish. The church-rate question here is, perhaps, more than in any other parish within the metropolis or its suburbs, a subject of incessant discussion and agitation amongst the dissenters, who, from their numbers, wealth, and great respectability, form not an inconsiderable phalanx in the ranks of the enemies of the established church. An amendment having been moved, that the further consideration of the question should be postponed to that day ten months. Upon a division the numbers appeared to be:—

For the amendment 45

Majority in favour of the rate ... —43

South Hackney.—On Friday, a meeting was held at the parochial school room, Grove-street, for the purpose of making a rate of threepence in the pound, for defraying the necessary expenses connected with the church. Although Hackney is distinguished as one of the strongest dissenting parishes in the vicinity of the metropolis, no efforts have been made before the previous year for disturbing the harmony that existed towards the church, when a motion for an adjournment was lost by a majority of 176 against 139. The same parties who excited the former hostility were, however, desirous of again trying their strength, and have for some time been rallying their forces by the most active canvass; but the result of the poll has shown the anti-church clique in a still more contemptible light than on the former occasion, as, at the declaration on Saturday evening, the announcement, which was received with loud cheering, stated the numbers, for the rate 197, and against it 87, leaving a clear majority of 110, being 75 over the majority of the last year. To the credit of the respectable part of the Dissenting community, it must be stated that they did not countenance the opposition, either by their votes or their influence.—Morning Herald.

Parish of Tottenham—Commutation of Tithes.—The last and final meeting of the landowners to receive a proposition from the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's and their lessee, as appropriators of the great tithes, and of the Rev. T. Newcome, as vicar of the parish church of Tottenham, took place a few days since, when, to the propositions so made, the landowners present offered 860*l.* per annum, in commutation of the great tithes, and 850*l.* per annum in lieu of small tithes, whereupon Mr. G. Hodson and Mr. J. Cardale, on behalf of the Dean and Chapter and their lessee, agreed to accept the offer of 860*l.*, and Mr. Dean and Mr. Whybro, as joint agents of the vicar, agreed to accept 850*l.* in lieu of the vicarial or small tithes, when the usual provisional agreement was signed by the majority present, and ordered to be presented to the landowners not present for their signatures also. Thus has terminated a contest of ten months' duration. The meeting then dissolved.—Morning Herald.

St. Peter's, Southwark.—The first stone of a new church, to be called St. Peter's, was, on July 19th, laid on a spot of ground at the back of the extensive premises of Messrs. Pott, the vinegar merchants, near Bridge-street, Southwark. The ceremony of laying the stone was performed by the Rev. W. Dodsworth (one of the trustees to carry into effect the munificent bequest of the late Miss Catherine Hyndman), who pronounced an impressive address on the occasion, setting forth the importance of the object they were assembled to witness. The Rev. Gentleman, in the course of his observations, informed the company that the Bishop of Winchester has given his interest in the ground on which the church was about to be erected gratuitously; that Mr. Pott, the lessee, had given his interest gratuitously for the same purpose; and that the inhabitants had very liberally subscribed a sum, which would enable the architect not only to build a substantial fabric, but to render it an ornamental one; that Miss Catherine Hyndman, out of whose bequest the far greater portion of the expense was provided for, had, in point of fact, made no written will, charging her large fortune with this and similar bequests, but had shortly before her death orally expressed to her brother (who was present yesterday) her wish to that effect, and that he had, with the most scrupulous honour, taken care that her last wish was complied with, by immediately appointing trustees for carrying it out. The building is to be a Gothic one, and is to contain 1300 sittings.—Times.

Lambeth Commercial Church of England School.—On Monday, July 9, the above School, being the first in connexion with the Metropolitan Institution, was opened in the new room adjoining St. Mary's Chapel, under the direction of the Rev. H. S. Plumtree, the minister. Notwithstanding considerable opposition has been manifested, and attempts made to create a prejudice against the Institution, there is every reason to anticipate that the most sanguine hopes of its projectors will be realized. It is intended for that class of persons who require an education superior to that which is given to the children of the poor, yet somewhat different from the course of instruction pursued at the proprietary schools, embracing all those branches of knowledge which may be useful in after life, based upon Christian principles, and the occupying the intermediate place between the classical and parochial schools. The whole is under the superintendence of the clergy of the district, and a committee. It is hoped the school will support itself without any other resources than the payments made by the scholars.—Surrey Standard.

Society for Promoting the Employment of Additional Curates in Populous Places.—A meeting of this society was held at No. 4, St. Martin's-place, on Thursday, 19th July; his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury in the chair. There were present the Bishops of Lincoln, Salisbury, and Chichester, the Rev. Chancellor Deatly, the Rev. Sir H. Dukinfield, Bart.; the Rev. B. Harrison; T. D. Acland, Esq., M.P.; Joshua Watson, Esq.; Benjamin Harrison, Esq.; S. F. Wood, Esq., &c. Grants were made to the incumbents of fifteen parishes and districts for the employment of additional curates. The society has to this day granted the sum of 6075*l.* to 83 parishes and districts, the aggregate population of which is one million six hundred thousand, and includes parishes in manufacturing and mining districts, provincial towns, country villages, and places in or near the metropolis.—Times.

The first stone of a new church on Blackheath was laid, July 18, by Her Royal Highness the Princess Sophia Matilda. The want of one may be imagined from the fact that in a population of 25,000, not more than one-fifth are provided with church accommodation in the two parochial churches, allowing even that 4000 receive religious instruction in the royal hospital. There is no parish church within half a mile of the new site. The estimate of the expense of the proposed church is 4200*l.*, of which 1000*l.* have been granted by her Majesty's Commissioners for Building New Churches, and 500*l.* by the Incorporated Society for Promoting the Building and Enlargement of Churches. The rest is in the course of accumulation by voluntary subscriptions. The church will accommodate 1200 persons, of whom half will have free sittings. An interesting address was delivered on the occasion by the Rev. Archdeacon Goddard.

PROVINCIAL.

Munificence of the late Bishop Burgess to St. David's College.—It appears that the late learned and pious Dr. Burgess, Bishop of Salisbury, left as a legacy to this establishment his whole Library; consisting of the most valuable works in theological, classical, and general literature. Having been the original founder of this noble Institution, whilst he presided over the See of St. David's, the venerable prelate has thus finished the good work which he had begun, by devoting this lasting testimony of his regard to the College, and of Christian zeal to the cause of his Divine Master.—Worcester Guardian.

Liverpool Clergy Endowment Bill.—The following is the brief of this bill as amended:—The bill, as amended in Committee, recites in the preamble that it has been agreed that the suit for calling in question the appropriation of the 105,000*l.* shall be forthwith put an end to, and the fund, with its accumulations, restored to the corporation; and that the corporation shall pay out of the borough fund five half-yearly payments of the sums mentioned in the schedule to the ministers therein named (being the arrears of stipends payable by the corporation at the passing of the Municipal Corporation Reform Act), with interest at three per centum, and all the costs of the suit and incident to winding up the same; and it makes provision accordingly. St. Thomas's Church.—It provides that the payments directed to be made to the ministers of St. Thomas's are to be over and above all other stipends, now or hereafter to be payable to them otherwise than by the corporation. St. Martin's Church.—It gives a power to the minister, or assistant minister, to exchange with any other minister of the Church of England, not being a younger life than his own, if the corporation or other patron for the time being think fit.—Morning Herald.

Prescon.—St. Mary's Church, erected in Blacow-street, was consecrated on the morning of June 13. The Lord Bishop preached from St. Luke iv. 18, 19. The church is a very neat edifice, built of hewn stone, in the Norman style. The accommodations in the body of the church, and the two side-aisles, are for 600 persons; and in the gallery, which is a front one, and very spacious, being fifty feet in depth, 500 sittings are provided. The reading-desk is placed on one side of the church, near the communion, and the pulpit on the other. The altar-screen, behind which is the vestry, at present unfinished, is intended to consist of a succession of arches, with deep pillars and mouldings. The noble Norman arch, with its massy pillars, which seems to enclose and guard this portion of the sacred building, has a very imposing effect, and bears a strong resemblance to, though it is not throughout an imitation of, an arch in the venerable cathedral at Durham. A school has been erected, nearly adjoining the church, capable of receiving 300 children, towards which our most highly esteemed townsman, J. Smith, Esq., contributed 200*l.*, having before given the ground for the site, and also the site of the church.

Freckleton.—Trinity Church was consecrated on the afternoon of June 15. Chanc. Raikes preached from John iv. 24.

The Berkshire Chronicle has the following:—"It will be gratifying to our readers to learn that, in consequence of an application from the Rev. J. Bushnell, the Treasurer of the Berks Clerical Fund, her Majesty the Queen has graciously consented to renew the patronage and support accorded by the late Sovereign to that excellent and unobtrusive charity. Whatever connects the Queen with this county, so long the favoured abode of the monarchs of England, must be highly pleasing to her loyal subjects in Berkshire, and still more so when they learn that the liberal and kind consideration of their Sovereign has been exercised in behalf of the families of necessitous ministers of the church."

The Rev. Dr. Warneford has presented 100 guineas toward the fund now being collected for the endowment of the new church at Stroud, which is rising rapidly, and presents the appearance of a very chaste and church-like structure.—Gloucestershire Chronicle.

Norfolk.—On Sunday, the 17th of June, the church of Upwell was re-opened for divine service, after having been restored. The Lord Bishop of Norwich preached on the occasion, and in the afternoon his lordship held a confirmation for this and the adjoining parishes of Outwell and Welney, when 343 partook of the rite. At the end of his address, his Lordship took occasion to observe upon the boundless munificence of the rector, the Rev. William Gale Townley, through whose exertions, and mainly at whose expense, had been produced one of the most richly ornamented edifices in the kingdom. The pews are fitted with stall heads and deeply carved panels, the pulpit and reading desk, the gift of the rector, are of the same costly workmanship, and the new east window (which is to be glazed with ancient stained glass) and the stone screen around the altar, are supplied after designs by Mr. Buckler, from the same liberal source.—Norfolk Chronicle.

Sussex.—On the 22nd June, a Chapel of Ease to Ticehurst Church, situate at Stonegate, erected at the sole expense of George Courthorpe, Esq., of Wilegh, Ticehurst, and endowed by his family with the burial ground, was consecrated by the Lord Bishop of Chichester, attended by a numerous body of clergy.—Brighton Herald.

IRELAND.

Dublin.—Visitation.—On June 14, his Grace the Archbishop of Dublin held a visitation in St. Patrick's Cathedral. Divine service was performed by the Rev. E. Marks and the Rev. C. Otway; and his grace afterwards delivered his charge to the assembled clergy.

New Church.—On June 26, the first stone of the new church in Lower Gardiner-street was laid by the Very Rev. the Dean of St. Patrick's. Suitable addresses were delivered, and prayers offered up by the Rev. D. Browne and H. Irwin. When completed, this will be one of the largest churches in Dublin, and will afford accommodation to 2000 persons. The estimated contract for its erection is 5100*l.*; the building-ground costs 800*l.*; and 1250*l.* must be raised to purchase an endowment. The subscriptions already received amount to about 3800*l.*

Kildare.—Visitation.—On July 9, the Archbishop of Dublin held his triennial visitation in Kildare Cathedral, which was attended by the Bishop of Kildare, and a numerous assemblage of clergy. The sermon was preached by the Rev. H. E. Joly, rector of Clonsast; and afterwards the archbishop delivered his charge. In the afternoon the Bishop of Kildare entertained the archbishop and clergy at dinner.

Limerick.—The vic. gen. of Cashel, Rev. C. Mayne, lately held the triennial visitation for this diocese at the cathedral. The sermon was preached by the Rev. E. Herbert, preb. of Kildareon, from Acts xx. 28. The Lord Bishop of Limerick afterwards held the annual visitation.

Cork, Cloyne, and Ross.—On Sunday, July 1, Frankfield Church was opened for divine service by license from the Lord Bishop of Cork, Cloyne, and Ross. The Archdeacon of Cork officiated, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Bolster and the Rev. Mr. Hoare; and an appropriate sermon was preached by the Rev. Mr. Alcock, minister of the church. This beautiful Gothic structure, which is from the designs of Sir Thomas and K. A. Deane, Esq., and is worthy of the earliest and better days of ecclesiastical architecture, has been erected and endowed under the late act as a chapel of ease to St. Barry's parish, at the sole expense of S. Lane, Esq., of Frankfield, who, with a munificence which has but few parallels in the present day, is also engaged in erecting a parsonage in the Elizabethan style for the curate.—Irish paper.

Dublin, July 14.—The following extraordinary document appears in the shape of a requisition in the Kilkenny Journal of this day:—

"TO EDMOND LANIGAN, CHURCHWARDEN.

"We, the undersigned, request you will convene a meeting of the landholders of the parish of Blackrath (85 in number), to petition parliament for the immediate and complete extinction of the Irish church establishment, as the best, if not the only means now left, to prevent a civil war between the two kindred countries—a calamity which may Heaven, in its mercy avert!

"WILLIAM COLLIS. JOHN RICE.
JOHN LANIGAN. MICHAEL LANIGAN.
JAMES MURPHY. JAMES TALLENT.
GREGORY KEANEY.

"In compliance with the above requisition, I hereby convene a meeting of the thirty-five landholders of the parish of Blackrath, to be held at one o'clock on Tuesday, the 17th instant, at the ruins of the parish church.

"EDMOND LANIGAN, Churchwarden."

COLONIAL.

Colonial Church, Canada.—In a petition recently presented to Parliament, by the Rev. W. Bettridge, Rector of Woodstock, Upper Canada, the following statement is made:—"That your petitioner has communicated to her Majesty's government the extent and character of the spiritual destitution of Upper Canada—that his appeal for an effectual alleviation has been acknowledged to be just in its principle, as appears by the following quotation from a letter addressed to your petitioner, in answer to such appeal:—"Lord Glenelg subscribes, without hesitation, to many of the grounds on which the claims of the Church of England are enforced in your memorial and letter. He adopts your opinion, that the provision at present made for the maintenance of the Bishop of Quebec and the clergy of his diocese, is inadequate to the great end of maintaining the episcopal church where it at present exists, and of extending its operations throughout the Canadian provinces. His Lordship deprecates, not less decidedly than yourself, the system which would leave the multitudes of religion dependent on the precarious support of their various congregations. He is of opinion that the permanent appropriation of funds sufficient for their decent maintenance is to be classed amongst the highest and first objects of national policy."

Nova Scotia, Newfoundland.—A circular letter, dated Aug. 25, 1837, having been received by the clergy of Newfoundland from the Lord Bishop of the Diocese, with reference to the formation of a society for providing the means of extending the ministrations of the Church throughout the archdeaconry, such of the clergy as could be called together were assembled in the vestry-room of St. John's church, on the 15th of Oct., for the purpose of framing such a constitution as might be submitted to those lay members of the Church who should be disposed to aid in the formation of such a society as was recommended by the diocesan. Such a form of constitution and such standing rules were agreed upon as seemed to suit the circumstances of the Church in this island; and a favourable period was alone waited for, for the assembling of the lay friends of the Church, in furtherance of the important object. At length, after some months' unavoidable delay, a general meeting for the formation of the society, was held in the vestry-room of St. John's church, after divine service on Ash-Wednesday, which was most respectfully attended, the clergy, some of the principal government officers, leading merchants, and other members of the Church, being present; and next to a universal unanimity of sentiment, as to the expediency and advantages of the proposed association, pervaded the meeting. The venerable Archdeacon Wix opened the business of the meeting with prayer, and then proceeded to read over the constitution as agreed upon by the clergy on the 13th Oct.; after which the several rules in that constitution were put seriatim—the Hon. Mr. Justice Des Barres, the Hon. Messrs. Crowdy and Thomas, and others, taking part in the discussion which arose on some of them.—Church of England Magazine.

FOREIGN.

Hanover, July 23.—His royal highness the crown prince was confirmed yesterday, on which occasion an invitation to all the ecclesiastical authorities had been addressed by the minister for ecclesiastical affairs, which states that his royal highness having on the 21st been thoroughly examined in the presence of their Majesties respecting his knowledge of the doctrines of the Christian religion, and giving the most satisfactory proof of his acquaintance with the Christian faith, had made his confession according to the rites of the English church, and then received the Lord's supper. Their Majesties, the Prince and Princess of Salma, the diplomatic body, the ministers of the affairs of the household, the clergy of the several Christian confessions, the general and superior officers, the court authorities, the English now here, &c., were present at the religious ceremony, which was performed by the Bishop of Rochester (the worthy tutor of his royal highness), specially invited for the purpose by his Majesty, in the truly religious spirit which still animates the glorious name of Guelph.

No words can express how deeply the young prince was affected by the blessing of a genuine Christian faith and conduct extending beyond the things of this world.—Hanover Gazette.

The Cologne Journal of the 27th ult. confirms the report that the apostolic see has taken a conciliatory resolution in the affair of the Archbishop. Papal letters to the metropolitan Chapter of Cologne, adds the Allgemeine Zeitung, have been received from Berlin, with permission to publish them.—Morning Herald.

JUNE 23.—At his residence, Kilmakea Glebe, Wexford, Ireland, the Rev. Joseph Miller, aged 74.

JULY 1.—In the Close, Lichfield, in the 77th year of his age, the Rev. John Newling, B.D., late Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge, Canon Residential of the Cathedral Church of Lichfield, Rector of Ditchingham, Norfolk, and Chaplain to Viscount Sydney.

JULY 3.—At his rooms, in College, of a dropsy, dependent upon disease of the kidneys, George Alexander Seymour, Esq., aged 21, Scholar of King's College, Cambridge.

JULY 4.—On his way from Pensance to St. Ives, to attend a Church Missionary Meeting, the Rev. Charles Neet, formerly Chaplain at Leghorn, and late Curate of Bishop's Hatfield, Herts. He was thrown from a carriage, and received a concussion of the brain, and expired in a few hours.

JULY 12.—Aged 70, the Rev. James Saunders, D.C.L., late Fellow of St. John's College, Oxford, and Rector of Kirtlington.

JULY 15.—At Huxham Parsonage, Devon (the residence of his son-in-law, the Rev. J. Yolland), the Rev. Bartholomew Goe, M.A., Vicar of Boston, Lincolnshire, aged 71 years. By the death of this gentleman, the presentation to the vicarage of Boston lapses to the Bishop of the diocese, the Town Council not having been enabled to sell the living, owing to the difficulty of ascertaining its actual value. The vicarage itself is of trifling value, but the corporation usually appointed the vicar for the time being to be one of the two Presbyters who are endowed by royal charter, and whose stipends are paid out of the charity lands, thus adding upwards of 2000. a-year to the income of the Incumbent. Now, however, the corporation of the charity trustees are distinct bodies, the Bishop, so far as the presentation to the living is concerned, standing in the place of the former, and the trustees retaining the right to appoint whoever they may please (whether vicar or not) to the office of presbyter or lecturer.

JULY 17.—In the 78th year of his age, the Rev. John Overton, M.A., thirty-six years Rector of St. Crux and St. Margaret, in the city of York, both in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor.

JULY 25.—At Malvern, aged 53, after a long illness, the Rev. Thomas Allies, M.A., of St. Edmund Hall, Rector of Wormington, in the county of Gloucester.

JULY 31.—Rev. Francis Jefferson, M.A. late Fellow of St. Peter's College, Cambridge, and Vicar of Ellington, Hunts, to which Living he was presented in 1822, by the Master and Fellows of that Society. He took his Degree of B.A. in 1819. In appeared the Rev. gentleman had retired to bed, but, not being satisfied the doors were all made fast, attempted to go down stairs in the dark, when, we regret to say, he fell from the top to the bottom, and before a light or assistance could be obtained, the vital spark had fled. It was the opinion of the medical attendant and the jury on the inquest that the fall produced apoplexy, and returned their verdict accordingly.

AUGUST 1.—Aged 76, the Rev. John Addison Carr, Rector of Hadstock, Essex; patron the Bishop of Ely.

AUGUST 2, At his house, James-street, Fimlico, the Rev. Alexander Sterky, in his 71st year.

On Tuesday last, the Rev. Frederick Langstone, curate of Penny Compton, near Banbury. This talented and exemplary Clergyman suffered only a few days' illness. On the

At Southoe, aged 78, the Rev. Robert Pointer, Vicar of Southoe with Hale Weston, in the county of Huntingdon. Rector of Boxworth, Cambridgeshire, and Prebendary of Lincoln.

The Rev. William Tremehere, Vicar of Madron with Morvah, Cornwall.

At Liverpool, aged 60, the Rev. Henry Lacey, of High Wycombe, Bucks.

In Galway, the Hon. and Rev. Nicholas Ffrench, brother of Lord Ffrench.

At Frasersburgh, Aberdeenshire, the Right Rev. Alexander Jolly, D.D., Bishop of Moray, Scotland. He was consecrated in 1796. By a late arrangement of the Episcopal College, the see of Moray, founded in the 12th century, exists no longer. The Clergy and congregations composing it constitute parts of other dioceses.

At Welling, Kent, aged 74, the Rev. Stephen Tucker, Vicar of Borden, Kent; patron, G. Musgrave, Esq.; and Rector of Marshalling, Essex.

At Barnstable, aged 67, the Rev. Onesiphorus Sheers Saunders, M.A., formerly curate of Ashford.

Very suddenly, in Peel, Isle of Man, aged 67, the Rev. James Gelling, 36 years Vicar of Kirk-German, Isle of Man; patron, the Bishop of Sodor and Man.

Jonathan Parker, Fisher, D.D., of University College, Sub-Dean and Canon Residentiary of Exeter Cathedral, and Rector of Farrington, Devonshire; patron, the Bishop of Exeter. Dr. Fisher, son of the Rev. John Fisher, of Peterborough, was matriculated, May 7, 1774; proceeded M.A., October 10, 1780; B.D., May 22, 1802; and D.D., grand compounder, May 14, 1807. He was brother of the Rev. Dr. Fisher, of the Charter House. The death of Dr. Fisher will occasion the first vacancy amongst the dignitaries of our cathedral since the passing of the Acts 6 and 7 William IV. c. 67, and 1st Victoria, c. 71, reducing the number of canons, &c. The first Act was passed for one year; it recites the recommendations of the Church Commissioners, among which is one, 'that the chapter hereafter consists of a dean and four canons only.' The Act states that all future appointments to any ecclesiastical dignity referred to in the above recommendations be subject to certain conditions named, and then provides 'That no appointment, presentation, or collation, be made to any canonry, prebend, or dignity, in any cathedral church in England, &c. which is now vacant, or which may hereafter become vacant, during the continuance of this Act.' The 1st of Victoria confirms the former Act, and extends its operation till the 1st of August, 1838, and to the end of the then Session of Parliament.

At Doynton, Gloucestershire, in his 33rd year, the Rev. George Wear Bush, B.A. late of Queen's College, at which Society he entered as Commoner in 1825, and proceeded to the Degree of B.A. May 21, 1829.

At Kirk Bramwith, Yorkshire, in the 94th year of his age, the Rev. R. Bobbitt, after having been resident in the above village forty-nine years. He was born at Smyrna, in Asia Minor, brought over to England at an early age, and placed at a boarding school in Yorkshire. He afterwards occupied the situation of usher in a school at Catterick, after which he entered holy orders, and commenced the period of those sacred duties which his subsequent life so much adorned.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

PROPOSED SCHOOL FOR THE SONS OF CLERGYMEN.

IN order to obviate the difficulty which is experienced by Clergymen with large families, in giving a suitable education to their sons, it has been suggested, that a School might be established in some central part of the kingdom, in which the Sons of Clergymen might have the benefit of a first-rate Education, at a much less charge than that which is paid in public and private schools generally. And this notice is put forth in order to call the attention of the Clergy generally to the subject. It is estimated that for a sum not exceeding 30*l.* each, the Sons of Clergymen might receive such an Education, with Board, Washing, &c. included, provided funds could be raised for commencing such an establishment. A fund might also be created for establishing exhibitions at the Universities, or rewarding in other useful methods, the most deserving of the boys.

It is proposed that donations of twenty guineas, or annual subscriptions of one guinea and upwards, should entitle the donors or subscribers to nominate one Son of a Clergyman to the benefits of this plan.

Should encouragement be given by a favourable response to this appeal, the details of the plan will be submitted to the highest authorities in the Church, in order to obtain their sanction and support.

Letters, post paid, addressed to the Rev. C. P., to the care of the Editor, will receive due attention.

CLERICAL AND SCHOOL AGENCY.

MR. RICHARD VALPY has established an Office for the purpose of affording facilities to the Clergy in obtaining Curacies, as well as Curates for temporary or permanent engagements; and in transacting all business connected with the sale, purchase, or exchange of Livings, Chapels, Advowsons, Presentations, &c. To Schoolmasters in providing Assistants; recommending pupils, if furnished with proper terms and references; and in effecting the Sale of Schools.—Ladies' Schools purchased or sold, and provided with Governesses. To Noblemen, Gentlemen, and Ladies, in procuring Tutors or Governesses for their Children, for the purposes of Travelling, for Residence, or Daily Attendance. Apply, (post-paid,) to Mr. R. Valpy, 450, West Strand, London.

BOARD AND EDUCATION.

A MARRIED CLERGYMAN, A.M. of the University of Cambridge, residing in a healthy and pleasant part of Derbyshire, and having now under his care a few PUPILS, is desirous of increasing their number, by receiving two or three more of the age of seven or upwards. The advertiser would prefer such boys as have not previously been out at school, and trusts that parents and guardians of youth will find his establishment suitable especially for younger children, as it is his desire to combine the comforts of home and parental care with the advantages of a religious education.

Terms, which are moderate, and other particulars, may be known on application by letter (post-paid) addressed to Rev. M. A., Bakewell. Should any young Gentleman be sent before the commencement of the next quarter, a proportionable deduction will be made.—August 3, 1838.

TO THE CLERGY.

TO be SOLD, some MS. SERMONS, which were written by a late admired Incumbent, and which are well deserving the attention of those, whose avocations afford but little time for composition.

Apply, post paid, to Mr. Mitchell, 20, Great Carter Lane, Doctor's Commons.

A LADY wishes to superintend the domestic concerns of an Elderly or Widow Lady or Gentleman. Experience with age would render her a great acquisition as Companion to an Invalid, or to Write and Read to a Blind Person. She possesses strictly religious principles, and is of a cheerful disposition. She would take an interest among Children who are deprived of a parent's care. Her Board would be considered a sufficient compensation, where she would be treated with confidence and kindness.

Address, post-paid, to X. Y., at Mr. Gifford's, Druggist, 104, Strand.

Unquestionable references.

Tous les Mois.—This substance is prepared from the roots of the Canna Coccinea, which flowers every month, whence it has been called by the French "Tous les Mois." "It is," says Dr. Waterson, of St. Kitt's, "a most nutritious diet, easily digestible, and consequently invaluable for invalids and children, and very superior to sago, tapioca, arrow-root, and gruel. There is less acid in it than in any other farinaceous food I am acquainted with. I have never known it turn sour upon the stomach." Drs. Ryan and James Johnson confirm these statements, and speak in high terms of the "Tous les Mois."—Sold in canisters, 2*s.* and 4*s.* each, by SAMUEL HICKSON and SON, 72, Welbeck-street.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF DIRECTORS OF THE COUNTY OF KENT FRIENDLY SOCIETY, MADE AT A GENERAL MEETING OF MEMBERS HELD AT SITTINGBOURNE, ON THURSDAY, JULY 26, 1838.

THE COMMITTEE OF DIRECTORS of your SOCIETY are happy in meeting you, as a favourable opportunity is thus given to them for communicating to you the state of your Society, and making any explanation concerning its affairs, which you may be pleased to require for your own satisfaction, or that of others who take an interest in your welfare.

Your Society has now completed its tenth year. It was established as a small plant in April, 1828, and now it extends its branches over various parts of the county.

The number of admissions into your Society from the first day of its institution until now, is about thirteen hundred. One hundred and sixty members have entered since the 1st of January, 1838.

The annual income of the Society in monthly contributions is at the present time about *1100*l., and is increasing every month. The total amount of property belonging to the Society on the 30th of April, 1838, to which day the annual accounts are made up, was *6082*l.* 5*s.* 4*d. At this time your money in the Bank of England is *5922*l.* 1*s.* 7*d. This is invested there in the names of EIGHT Trustees, and cannot be withdrawn except upon the joint signatures of three of them. No one individual can touch this property. The addition to the monthly contributions during the last year was *210*l., and the increase of property during the same period was *1143*l.* 10*s.* 3*d. The yearly interest upon the capital of the Society, and which is continually added to it, is about *240*l.;—this also is increasing with the capital every half year.

The Society having been established for so many years, many of the agreements for endowments, to become due to children upon their attaining the age of fourteen, are now in the course of payment, and exceeding benefit is derived from them in their being applied towards the payment of apprenticeship, &c. &c. Shillings put in every month have now grown up into pounds, as it was promised; and *110*l.* 16*s. was paid last year to members in sums varying from *6*s. up to *50*l., as the fruits of their confidence and prodence. The money received and placed to the account of the several assurances is enough to enable the Directors to state, that all the assurances made in this Society, whether for sickness pay, or annuities in old age, or payments at death, or endowments, are SAFE AND SECURE. The funds of the Society are, in the opinion of the Directors, amply sufficient, and more than sufficient, to meet the claims of members. But as ten years have expired, the Directors have it in contemplation to submit all their affairs to an eminent professional Accountant, in London, in order that his certificate of the prosperity of the Society may confirm the confidence of members, and satisfy the public mind. Every farthing of the money, which belongs to the Society, is the property of the Benefit Members, and of them only, and can be used in no other manner than for their advantage and on their account. If any profits are found from time to time they will be divided amongst the Benefit Members, who are entitled to them.

The Directors have to state, that they consider it to be a duty which they owe to the members to be most scrupulously careful in not admitting any one to be a member for sickness pay, until they are perfectly assured by impartial medical authority, that the applicant is a healthy and hearty man, and of sober habits. They do not consider that it would be just to open the door of admission to persons of weak health and tender constitutions, upon motives of charity, because in so doing they would at once risk that stock which is laid up for the members generally and so act contrary to justice. In consequence of the strict and prudent measures which have been adopted in the selection of healthy members, the sickness pay has been considerably less than that calculated upon, and an accumulation is forming upon that branch. This no doubt will continue to be the case, if the members act uprightly as hitherto, and do not throw themselves upon the funds on every occasion of trifling sickness.

The Directors have now to state, that the success of their efforts to form this Society upon safe and secure principles, and upon a plan to make it applicable to the exigencies of the industrious classes throughout the whole county of Kent, is, they consider, fully established. They have worked on quietly and steadily to the attainment of their great end. Patience and perseverance have been required in an eminent degree, and they have been applied to this important undertaking. Much suspicion, much jealousy, much prejudice and much ill will have been raised up against the Society; and for a long time it attracted but little observation. Better and clearer views begin now to prevail.—Applications for connection as branches are frequent from all parts of the county, and two most flourishing branches have within these few months been formed at Hadlow and at Dartford. Upwards of fifty members have been admitted during the last three months, from Hadlow, and the Agent who is in attendance this day reports of thirty more. The applications for admission from Dartford have not been less numerous, and are of a class eminent for respectability.

The Directors have now to congratulate you upon the flourishing state of your affairs, and to assure you that no pains and industry shall be wanting on their part to perfect the work, which, by God's blessing, has been so well begun.

In conclusion the Directors wish to take this opportunity of emphatically stating, that they wage no war with Old Clubs. The reason for instituting your Society arose from seeing the number of such Clubs failing in ability to fulfil their engagements to their members, when they reached old age. They strongly express their sense of the benevolence and philanthropy of those persons, who during the latter part of the last century and the beginning of the present, instituted the Old Friendly Societies, and it is their opinion that the reason why they have not been able to stand securely, is not attributable to any fault of those who commenced them, but merely to a want of that information upon the subject, which was not then attainable.

Application for Assurances or farther information, to be made to the Rev. J. Hodgson, or to JOHN BURDER, Esq., Secretaries to the Society, at the Office, 40, Parliament Street; or to any Local Agent in the Country.

•• Prospectuses and Books of Rules may be had at the Office. Attendance from eleven to four o'clock, daily.

"This Society is strictly confined to the Clergy and their families, and is distinguished from other institutions by the title of 'THE CLERGY MUTUAL ASSURANCE SOCIETY.'" Particular attention is requested in the addressing letters to "No. 40, Parliament Street."

This SOCIETY was formed for the purpose of drawing the attention of the Clergy, 1st, To the important advantages to be derived from the system of Assurance in general; 2dly, To give them an opportunity of making Assurances not offered or admitted in other public Assurance Offices; and 3dly, To keep down the Rates of Assurance at the lowest possible sum, by an inexpensive management, and a division every FIVE YEARS of the TOTAL AMOUNT of Profits (in which no Proprietors share) amongst the assured Members who may be entitled to them. Assurances may be made for a sufficient sum to be paid during sickness, infirmity, and old age, to meet the unavoidable expense of a Curate; for capital Sums or Annuities, to provide for the education of Children at School, or College, and for equipping them out in the world; for the maintenance of Orphan Children during Infancy, from the day of the Death of the Father, &c. &c. &c.

The terms, conditions, and advantages, of these Assurances, and the Tables of Rates payable for them, are fully set forth in the Prospectus. For a proof of the prosperous state of the SOCIETY, the Clergy are referred to a Report of its Proceedings, which was read at a General Meeting of Members on the 29th of June, the Lord Bishop of London in the chair; and also to a Resolution which was moved by the Lord Bishop of Winchester upon the occasion, inserted in the last Ecclesiastical Gazette. One-fourth part of the total amount of premiums paid for Life Assurances in and during the first seven years of this Institution, was returned back again as a bonus to the assured Members, and appropriated to a reduction of their future premiums, thus making the Rates of Premium which had been paid for the same during such seven years, 25 per cent. less than in the following Table. For instance, a Clergyman at the age of 50, having assured £1000 upon his Life in the year 1832, and having paid for the same up to 1836, five Annual Premiums of £43. 13s. 4d. each, received a bonus in cash of about £50 to be appropriated to the reduction of his future premium, so that in fact he paid only £33. 13s. 4d. or thereabouts, during the five first years of his assurance, or £2. 7s. 4d. for each sum of £100 assured, instead of £4. 7s. 4d. Any sum not less than £50, and not exceeding £2500, may be assured upon Life by any Clergyman, or the Father, Mother, Wife, Widow, Son, Daughter, Brother, Sister, of any Clergyman, upon terms as below; and the period appointed for the next bonus is 31st May, 1841. No charge for Stamps.

CHURCH PREFERMENTS.

Office for the Valuation and Transfer either by PUBLIC AUCTION or PRIVATE CONTRACT, of Ecclesiastical, Real, and Personal PROPERTY in Possession, or Reversion.

G. J. ROBINSON begs to inform the Nobility, Clergy, and Gentry, that his Offices are removed from Great Queen-Street, Lincoln's Inn Fields, to No. 11 A, HART-STREET, BLOOMSBURY-SQUARE, nearly facing the Church.

G. J. R. avails himself of this opportunity to acknowledge his grateful sense of the confidence reposed in him. The registers of real and personal Estates, as well as of Advowsons, Presentations, and Chapels for Sale, will be at all times open as before, for gratuitous inspection. Information may also be obtained respecting the Ecclesiastical Patronage of the several Corporations in England, and of many Livings which the present Incumbents are desirous of exchanging.

G. J. R. ventures to rely upon the approbation his mode of transacting business has received, for a continuance of that support and confidence with which he has been favoured.

AT A MEETING of the CLERGY of the DIOCESE of CANTERBURY, holden at the National Schools, Canterbury, on Friday, the 13th July, 1838,

The Venerable the Archdeacon in the Chair, It was moved by the Rev. Wyndham Knatchbull, D.D., seconded by the Rev. W. F. Baylay, and unanimously Resolved:—

That the following Petition be presented to the House of Commons, and one to similar effect to the House of Lords:—

"To the Honourable the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland in Parliament assembled,

"THE HUMBLE PETITION of THE ARCHDEACON AND CLERGY of THE DIOCESE of CANTERBURY,

"Sheweth,—That on the 13th of August, 1836, the royal assent was given to an Act for the Commutation of Tithes in England and Wales, by the 69th clause of which it was enacted, 'That every rent-charge payable as aforesaid, instead of tithes, shall be subject to all parliamentary, parochial, and county and other rates, charges, and assessments, in like manner as the tithes commuted for such rent-charge have heretofore been subject.'

"That this clause was regarded as a solemn covenant between the Legislature and the tithe owners, both lay and ecclesiastical, that the principles according to which tithes were then by law assessable to parochial and other rates, should not be violated.

"That, on the 19th of August, 1836, the royal assent was given to an act to 'regulate Parochial Assessments,' by which, amongst other things, it was provided, in conformity with the aforesaid clause of the Tithes Commutation Act, 'That nothing herein contained shall be construed to alter or affect the principles or different relative liabilities (if any), according to which different kinds of hereditaments are now by law rateable.'

"That a bill is now pending in your Honourable House, intitled, 'A Bill to declare the effect of an Act of the 6th and 7th years of King William the Fourth, to regulate Parochial Assessments,' which, under the plea of removing doubts, not attaching, as your Petitioners allege, to the said proviso of the 'Parochial Assessments Act,' whose sole and manifest purport was to maintain and not to define the existing law, would in effect repeal the said proviso, as well as the 69th clause of the Tithes Commutation Act, and all the statutes and judgments for whose preservation they were respectively enacted.

"Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray that these solemn pledges of the Legislature to maintain the principles according to which different kinds of hereditaments are now by law rateable may be faithfully observed, and that the said bill may not receive any further sanction of your Honourable House.

"And your Petitioners, &c."

It was moved by the Rev. C. J. Burton; seconded by the Rev. F. A. Glover, and unanimously Resolved:—

That his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury be requested to present the petition to the House of Lords, and the Right Hon. Henry Goulburn and Sir Robert Inglis, Bart., that to the House of Commons.

It was moved by the Rev. John Hodgson, and carried by acclamation:—

That the respectful thanks of the Clergy be offered to his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury, for his introduction of the proviso at the end of the first clause of the Bill to regulate Parochial Assessments, by which the just rights of the titheowners and others have been hitherto protected, and to request that he will be pleased to take counsel with the Archbishop of York, and other Bishops of England and Wales, to maintain it in its full integrity.

It was moved by the Rev. I. E. N. Molesworth, D.D.; seconded by the Rev. G. Randolph, and unanimously Resolved:—

That this Meeting begs to call the attention of all titheowners, both lay and ecclesiastical, and of persons interested in mines, canals, railroads, and houses, to the attempt now in progress to destroy, by a mere act of legislative authority, for the benefit of the promoters of that act, the immunities resting upon the statutes of the realm, and guaranteed to them by the solemn adjudications of its highest courts.

It was proposed by the Rev. J. Moore, D.D.; seconded by the Rev. J. Mauley, and unanimously Resolved:—

That these resolutions be advertised in the Kentish Gazette, the Kentish Observer, the Maidstone Journal, the Times, Morning Herald, Standard, and St. James's Chronicle newspapers, and the Ecclesiastical Gazette.

JAMES CROFT, Archdeacon.

The Archdeacon having left the chair, it was moved by the Rev. Wyndham Knatchbull, D.D., and carried by acclamation:—

That the thanks of this meeting be given to the Archdeacon for his readiness in calling the meeting, and his unceasing attention to the interests of the Clergy.

The Petitioners will lie for signature at the Registry-office, in Canterbury, till Monday, the 22d instant, and those gentlemen to whom it would be inconvenient to attend personally, but are desirous of having their names attached to them, will be pleased to signify the same to Messrs. Abbot and Cullen.

THE CHURCH, the BISHOP, or CORAH— which? Being a Reprint of Two SERMONS, preached in Charlton Church, on the First Sunday after Easter, on the 19th verse of St. Jude. By the RECTOR.

It having been intimated to the Author, by several Reverend Brethren, that these Sermons might be of much use, if published, a circumstance not very unlikely, if the Author may form any judgment by the indignation they have excited in the minds of the followers of that ambitious separatist, he has had them reprinted.

A List of the Bishops in succession, in every See in England, Ireland, Wales, and Scotland, from the time of the Reformation downwards, will be added to the Appendix, which contains the List of Archbishops of Canterbury from Augustine downwards.

The Sermons, without the List of Bishops, 1s. 6d. With the List of Bishops, 2s. 6d.

The proceeds of Sale, if any, will be appropriated to apprenticing out the best behaved Boys and Girls from the Parish School.

HORÆ DECANICÆ RURALES, being an attempt to illustrate, by a Series of Notes and Extracts, the NAME and TITLE, the ORIGIN, APPOINTMENT, and FUNCTIONS, Personal and Capital, of RURAL DEANS, with a few Incidental Remarks on the Rise and Decay of Rural Bishops, and on the Incardination of Parochial Clergy. To which is added, an Appendix of Documents, ancient and modern, by WILLIAM DANSEY, A.M., Rector of Donhead St. Andrew, Rural Dean of Chalke, Wilts.

Two Vols. small 4to., plates of Seals, &c., boards, 14. 4s.

Another Copy, 2 vols. 4to, half-bound morocco, uncut, gilt top edges, 14. 11s. 6d.

This most important work on the Church should find a place on the shelves of every clergyman of the Establishment. The History of the Rise and Progress of the Parochial Clergy, alone, fills space enough to have formed a small separate volume; and of the great importance of this section of Mr. Dansey's labours, there can be but one opinion. Archdeacon Goodard, in his recent charge, strongly recommends this work, as "abounding in solid Ecclesiastical and Antiquarian views;" and the reviewers in the elaborate notice of the book in the Quarterly Theological, and in the British Magazine, pass the highest eulogium upon the talented author, whom they compare to the eminent divines of former days. To place his labours within the reach of all his brethren, Mr. Dansey has liberally caused the volumes to be charged with the cost of the paper and print.

THE FAMILY SANCTUARY; a Form of Domestic Devotion for every Sabbath in the Year: containing the Collect of the Day; a Portion of Scripture; an Original Prayer and Sermon, and the Benediction.

"A very pious production, and well calculated for reading in religious families."—Literary Gazette.

"The excellence of the object to which this work is adapted, will be admitted by Christians of every denomination. Nor have we discovered in its pages a single passage to which objection can be taken by any sect which professes to believe in the religion of the Bible. It is a complete book of family worship. The Prayers are earnest in supplication, exhibit a deep and abiding faith in the atonement, and are full of an intense devotional spirit, that is well calculated to touch the affections of the communicant. We recommend this work with confidence to all families who preserve in their household the Christian practice of domestic devotion."—Atlas.

ECCLESIASTICAL NOTICES.

The Lord Bishop of London will commence a Visitation of his Diocese at St. Paul's Cathedral on the 8th of October.

The Lord Bishop of Norwich will hold his next Ordination on the 23d of September.

The Lord Bishop of Lincoln will hold an Ordination at Buckden, on Sunday, the 23d of September.

The Lord Bishop of Exeter will hold an Ordination in his Cathedral on Sunday, the 28th of October.

The Lord Bishop of Bath and Wells intends to hold a general Ordination on Sunday, October 21. Candidates are required to send their papers to his Lordship's Secretary, Mr. Brookes, Wells, on or before the 22d of September.

We beg leave to call the attention of our readers, and more especially of the Clergy, to the provisions of the new Act relating to benefices and pluralities, entitled, "An Act to abridge the holding of benefices in plurality, and to make better provision for the residence of the Clergy." This is, doubtless, the most important document which has yet appeared in our pages with regard to the temporal interests of the Church. We therefore take the opportunity afforded us by the insertion of the first portion of this Act, to suggest to the Clergy in particular the advantage which they may derive from carefully preserving their copies of the ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE. It will afford them an easy means of referring to all such authentic documents hereafter. To those who have experienced the difficulty of making such references, it will be unnecessary to say more; but we think it right to offer this suggestion generally, with regard to a work comprising as full and accurate an account as possible of the affairs of the Church; and to add, that it is our intention to furnish, at the end of each year, an INDEX of the principal contents. We are also glad to notice the praiseworthy endeavour of the publisher to afford the best means of preserving the several numbers, by the neat and convenient portfolio which he has prepared for the purpose.

The additional list of names, which we now publish, calls for a renewal of our thanks to those Clergymen who have so kindly and so effectively lent us their support. Considering the pressure occasioned by the large gratuitous circulation of the work, a continuance of such support is of great importance towards increasing its utility.

A further list will be printed in the next Number, containing the names of those Clergymen who may in the mean time have signified to the Publisher their wish to become subscribers.

AN ADDRESS FROM THE COMMITTEE OF THE LAY UNION FOR THE DEFENCE OF THE ESTABLISHED CHURCH, ON THE SUBJECT OF THE EDUCATION OF THE POOR.

THE education of the children of the poor is a subject which has lately claimed and obtained a considerable portion of the public attention, and is daily increasing in interest and importance: and from its intimate connexion with the well-being of the community, it is exceedingly desirable that the present position of the question should be accurately understood.

Until within the last four years—in each of which a small parliamentary grant has been made for the erection of school-houses in England, whatever was done in this matter was attributable solely to the spontaneous exertions of Christian benevolence. Our charitable foundations owe their existence to the religious munificence of past ages; and within the last thirty years a variety of new efforts have been made by Christian zeal and liberality to meet the increasing wants of a rapidly augmenting population; and had the State remembered its duty, and properly filled up the outline of a Church Establishment, bequeathed to it by the piety of our ancestors, there would have been, in all probability, but little cause for complaint in the present day as to the want of popular education. But from a forgetfulness of this duty, it has followed that in various districts, of large population and of great religious destitution, vast masses of ignorance and of immorality have accumulated. While, however, this is freely admitted, and while it is also readily conceded, that it is the duty of the State to take immediate measures for the removal of these evils, still it is not right that the fact should be overlooked, that for all the provision which has yet been made for the education of the poor of this country, we are indebted solely to the efforts of Christian benevolence.

Now, those who have at various periods, and especially in the present age, devoted their time and their substance to these philanthropic endeavours, have ever had in view, not the spread of a system of merely mechanical instruction, but the diffusion of moral principle by the inculcation of Christian knowledge. In their view, the power of reading and the acquisition of some elementary knowledge in science constituted, not an end, but the means to an end. Education, to be worthy of the name, must embrace, or rather consist in, a moral training, a grounding of the mind in religious principle, to be acquired by a course of instruction in the facts and doctrines of Christianity. It is upon this view that the whole of the education now provided for the poor of this country by the efforts of Christian benevolence invariably proceeds. A new theory of education, however, has been put forth within the last few years, the chief feature of which is the inculcation of mere secular or "useful" knowledge, as it is termed, to the virtual exclusion of that knowledge which alone can make us "wise unto salvation."

This new system is chiefly advocated by a body calling itself "the Central Society of Education." This Society does not consist, as its title would seem to import, of an union of all those who had laboured longest and most successfully in the work of the education of the poor; on the contrary, it rather opposes and seeks to render useless all their labours. It has no connexion with, and exhibits no friendly feeling towards, the National Society; it opposes, and is strenuously opposed by, the British and Foreign School Society. It emanates, in short, neither from the Church of England nor from any of the sects dissenting from it, nor from any other body connected with, or concerned in, the work of education. Its leading members, on the contrary, are chiefly known in the arena of politics; and the main drift of their exertions evidently is to change, by "liberalizing," the character of the education now given to the children of the poor.

The proposition now urged upon the Government and the legislature by this "Central Society" is, that a Board of National Education shall be formed, and provided by the State with sufficient funds to conduct the education of the children of the whole of the poor; that this Board shall train masters, and establish schools throughout the country; and that the system of education to be adopted shall, in effect, exclude all religious instruction, either by confining it to such topics only as are admitted by all, or by merely allowing the clergy and religious teachers of various denominations to lecture or catechize at certain fixed hours in each week, such of the scholars as may choose to attend on them.

Now, there can be no doubt that, while, on the one hand, the establishment of public schools of this kind, endowed by the State with ample means, would operate to wither up and destroy those which are now supported by voluntary contributions, so, on the other, the system proposed to be adopted would be in effect an irreligious system. By irreligious, we mean a system from which religion is purposely and sedulously excluded. We are aware that the advocates of the proposed change frequently profess their intention that the education contemplated in their theory shall comprehend a religious training; but whatever their professions may be, their practical proposition always resolves itself into this alternative—either that the instruction given shall be such as to be inoffensive to the professors of all creeds, and the members of all communions, or that it shall be limited to a separate lecture, to be given at a certain allotted period in each week, and only to such as may choose to avail themselves of it. Now, however the advocates of this system may persuade themselves to the contrary, it is quite manifest that either of these plans would establish an education without religion. The first proposes a system of tuition of which religion, it is said, is to form a part; but that religion is to be denuded of every thing that might give offence to the professors of any one form or mode of belief. To avoid displeasing the Socinian, the divinity of the Son of God, and the consequent efficacy of his atonement, must be kept out of view; to conciliate the Romanist, the sole mediation of our Saviour, and the right of all mankind to the free and unrestricted perusal of the word of God, must be passed over in silence; whilst, lest the prejudices of the Jew should be wounded, all mention of the very name of Christ must be strictly forbidden. Can it be necessary to demonstrate, by any argument, that a religion without form or feature, such as this must prove, would be, in fact, no religion at all; or that a mere collection of moral precepts, isolated from those doctrines which alone can supply adequate motives for the observance of the precepts, would produce no other result than that of weariness and aversion? The connexion between doctrines and duties, faith and practice, is vital and indissoluble.

Nor could the second of these plans prove more successful. By it every particle and vestige of religion would be cast out of the system of tuition; and a bare permission would remain for the ministers of every creed to visit the school at certain stated hours in each week, for the purpose of lecturing or catechizing those among the scholars who chose to receive their instructions. But it is sufficiently obvious that a periodical lecture of this sort, attended only at the option of the scholars, could have scarcely any perceptible value or utility. In either way, Christianity would be removed from its rightful position, as the vital and pervading principle; and would either be reduced to a meagre and useless outline, or pushed into a corner, as a doubtful and optional appendage to the system.

Such is the alternative which is now pressed upon the attention of the Government and the country. The question is not whether the poor should be educated, for on that there is no controversy; but whether their education should be conducted, as heretofore, on a system of which religion forms the leading feature, or on either of these two plans of the "Central Society," by each of which it is, in effect, practically excluded.

It is needless to remark how deeply the members and friends of the Church of England are interested in the right settlement of this question. For should it ever be decided by the state that the rising generation shall be trained in schools in which Christianity is not inculcated, a habit of indifference to religion will be engendered in the popular mind, so as at once to alienate it from Christianity, and from the Established Church, by which Christian doctrines are so faithfully set forth. We, therefore, feel that this question directly affects the security of the Establishment; and we are persuaded that the time is now come when its importance ought to be urged upon the earnest attention of all the friends of the Church.

Five years have elapsed since the self-styled "Liberal" party commenced their exertions for the introduction of their system of education. It is impossible to deny that during that time, owing to the inertness of Christians in general, they have made considerable advances towards their end. They have succeeded, during three sessions, in prevailing on the House of Commons to grant them Committees, before which witnesses were produced for the purpose of explaining and extolling the "liberal plan of education." They have established the Central Society of Education, already alluded to, which embraces many Members of Parliament and other public characters, and the publications of which deprecate all descriptions of religious education, and advocate the superiority of their own plan. They have further laboured to instil their views into the public mind throughout England by popular lectures and addresses at public Meetings, and they have elicited petitions—many of which, no doubt, have been signed by persons little aware of the tendency of their system, but which prove the progress that their doctrines are making in the country. They have therefore felt themselves, at length, sufficiently strong to bring the question under the notice of both Houses of Parliament in the present session. In the House of Lords, a Bill has been introduced by Lord Brougham, which embodies the principle of this system, and proposes its immediate establishment. In the House of Commons, Mr. Wyse has brought forward a motion, which would introduce the system, by establishing that which is one of its great features—a Central Board of Education nominated by Government. It must not be forgotten, that both these proposals, pernicious as their obvious tendency is, have received the general approbation, expressed in Parliament, of persons now high in office; and that Mr. Wyse's motion was defeated by a majority of four only, in a House consisting of 144 members. It is impossible, therefore, to deny that these views have made formidable progress, and that, if we would prevent their adoption in this country, we must forthwith awaken the public attention to their dangerous and antichristian character.

We are, indeed, fully convinced that, if the tendency of this system of education were properly understood, it would receive no countenance from the majority of the people. It would be found that, however anxious they are that the means of instruction should be widely extended, they would require that the education of the poor should be based on religion; that it should combine Christian instruction with useful knowledge; and that Parliament should not impose on the members of the Church of England, who are the great majority of the people, any system of education which should not inculcate the doctrines of that Church; any, in short, which should not harmonize, in all its parts, with the discipline and polity of that Church, and be conducted under the superintending care of the parochial clergy.

But it is necessary that the people should be warned of the actual position of this question, and of the danger attending the least appearance of indifference. The advocates of an education without religion have now brought the danger to our very doors. The opening of the next session of Parliament must witness some very decided manifestation of opinion on the part of those who feel the importance of a religious education, or there can be little doubt that some step will be gained by the adversaries of the Church, the evil consequences of which may be irremediable. Let, then, all who take any interest in the religious state and prospects of their country—all who know that a people without religion must of necessity be a people without morals, and that a demoralized population cannot long continue either free or happy—let all, in short, who are convinced that “righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people,” resolve to oppose themselves, as strenuously and as unitedly as possible, to any system of education of which religion does not form the prominent and essential principle.

The number of children in the schools in union with the National Society amounted, in 1832, to 400,830; in 1835, to 416,181; and in 1838 may be estimated at upwards of 600,000. The total number of Church of England schools in 1837 was ascertained to be 16,924, and the number of scholars to amount to 996,460.

TITHE COMMISSION.

The Tithe Commissioners for England and Wales believe it may determine the line of conduct of many tithe-owners and tithe-payers if they now make public the views and intentions of the commission, as to the manner in which it will apply its compulsory powers to the commutation of tithes.

During the last six months 1003 voluntary agreements have been received.

If the process of commutation were wholly compulsory, the commissioners would not think it prudent or perhaps practicable to press it at a quicker rate than this.

The apportionments have hitherto been completed with more harmony and with much less of irritation and opposition than had been generally reckoned on, but they consumed much more time than it is desirable they should.

The causes of this slowness are, the limited number of persons to whom the parties to the agreements are content to trust the processes either of mapping and measuring, or of apportioning, and the great accumulation of work in the hands of that limited number of persons.

The Tithe Commissioners increase the quantity of work to be done in the country, by adding a number of compulsory awards to the voluntary agreements now making, and under which the apportionments are proceeding towards completion; they must either employ the same apportioners and mappers whom the parties themselves are now employing, or they must employ a different and inferior class, and one in which the parties show no disposition to place confidence.

If the commissioners employed the persons at present employed, they could not materially accelerate the pace at which the apportionments are now completing. If they employed persons in whom the landowners had not confidence, discontent, appeals, and, consequent on these, very heavy expenses both to the public and individuals, would follow, which must entirely destroy the harmony and contentment which have hitherto marked the progress of commutations. This would constitute an amount of evil which, in the opinion of the commissioners, would very much more than balance any good which their immediate compulsory interference, on a wide scale, could effect.

The Tithe Commissioners therefore announce, that while the voluntary commutation proceeds at the pace at which it has lately proceeded, it is their intention to interfere compulsorily only in a limited number of cases, which will consist—

1st. Of those in which litigation is in progress.

2d. Of those in which tithe has been taken in kind prior to the appearance of this circular.

3d. Of cases in which the commissioners are requested by both tithe-owners and land-owners to interfere.

4th. Of cases in which an incumbent has been recently appointed, or may be hereafter admitted to a rectory or vicarage, and becomes thereby owner of the greater or small tithes.

The Tithe Commissioners wish it, however, to be understood, that if the progress of voluntary commutation slackens, they may probably think it right to interfere more actively and widely, and that they will interfere at once in any special cases or particular districts of which the peculiar circumstances appear to them to make an early interference desirable.

While making these announcements the commissioners earnestly advise all parties to commutations to apply themselves deliberately, but resolutely, to the task of making voluntarily their own arrangements.

It is true that in few cases the compulsory processes may be completed as cheaply as the voluntary, the award, perhaps, even more cheaply than an agreement; but it is never certain that this will be the case in any one instance. It is highly improbable that it will be the case in the majority of instances.

Where the parties institute no contest, and make no struggle before the commissioners, a compulsory commutation may be promptly and cheaply settled.

Whenever, either at the commencement of a compulsory commutation, or what will oftener happen, accidentally and during its progress, any individual, however small his interest, grows suspicious and litigious, and denies facts as to past transactions and averages, or disputes admeasurements and valuations, he may force on a protracted investigation, re-admeasurements, and fresh maps and re-valuations, which must lead to burdensome and indefinite expenses to be borne by the parties, besides causing a wasteful expenditure of public money. It is indeed clear, that an apportionment made by the commissioners must, in nearly every case, be more expensive than one conducted by the landowners themselves.

Should these considerations have their due weight with the parties, the commissioners see no ground for doubting that by very far the larger portion of tithe will be voluntarily and amicably commuted. As yet, out of all the voluntary apportionments confirmed, the parties have been driven to re-valuations only in one.

The Tithe Commissioners wish the persons employed to map and apportion to understand very distinctly that, although under the circumstances enumerated here much forbearance will be exercised towards them, and although the power of taking the apportionment out of their hands will be very cautiously exercised, yet such forbearance will have its limits.

Whenever it is found that there has been trifling or loitering, or a disappointment of the fair expectation of their employers, the commissioners (however much they may regret the necessity of doing so) will not hesitate to take the apportionment into their own hands. In such cases the time and cost already bestowed upon the work will be lost.

The Tithe Commissioners recommend all tithe-owners to take care that the first instalment of their rent-charge is made due, and that tithe should cease to exist, on some quarter-day after the confirmation of the apportionment.

This will prevent the possibility of there being an interval between the signing of the agreement and the confirmation of the apportionment, during which they may find it practically very difficult to collect either tithe or rent-charge.

They also recommend to all land-owners to contract for the completion of the apportionment by some given day after the confirmation of an agreement or completion of an award, and to stipulate that if the apportionment is not then completed nothing shall be paid for it. If they do not do this, they will run the risk of having first to pay partially an apportioner selected by themselves, and secondly the expenses of an apportionment made by the commissioners.

NEW CHURCHES.

EIGHTEENTH ANNUAL REPORT OF HER MAJESTY'S COMMISSIONERS FOR BUILDING NEW CHURCHES.

To the Honourable the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland in Parliament assembled.

In their last Report Her Majesty's Commissioners stated that 220 churches and chapels had been completed, in which accommodation had been provided for 293,057 persons, including 161,284 free seats, to be appropriated to the use of the poor.

They have now to state that five churches have since been completed at the following places, viz.

in Pemberton-row, in the parish of St. Bride in the city of London; at Iron Bridge, in the parish of Madeley, in the county of Hereford; in Montpelier-road, in the parish of Brighton, in the county of Sussex; at Shaw Whiteley, in the parish of Melksham, in the county of Wilts; and at Loughborough, in the county of Leicester.

In these five churches accommodation has been provided for 4855 persons, including 3211 free seats for the use of the poor. Thus in the whole 225 churches and chapels have now been completed, and therein provision has been made for 297,912 persons, including 164,495 free seats for the use of the poor.

Church Commissioners' Office,
July 3, 1838.

AN ACT TO ABRIDGE THE HOLDING OF BENEFICES IN PLURALITY, AND TO MAKE BETTER PROVISION FOR THE RESIDENCE OF THE CLERGY.

WHEREAS an Act was passed in the twenty-first year of the reign of King Henry the Eighth, intituled "An Act that no spiritual persons shall take to farm of the King, or any other person, any lands or tenements for term of life, lives, years, or at will, &c.; and for pluralities of benefices; and for residence," the whole of which recited Act (excepting only such parts as relate to pluralities of benefices) has since been repealed by an act passed in the fifty-seventh year of the reign of King George the Third, intituled "An Act to consolidate and amend the laws relating to spiritual persons holding of farms; and for enforcing the residence of spiritual persons on their benefices; and for the support and maintenance of stipendiary curates in England;" and whereas it is expedient to consolidate and amend the said laws, and to restrain the holding of pluralities, and to make further provision for enforcing the residence of spiritual persons upon their benefices, and to limit the exemptions from such residence; and also to make further provision respecting the appointment and support of stipendiary curates in England; be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that so much of the said recited Acts as is now in force shall be and the same is hereby repealed, save and except only such part of the said last-recited Act as repeals certain Acts and parts of Acts therein particularly recited: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall exempt any person from any penalties incurred under the said last-recited Act before the time of passing this Act, or take away or affect any proceedings for recovery thereof, whether commenced or not before the passing of this Act, or shall annul or abridge any licence granted under the provisions of the said last-recited Act before the time of passing this Act.

II. And be it enacted, that from and after the passing of this Act, no spiritual person holding more benefices than one shall accept and take to hold therewith any cathedral preferment or any other benefice; and that no spiritual person holding any cathedral preferment and also holding any benefice shall accept and take to hold therewith any other cathedral preferment or any other benefice; and that no spiritual person holding any preferment in any cathedral or collegiate church shall accept and take to hold therewith any preferment in any other cathedral or collegiate church; any law, canon, custom, usage, or dispensation to the contrary notwithstanding: provided, that nothing hereinbefore contained shall be construed to prevent any archdeacon from holding, together with his archdeaconry, two benefices, under the limitations herein-after mentioned with respect to distance, joint yearly value, and population, and one of which benefices shall be situate within the diocese of which his archdeaconry forms a part, or one cathedral preferment in any cathedral or collegiate church of the diocese of which his archdeaconry forms a part, and one benefice situate within such diocese, or to prevent any spiritual person holding any cathedral preferment, with or without a benefice, from holding therewith any office in the same cathedral or collegiate church, the duties of which are statutable or accustomably performed by the spiritual persons holding such preferment.

III. And be it enacted, that, except as herein-after provided, no spiritual person holding any benefice shall accept and take to hold therewith any other benefice, unless it shall be situate within the distance of ten statute miles from such first-mentioned benefice.

IV. And be it enacted, that, except as herein-after provided, no spiritual person holding a benefice with a population of more than three thousand persons shall accept and take to hold therewith any other benefice having, at the time of his admission, institution, or being licensed thereto, a population of more than five hundred persons; nor shall any spiritual person holding a benefice with a population of more than five hundred persons accept and take to hold therewith any other benefice having, at the time of his admission, institution, or being licensed thereto, a population of more than three thousand persons; nor shall any spiritual person hold together any two benefices, if, at the time of his admission, institution, or being licensed to the second benefice, the value of the two benefices jointly shall exceed the yearly value of one thousand pounds.

V. And be it enacted, that in case the bishop or bishops, as the case may be, to whom any two benefices within the distance of ten miles from each other shall respectively be subject, which, under the provision hereinbefore contained, might not be holden together, but one of which benefices shall be below the yearly value of one hundred and fifty pounds, and the population of which shall exceed two thousand persons, shall think it expedient that the incumbent of one of such benefices should be permitted to hold the said two benefices together, the said bishop or bishops shall be at liberty, upon application made to him or them for that purpose by such incumbent, to state in writing under his or their hand or hands the reason why such benefices should be holden together, and in such case it shall be lawful for the said incumbent to hold the said two benefices together: provided always, that in the last-mentioned case the bishop of the diocese within which such benefice having a population exceeding two thousand persons is situate may from time to time, if he shall so think fit, by an order under his hand and revocable at any time, require that such incumbent should keep residence on and personally serve such benefice during the space of nine months in each year; and if such incumbent shall not, in obedience to the terms of such order, and until the same be revoked, reside on and personally serve such benefice, he shall be liable to all the penalties for non-residence imposed by this Act, notwithstanding he may have a legal exemption permanent or temporary from residence, or may be resident on some other benefice of which he may be possessed, or may be performing the duties of an office, and the performance of the duties of which might in other cases be accounted as residence on some benefice: provided always, that such spiritual person may, within one month after service upon him of any such order, appeal to the archbishop of the province, who shall confirm or rescind such order as to him may seem just and proper.

VI. Provided always, and be it enacted, that before any spiritual person shall be allowed to hold any two benefices together under any provision of this Act, it shall be necessary for such person to obtain from the Archbishop of Canterbury for the time being a licence or dispensation for the holding thereof, which licence or dispensation the said Archbishop is hereby empowered to grant under the seal of his office of faculties, upon being satisfied as well of the fitness of the person as of the expediency of allowing such two benefices to be holden together, and that such licence or dispensation shall issue in such manner and form as the said Archbishop shall think fit; and for such licence or dispensation there shall be paid to the registrar of the said office the sum of thirty shillings and no more, and to the seal keeper thereof the sum of two shillings and no more; and that no stamp duty, nor any other fee, save as hereinbefore mentioned, shall be payable on the licence or dispensation to be granted as aforesaid, nor shall any confirmation thereof be necessary; nor shall it be required of any spiritual person applying for any such licence or dispensation to give any caution or security by bond or otherwise before such licence or dispensation is granted; and if the said Archbishop of Canterbury shall refuse or deny to grant any such licence or dispensation as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, if she, by the advice of her Privy Council, shall think fit, upon application by the person to whom such licence or dispensation shall have been refused or denied, to enjoin the said Archbishop to grant such licence or dispensation, or to show to Her Majesty in Council sufficient cause to the contrary, and thereupon to make such order touching the refusal or grant of such licence or dispensation, as to Her Majesty in Council shall seem fit; and such order shall be binding upon the Archbishop.

VII. And be it further enacted, that where any spiritual person shall be desirous of obtaining a licence or dispensation for holding together any two benefices, such spiritual person shall, previously to applying for the grant of such licence or dispensation, deliver to the bishop of the diocese where both benefices are situate in the same diocese, or to the bishops of the two dioceses where such benefices are situate in different dioceses, a statement in writing under his hand, verified as such bishop or bishops respectively may require, according to a form or forms to be promulgated from time to time by the Archbishop of Canterbury and approved by the Queen in Council, in which statement such spiritual person shall set forth, according to the best of his belief, the yearly income arising from each of the said benefices, separately, on an average of the three years ending on the twenty-ninth day of September next before the date of such statement, and the sources from which such income is derived, and also the yearly amount, on an average of the same period of three years, of all taxes, rates, tenths, dues, and other permanent charges and outgoings to which the same benefices are respectively subject, and also the amount of the population of each of the said benefices, to be computed according to the last returns made under the authority of parliament, and also the distance between the two benefices, to be computed according to the last returns made under the authority of parliament, and also the distance between the two benefices, to be computed according to the directions of this Act; and it shall be lawful for the bishop to whom such statement shall be delivered to make any inquiry which he may think right as to the correctness of the same in respect to the benefices or benefice within his diocese; and such bishop is hereby required, within the space of one month after he shall have received such statement as aforesaid, to transmit to the Archbishop of Canterbury a certificate under his hand, in which certificate such bishop shall set forth or shall annex thereto a copy of the statement delivered to him as aforesaid, and shall thereby certify the amount at which he considers that the annual value and the population of each of the two benefices (where both benefices are situate in the same diocese) and the distance of the said two benefices from each other, or the amount at which he considers the annual value and the population of the benefice within the diocese of such bishop (where the two benefices are situate in different dioceses) and the distance of such benefice from the other benefice, ought to be taken, with respect to the licence or dispensation in question; and whenever both or either of the benefices shall be in the diocese or jurisdiction of the Archbishop of Canterbury, a certificate shall be made out in manner aforesaid by the Archbishop, and shall be retained by him.

VIII. And be it further enacted, that in esti-imating the annual value of any benefice for the purpose of any such certificate as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the archbishop or bishop by whom such certificate shall be made, and every such archbishop and bishop is hereby directed, to deduct from the gross amount of the yearly income arising from such benefice all taxes, rates, tenths, dues, and other permanent charges and outgoings to which such benefice shall be subject, but not to deduct or allow for any stipend or stipends to any stipendiary curate or curates, nor for such taxes or rates in respect of the house of residence on any benefice or of the glebe land belonging thereto as are usually paid by tenants or occupiers, nor for moneys expended in the repair or improvement of the house of residence and buildings and fences belonging thereto.

IX. And be it further enacted, that the certificate or certificates to be transmitted to or retained by the Archbishop of Canterbury as aforesaid shall be deposited in the said office of faculties, and in the event of the required licence or dispensation being granted, shall for the purposes of this Act be conclusive evidence of the annual value and population of each of the benefices to which the same shall relate, and of their distance from each other; and the registrar of the faculties shall and he is hereby required to produce such certificate or certificates to any person who may require to inspect the same.

X. And be it further enacted, that for all the other purposes of this Act the annual value of all benefices shall be the net annual value thereof, to be estimated in the same manner as is hereinbefore directed for the purpose of any such certificate as aforesaid; and that it shall be lawful for the court before whom any suit shall be depending for the recovery of any penalty or forfeiture under this Act, and for any bishop acting under any of the provisions of this Act, to make or cause to be made such inquiries and call for such evidence as such court or bishop shall think fit, and otherwise to proceed upon the best information which such court or bishop may be able to procure for estimating in manner aforesaid the annual value of any benefice; and with respect to the same, the decision of such court or of such bishop, founded on such evidence or other information, shall be final and conclusive, save when appealed from in due course of law.

XI. And be it enacted, that if any spiritual person, holding any cathedral preferment or benefice, shall accept any other cathedral preferment or benefice, and be admitted, instituted, or licensed to the same contrary to the provisions of this Act, every cathedral preferment or benefice so previously held by him shall be and become ipso facto void, as if he had died or had resigned the same, any law, statute, canon, usage, custom, or dispensation to the contrary notwithstanding; and if any spiritual person holding any two or more benefices shall accept any cathedral preferment, or any other benefice, or if any spiritual person holding two or more cathedral preferments shall accept any benefice, or if any spiritual person holding any cathedral preferment or preferments, and benefice or benefices, shall accept another benefice, he shall, before he is instituted, licensed, or in any way admitted to the said cathedral preferment or benefice, in writing under his hand declare to the bishop or bishops within whose diocese or dioceses any of the cathedral preferments or benefices previously held by him are situate, which cathedral preferment and benefice, or which two benefices, (such two benefices being tenable together under the provisions of this Act,) he proposes to hold together, and a duplicate of such declaration shall by such spiritual person be transmitted to the registry of the diocese, and be there filed; and immediately upon any such spiritual person being instituted, licensed, or in any way admitted to the cathedral preferment or benefice which he shall have accepted as aforesaid, such cathedral preferment or preferments, benefice or benefices as he previously held, and as he shall not as aforesaid have declared his intention to hold, or such benefice as shall not be tenable under the provisions of this Act with such newly-accepted benefice, shall be and become ipso facto void, as if he had died or had resigned the same; and if such spiritual person shall in any such case refuse or wilfully omit to make such declaration as aforesaid, every cathedral preferment and benefice which he previously held shall be and become ipso facto void as aforesaid: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect the provision hereinbefore made with respect to archdeacons, or with respect to spiritual persons holding, with any cathedral preferment, and with or without a benefice, offices in the same cathedral or collegiate church.

XII. And be it enacted, that nothing hereinbefore contained shall be construed to prejudice or affect the right of possession in any cathedral preferment or benefice to which any spiritual person shall have been collated, admitted, instituted, or licensed, or which shall have been otherwise granted to any spiritual person before the passing of this Act, unless he shall after the passing of this Act accept or take some cathedral preferment or benefice contrary to the provisions of this Act.

XIII. And be it enacted, that nothing in this Act contained shall be construed to prevent any spiritual person possessed of one or more than one benefice at the time of the passing of this Act, and to whom or in trust for whom the advowson of or the next presentation or nomination to any other benefice has been conveyed, granted, or devised by any deed or will made before the twenty-third day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-seven, from taking the said last-mentioned benefice, and holding together such benefice and any one such first-mentioned benefice (although the benefices to be held together be not within the limits nor under the joint yearly value, nor the population thereof under the amount, prescribed by this Act), but so nevertheless that the said two benefices be such as might have been held together before the passing of this Act by dispensation duly granted and confirmed; and the bishop of the diocese in which such second or other benefice is situate shall and may, after a licence or dispensation shall have been obtained by such spiritual person as is by this Act required for holding two benefices together, admit, institute, or license such spiritual person thereto, any thing herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding; unless such spiritual person, after the passing of this Act, and before he shall be so admitted, instituted, or licensed to such second or other benefice as aforesaid, shall have accepted and taken any cathedral preferment or any other benefice, the holding of which with such second or other benefice would be contrary to the provisions of this Act.

XIV. Provided also, and be it enacted, that nothing hereinbefore contained shall be construed to prevent the Reverend Frederick Vernon Lockwood, the Reverend Edward Repton, or the Reverend Temple Frere, formerly chaplains to the House of Commons, from taking and holding with any benefice of which any of them was in possession at the time of the passing of this Act, any cathedral preferment, or any benefice which may be conferred on them or either of them by Her Majesty in consideration of their respective services as such chaplains, although any such benefices be not within the limits nor under the joint yearly value, nor the population thereof under the amount, prescribed by this Act.

XV. And whereas it is expedient to alter and amend the provisions made by an Act passed in the thirty-seventh year of the reign of King Henry the Eighth, intituled "An Act for the union of churches not exceeding the value of six pounds;" and by another Act passed in the seventeenth year of the reign of King Charles the Second, intituled "An Act for uniting churches in cities and towns corporate;" be it enacted, that the said last-recited Acts shall be and the same are hereby repealed.

XVI. And be it enacted, that whenever it shall appear to the archbishop of the province, with respect to his own diocese, and whenever it shall be represented to him by the bishop of any diocese, or by the bishops of any two dioceses, that two or more benefices, or that one or more benefice or benefices, and one or more spiritual sinecure rectory or rectories, vicarage or vicarages, in his or their diocese or dioceses, being either in the same parish or contiguous to each other, and of which the aggregate population shall not exceed one thousand five hundred persons, and the aggregate yearly value shall not exceed five hundred pounds, may with advantage to the interests of religion be united into one benefice, the said archbishop of the province shall inquire into the circumstances of the case; and if on such inquiry it shall appear to him that such union may be usefully made, and will not be of inconvenient extent, and that the patron or patrons of the said benefices, sinecure rectory or rectories, vicarage or vicarages respectively is or are consenting thereto, such consent being signified in writing under the hands of such patron or patrons, the said archbishop shall, six weeks before certifying such inquiry and consent to Her Majesty as hereinafter directed, cause, with respect to his own diocese, a statement in writing of the facts, and in other cases a copy in writing of the aforesaid representation, to be affixed on or near the principal outer door of the church, or in some public and conspicuous place in each of such benefices, sinecure rectories, or vicarages, with notice to any person or persons interested, that he, she, or they may, within such six weeks, show cause in writing under his, her, or their hand or hands to the said archbishop against such union, and if no sufficient cause be shown within such time, the said archbishop shall certify the inquiry and consent aforesaid to Her Majesty in Council, and thereupon it shall be lawful for Her Majesty in Council to make and issue an order or orders for uniting such benefices, sinecure rectory or rectories, vicarage or vicarages, into one benefice, with cure of souls, for ecclesiastical purposes only; and it shall be lawful for Her Majesty in Council to give directions for regulating the course and succession in which the patrons, if there be more than one patron, shall present or nominate to such united benefice from time to time as the same shall become vacant, and for determining, if such united benefice shall be in two dioceses, to which of such dioceses such benefice shall belong; and such order or orders shall be registered in the registry or registries of the diocese or respective dioceses to which such united benefice shall be determined to belong, and to which either or any of the united benefices, sinecure rectories, or vicarages shall have belonged when separate, which order or orders the registrar or registrars of such diocese or respective dioceses, immediately on the receipt thereof, are hereby required to register accordingly; and such order or orders shall thenceforth be binding on all parties whatsoever; and if at the time of the registration of such order or orders all the benefices, sinecure rectories, or vicarages ordered to be united shall not be holden by the same incumbent, then if any of such benefices, sinecure rectories, or vicarages shall at such time be vacant, and if not, then upon every avoidance, until all the said benefices, sinecure rectories, or vicarages but one shall come to be holden by the same incumbent, the patron of the vacant benefice or benefices, sinecure rectory or rectories, vicarage or vicarages, shall be bound to present or nominate, and the bishop shall be bound to admit and institute or license, to the vacant benefice or benefices, sinecure rectory or rectories, vicarage or vicarages, the incumbent of the other or one of the other benefices, sinecure rectory or rectories, vicarage or vicarages so ordered to be united; and if both or all, as the case may be, shall be holden by the same incumbent at the time of the registration of such order or orders, or all but one of the said benefices, sinecure rectories, or vicarages shall at such time be vacant, then immediately, or otherwise on the first avoidance of either or any of such benefices, sinecure rectories, or vicarages, after all but one shall have come to be holden by the same incumbent, the said benefices, sinecure rectory or rectories, vicarage or vicarages shall become permanently united together, and shall be and be deemed and taken to be one benefice, with cure of souls, to all intents and purposes, unless and until the same shall be afterwards disunited in the manner hereinafter enacted: provided always, that notwithstanding any such union the parishes or places of which such united benefice shall consist shall continue distinct as to all secular rates, taxes, charges, duties, and privileges, and in all other respects except as hereinbefore specified.

XVII. And be it enacted, that when it shall further appear to the archbishop of the province, with respect to his own diocese, or it shall be further represented to him by the bishop of any other diocese, that the total income of any benefice or benefices, sinecure rectory or rectories, vicarage or vicar-ages, proposed to be united as aforesaid, would be larger than sufficient for the due maintenance and support of the incumbent of the benefice when united, and that the whole or some specified part or parts of the glebe lands, tithes, rent-charges, tenements, and hereditaments belonging to the benefice or benefices, sinecure rectory or rectories, vicarage or vicarages proposed to be united, or any of them, might and could, with advantage to the interests of religion, be excepted out of such union, and be exchanged for certain other lands, tithes, tenements, and hereditaments, or any of them, in some other specified benefice situate in the same diocese, and having no competent provision belonging thereto, and that the lands, tithes, tenements, or hereditaments proposed to be given in exchange for such excepted lands, tithes, rent-charges, tenements, or hereditaments might with like advantage be granted, conveyed, and assured as a further perpetual endowment for the incumbent of such last-mentioned benefice, and that the patron or patrons of the said benefice or benefices, sinecure rectory or rectories, vicarage or vicarages respectively, and the incumbent or incumbents for the time being thereof respectively, or of such thereof as shall not be then vacant, and the owner or owners, impropricator or impropricators of such lands, tithes, tenements, or hereditaments respectively so proposed to be given in exchange is or are consenting thereto, such consent to be signified in writing under their respective hands, it shall be lawful for the said archbishop, after inquiring into such further matter, to certify in like manner as aforesaid such further circumstances to Her Majesty in Council, and thereupon it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, in and by such order as aforesaid, or any other order or orders, to direct that such first-mentioned lands, tithes, rent-charges, tenements, and hereditaments shall be excepted out of such united benefice, and be granted, conveyed, and assured unto such owner or owners, impropricator or impropricators as aforesaid, in exchange for an equal value of lands, tithes, tenements, or other hereditaments situate or arising within the limits of such benefice, to be by such owner or owners, impropricator or impropricators, granted, conveyed, and assured for the further endowment of such other benefice; and such order or orders shall be registered in the register of the diocese to which such united benefice and other benefice shall belong, and which order or orders the registrar of such diocese, immediately on the receipt thereof, is hereby required to register accordingly, and such order or orders shall thenceforth be binding on all parties whatsoever; and such lands, tithes, tenements, and hereditaments, so directed to be granted, conveyed, and assured to such owner or owners, impropricator or impropricators as aforesaid, shall, immediately upon and after the execution and enrolment in manner hereinafter directed of the deed or deeds, instrument or instruments hereinafter mentioned, be for ever freed and discharged of and from all estate, right, title, and interest whatsoever of all and every the incumbent or incumbents for the time being of the said benefices, sinecure rectory or rectories, vicarage or vicarages so to be united, and become and be subject and liable in every respect to all and singular the uses, trusts, estates, and charges of or to which the lands, tithes, rent-charges, tenements, or other hereditaments so granted, conveyed, or assured by such owner or owners, impropricator or impropricators, for such further endowment as aforesaid, may at the time of such execution have been subject or liable; and that such last-mentioned lands, tithes, rent-charges, tenements, or other hereditaments, so granted, conveyed, and assured by such owner or owners, impropricator or impropricators, for such further endowment as aforesaid, shall in like manner become and be for ever annexed to such other benefice for the further endowment of which the same shall be so granted, conveyed, and assured, and be held and enjoyed for ever by the incumbent for the time being thereof, as part of the endowment thereof, freed and discharged of and from all uses, trusts, estates, and charges whatsoever to which the same respectively or any part thereof were or was before subject or liable.

PROTEST.

To the Honourable the Court of Directors of the East India Company.

We, the undersigned Proprietors of East India Stock, having considered the following Resolution proposed by the Court of Directors at the last General Quarterly Court holden on the 22nd of March, 1838, and then passed in the affirmative, namely—

“Resolved, that this Court deem the continued public discussion of questions affecting the religious feelings of the natives of India to be fraught with danger, and that the settlement of such questions may be most safely and properly left with a responsible executive,”

Do hereby protest against our rights and privileges as proprietors being precluded by the above-mentioned Resolution, inasmuch as we consider the same to be neither in accordance with the charter or bye-laws by which the East India Company is governed, nor to be consistent with the policy or interests of the said Company. As witness our hands the 2nd day of April, 1838.

PARLIAMENTARY INTELLIGENCE.

August 16, 1838.

The Parliament was this day prorogued, when Her Majesty in person delivered the following speech:—

“My Lords and Gentlemen,
“The state of public business enables me to close this protracted and laborious session.

“I have to lament that the civil war in Spain forms an exception to the general tranquillity. I continue to receive from all foreign powers the strongest assurances of their desire to maintain with me the most amicable relations.

“The disturbances and insurrections which had unfortunately broken out in Upper and Lower Canada have been promptly suppressed, and I entertain a confident hope that firm and judicious measures will empower you to restore a constitutional form of government, which unhappy events have compelled you for a time to suspend.

“I rejoice at the progress which has been made in my colonial possessions towards the entire abolition of negro apprenticeship.

“I have observed with much satisfaction the attention which you have bestowed upon the amendment of the domestic institutions of the country. I trust that the mitigation of the law of Imprisonment for Debt will prove at once favourable to the liberty of my subjects, and safe for commercial credit; and that the Established Church will derive increased strength and efficiency from the restriction of the granting of benefices in plurality.

“I have felt great pleasure in giving my assent to the Bill for the relief of the destitute poor in Ireland. I cherish the expectation that its provisions have been so cautiously framed, and will be so prudently executed, that whilst they contribute to relieve distress, they will tend to preserve order, and to encourage habits of industry and exertion.

“I trust, likewise, that the Act which you have passed relating to the Compositions for Tithes in Ireland will increase the security of that property, and promote internal peace.

“Gentlemen of the House of Commons,
“I cannot sufficiently thank you for your dispatch and liberality in providing for the expenses of my household and the maintenance of the honour and dignity of the Crown.
“I offer you my warmest acknowledgments for the addition which you have made to the income of my beloved mother.

“I thank you for the supplies which you have voted for the ordinary public service, as well as for the readiness with which you have provided means to meet the extraordinary expenses rendered necessary by the state of my Canadian possessions.

“My Lords and Gentlemen,
“The many useful measures which you have been able to consider, while the settlement of the Civil List and the state of Canada demanded so much of your attention, are a satisfactory proof of your zeal for the public good. You are so well acquainted with the duties which now devolve upon you in your respective counties, that it is unnecessary to remind you of them. In the discharge of them you may securely rely upon my firm support, and it only remains to express an humble hope that Divine Providence may watch over us all, and prosper our united efforts for the welfare of our country.”

LAW.

ON THE LEGALITY OF CHURCH RATES.

DECISION OF THE CHANCELLOR OF THE DIOCESE OF YORK.

In the Ecclesiastical Court of York, in giving judgment in the Wakefield church-rate case, the chancellor (G. H. Vernon, Esq.), lately made the following observations, which were important, as applying to all church-rates. He said that he was aware that, on a former occasion, he was distinctly of opinion that it was not a competent defence to a suit for subtraction of church-rates for the defendant to plead “that certain items in the estimates were illegal; that those estimates not being upon bills actually paid, the party was not entitled to take notice of what the churchwardens held forth as their intention to pay; but that, should any illegal payments be made, the money might be recovered afterwards.” He had since found reason to adopt a different opinion; and the sanction of certain decisions in the courts above led him to retract so much of what he had held forth to the public on that occasion, and to announce his present opinion, that if churchwardens brought forward certain estimates, announced their intention of making certain payments, and laid a rate, and the majority of the parish agreed to a rate founded on those estimates, which included illegal items, resistance might be made to that rate, if those illegal items should form any such considerable proportion as should cause the court to think it worth while to make the objection. It was undoubtedly unfortunate, that it must always remain in the breast of the court what proportion would constitute the illegality which would make it invalid; but it had been over and over again laid down, that small matters of illegality would not do this, while larger would. —York Chronicle.

PEWS IN CHURCHES.

As pews in old churches have sometimes been sold, the following paragraph, copied from a London evening Paper, may probably prevent a repetition of this illegal practice:—“As it has been a constant practice to sell and buy pews in ancient parish churches, we think it may be worth while to state that the practice is totally contrary to law; and that the seller can give no title. ‘There is no such thing in law,’ says Anderson, ‘as selling pews.’ ‘There is one clause in this faculty,’ says Sir Wm. Scott, in the case of Stevens v. Woodhouse, ‘which is plainly illegal—a permission to parties to sell seats: this is a practice which may have prevailed frequently, but it has been constantly disapproved by this court. Pews may be sold in chapels which are private property, but in old parish churches such acts are contrary to the law of the land.’ Dr. Phillimore says, ‘It appears that the pews in this church have been bought and sold, and bequeathed by will; and that the guarantee has considered he might deal with them as with an estate held in fee-simple. These notions are perfectly erroneous. The sale of pews in a parish church is invalid and illegal. As it is unlawful for private individuals to sell, so it is unlawful for them to let, pews. The disposal of pews rests with the churchwardens, who are the officers of the bishop.’ ‘The distribution of the seats,’ says Sir John Nicholl, ‘rests with the ordinary (the bishop); the churchwardens are his officers, and they are to place the parishioners according to their rank and station.’ ‘It is evidently an illegal custom,’ says Sir William Scott, ‘that pews appurtenant to certain houses should be let by the owners to persons who are not inhabitants. If a pew is rightly appurtenant, the occupancy of it must pass with the house.’ ‘From all this,’ Anderson says, ‘it is clear that the owner of a pew cannot let it out for rent; for seats do not belong to persons not inhabitants; and if a parishioner entitled to a pew does not use it, it returns to the disposal of the churchwardens. It is also an error to suppose that pews are appurtenant to land; they are only appurtenant to houses. If the house falls, the appurtenance ceases. If the occupier does not go to church, the churchwardens may place another parishioner in the pew.’”

POSSESSION OF A PARSONAGE HOUSE BY A CURATE.

Mr. Alford, solicitor, of Salisbury, applied to the bench in behalf of the Rev. Mr. Adams, for a warrant, to compel the Rev. Mr. Richards, of Bower-Chalke, to quit and deliver up possession of the parsonage at that place to the aforesaid gentleman. It appeared that the Rev. Mr. Richards is superseded as curate of Bower-Chalke by the Rev. Mr. Adams, who has been duly licensed by the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Salisbury; that the reverend gentleman had been applied to to quit, but that he positively refused; and that, expecting considerable resistance, even by force of arms, the present application was made. Mr. Talford said, it was natural to assume that the reverend gentleman was remaining at the parsonage house under some contract, but that contract was, that he should remain in the house so long as he was required to perform the spiritual duties of the parish. But that contract, he contended, was now null and void, by the bishop duly licensing the Rev. Mr. Adams, as curate of that parish. The curate's stipend was 90l. per year; that was allowing the house to be worth 15l. per annum; it was therefore clear that the parsonage house formed part of the curate's salary, and over which, by the Act of Parliament, the bishop had controul. Mr. Alford then interrogated Mr. Adams as to his appointment, &c., and then called on one of the churchwardens to prove that the duplicate of the order then produced had been duly served by him on the reverend gentleman. The bench thought the application to be extremely novel, and without a precedent, and suggested the propriety of taking possession during the temporary absence of the reverend gentleman, leaving him to seek his remedy if he felt himself aggrieved. The churchwarden thought the reverend gentleman was too cautious for that plan to be carried into effect, and said he was aware that he had been offered money to quit, but without avail. The bench then granted the warrant. —Wills Standard.

METROPOLIS.

St. Peter's Church, Globe Road, Mile End.—This church, which has been erected entirely at the cost of the Metropolitan Churches' Fund, and contains 1300 sittings, more than half of which are free, was consecrated by the Lord Bishop of London, on Thursday, the 16th August, in the presence of a very numerous congregation. The service was read by the Rev. Thomas Jackson, M.A., the minister of the church; and the sermon preached by the Bishop from Matt. v. 13. The Collections at the Consecration, and on the following Sunday, amounted to 115l.

Consecration of St. James's New Church, Ratcliff.—On Thursday, 23d August, another church, one of four lately erected in the populous parish of St. Dunstan, Stepney, was consecrated by the Bishop of London with the usual solemnities, similar to those observed in the preceding week at the consecration of St. Peter's, Mile End. St. James's church is a neat Gothic edifice, capable of accommodating 1200 persons: one half of the sittings are to be free, and the remainder will be let at reasonable prices. It is situated on a plot of ground adjoining Butcher-row, Broad-street, Ratcliff, and the interior is fitted up with much chasteness. The church was crowded to excess with the respectable inhabitants of the district, and there was a numerous attendance of the clergy. An appropriate sermon was preached by the Bishop of London on the occasion; after which the sum of 57l. 15s. was collected towards the expenses of a new organ. The erection of the new church has cost about 4500l. and the whole expense has been defrayed from the Metropolitan Churches' Fund.

The Bishop of London, since his translation to the see of London in 1828, has consecrated 56 churches and chapels. In the 10 previous years 31 were consecrated—showing an increase of 25.

Church Rates in Chelsea.—A Special Petty Sessions for the extensive parish of St. Luke, Chelsea, was held in the vestry-room of the new church, before Mr. W. B. France, and Capt. Bague, two of the local Magistrates, when upwards of 1300 summonses against defaulters on the church-rates of this parish came on for adjudication. The question of church rates has for a long time excited much angry feeling in Chelsea, arising principally from Captain Acklam, a county magistrate, having objected to certain items in the accounts of the church trustees, viz., such as the salaries of the organist, organ blower, &c. &c., which question was ultimately brought by appeal before the bench at the Middlesex Quarter Sessions, when the Magistrates decided that their power to interfere only extended to the accounts of church-wardens, and not to those of trustees. About that period proceedings were instituted against several of the defaulters, when scenes of a disorderly and riotous character occurred in the parish, which were at the time brought under judicial notice. Subsequently, a writ of mandamus has been obtained from the Court of Queen's Bench, to compel the Justices to hear the appeal, in which stage the matter at present rests. From the proceedings of Thursday it would however appear that the objection to the payment of church-rates was decreasing in that parish, not more than a tithe of the persons summoned attending to object, the principal portion of whom did so on the score of poverty, who were allowed a month's grace; a few also objected on the ground of religious scruples, among whom was a Jewess of the name of Norton, who contended that, as she never occupied the church, she had no right to pay; and one person only objected on the ground of the illegality of the rate. The whole of the parties, with only one exception, left satisfied with the decision of the Bench.

At a meeting of the parishioners of St. Saviour's, Southwark, recently held on the subject of a Church-rate (the further consideration of which was postponed for a week), it was stated that a few years ago some of the parishioners had thought proper to object to the payment of 200l. per annum for the services of a clergyman connected with the parish, contending that 100l. was an ample remuneration. The immediate consequence was an application to Parliament on the subject, and the ultimate result that, in addition to 1000l. expenses, the sum to be paid was settled at 300l., the recusants having a very narrow escape from a burthen of 400l.

It may be briefly mentioned with regard to the Church, that the increase in all its schools between the years 1831 and 1837 appears to be Sunday and daily schools 2,979 with 60,531 scholars, and 631 Sunday schools with 35,517 scholars, and that the total of schools and scholars was as follows, viz. —In 12,391 towns, parishes, villages, and hamlets which possessed schools of some description, there were

Sunday and daily Schools	10,152	with Scholars	514,450
Sunday Schools	6,068	ditto	438,280
Infant Schools	704	ditto	43,730

Total, Places 12,391, with Sch. 16,924 and Scholars 996,460 to which are to be added the union workhouse schools, and those in course of establishment by aid of the parliamentary grants."—Extract from the Report of the National Society, 1838.

The Rev. Dr. Huntley has presented 500l. as a donation to the charity school of the parish of Marylebone.

The Lord Bishop of Rochester has returned from Hanover, having satisfactorily fulfilled the object of his visit, the confirmation of the Crown Prince. The Rev. R. W. Jelf, Canon of Christ Church, who has for many years attended on his Royal Highness, as Preceptor, will remain at Hanover for some time longer.

PROVINCIAL.

A number of the residents of the diocese of Ripon have signed a requisition to the Bishop, expressing their wishes that he will call a public Meeting for the purpose of forming a diocesan Association in aid of building, enlarging, and endowing churches, the want of church accommodation being much felt in this diocese. The names of the Earls of Harewood and Scarborough head the list.

Episcopal Visitation at Leeds.—The Primary Visitation of the Bishop of Ripon at Leeds, took place on Wednesday, the 15th of August. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. Hook, Vicar of Leeds, from Acts, 7th chap. 26th verse—"Sirs, ye are brethren; why do ye wrong one to another?" The discourse was listened to with great attention; it comprised a lucid and interesting history of the Church and of the Reformation, and of the causes which had led to the diversity of opinion among professing Christians. We had intended to have given an outline of this discourse, but as we understand that the Vicar has complied with a request to publish it, we refrain from doing so. After the sermon, the names of the Clergy were called over, and the Bishop afterwards, seated in his chair of state, read his primary charge to the Clergy. We understand that, in compliance with a request made to his Lordship, the charge will also be published. The Bishop and the Clergy afterwards dined together at the Royal Hotel. —Leeds Intelligence.

At the Visitation dinner at Leeds, the Bishop of Ripon announced that it was his intention to consecrate seven new churches, recently erected within his diocese, in the month of October next.

The foundation stone of a new church, to be dedicated to the Holy Trinity, in Wakefield, was recently laid by the Lord Bishop of Ripon, with the customary ceremonial.

The Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol commenced his triennial Visitation in this city on Tuesday, August 21, when the Clergy of the city and deanery of Gloucester were visited in this cathedral. The sermon was preached by the Rev. C. H. Martin, Incumbent of Malmesbury. His Lordship delivered to a very numerous body of Clergy a most eloquent and luminous charge, entering very fully into many of the most important matters vitally affecting the interests of the Church. The Bishop afterwards invited all the Clergy of the city and deanery to dine with him, and nearly fifty partook of the hospitalities of the palace. On Wednesday his Lordship visited the Deanery of Winchcomb, at Cheltenham, and the sermon there was preached by the Rev. J. F. Christie, Rector of Badsworth with Shurdington. On Thursday, the Clergy of the Deanery of Stonehouse were visited at Stroud, at which place the sermon was preached by the Rev. W. H. B. Daubeny, the Incumbent of the newly-erected church of St. Matthew, near Stroud. Friday the Deanery of the Forest was visited at Newnham, when the sermon was preached by the Rev. J. Symons, the Vicar of Dymock. The Bishop also held a confirmation at Newnham for a few parishes in the neighbourhood. —Gloucestershire Chronicle.

An important decision was come to by the Bench of Magistrates, at Doncaster, by which it appears, that Romanists, Quakers, and Dissenters, are exempt from payment of toll, when going to and returning from their usual place of religious worship situate out of the parish.

We understand, and we believe on good authority, that the venerable Major Sir Robert Clayton, Bart., has invested in the bank of Messrs. Woodcock and Sons, Wigan, the munificent sum of 500l. towards an endowment to Christ Church, Addington, in addition to 200l., which he has given towards the building. We have heard also that Lady Clayton has kindly promised to give the communion-plate and books. —Blackburn Standard.

The Church Union Society of the diocese of Salisbury held its anniversary on Tuesday, Aug. 14, when a sermon, in aid of the objects of the institution, was preached at the cathedral by the Ven. Archdeacon of Sarum; after which a collection was made at the door, amounting to 30l. 15s. 10d. After divine service the members of the Society assembled at the school-room by St. Thomas's church. Prayers having been read, the secretary reported the proceedings of the past year, from which it appeared that, under the first division of the Society's objects, 104l. had been granted at the meeting of the Committee in June last to poor, aged, and infirm clergymen; under the second head, 150l. towards the erection of glebe-houses on small benefices of the diocese; and under the third department, 14l. to superannuated parish-clerks, making a total (the items of which have been already published) of 268l. to objects of the Society's bounty—a sum exceeding the grants of any preceding year, and leaving no petition (to the extent of the Society's means) unsatisfied; though it was confessed those means yielded a very scanty measure of charity to the necessities of the diocesan church. The treasury was quite inadequate to the full and liberal discharge of all its liabilities. —Sarum and Winton Journal.

There was a very full meeting of the Trustees of Blundell's School, Tiverton, on Tuesday, Aug. 21, among whom were the Right Hon. the Earl of Devon, and the Right Hon. Lord Rolle. The compositions and recitations of the young gentlemen educating at this ancient seat of classical and sound learning were most satisfactory, and reflect the greatest credit on the talented and respected Masters. The prizes were awarded as follows:—The Scholarship of Balliol College, Oxford, to Fred. Temple, son of the late Octavius Temple, Esq., late Governor of Sierra Leone; the Scholarship of Sydney Sussex College, Cambridge, to Charles Elton, son of James Elton, Esq., of Tiverton; the Exhibition to G. Turner, son of the Rev. John Turner, Rector of Ashbrittle, Somersetshire; Composition Medal, to Robert Lauson, of Tiverton; and the Speaking Medal, to Charles Elton.

On Sunday, the 26th of August, a most impressive sermon was preached in St. Peter's church, Tiverton, by the Rev. Prebendary Bartholomew, Chaplain to the Bishop of Exeter, and a collection made in aid of the funds of the Tiverton and Bampton District Committee of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, the collection amounted to upwards of 20l. In the last three or four years the Society has been gaining ground rapidly in this neighbourhood; the annual subscriptions having more than doubled in that time, and the circulation increased from 760 to 2719. —(From a Correspondent.)

St. James's Church, Bradford.—A number of friends of the Church of England, admiring the Christian and patriotic conduct of John Wood, Esq., in erecting, at great pecuniary cost, and also liberally endowing, a church in the populous town of Bradford, have subscribed about 120l. to purchase a service of communion plate, to be presented to Mr. Wood, for the use of St. James's Church. —Manchester Courier.

Queen's College, Oxford.—We feel the highest gratification in being able to state, upon authority in which we can place confidence, that the memorials which have been forwarded from Cumberland and Westmoreland to the heads of Queen's College, Oxford, have produced the desired effect, and that the exclusive privileges heretofore enjoyed by the natives of these two counties, at the college in question, will be continued to them. We trust that the agitation of this question will give such an impetus to education in this and the adjoining county as will prevent a renewal of the complaint of the want of the requisite amount of attainments on the part of the candidates for the honours of Queen's College. —Carlisle Patriot.

Church Rates.—The opposition to a church-rate in Trinity parish, Cambridge, has failed, the sixpenny rate, proposed by Mr. Claydon, the senior churchwarden, having been carried, after a two days' poll, by a majority of fifty-three, the numbers being 166 for the rate, and 113 against it. —Cambridge Chronicle.

A subscription has been set on foot, headed by the Archbishop and the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, for the purpose of raising a sufficient sum to erect a church, and clergyman's residence, in the village of Dunkirk. —Kentish Observer.—[The place where the riots of Thom and his deluded party recently took place.]

New Churches in the Diocese of St. Asaph.—The new church at Greenfield, near Mold, which contains 534 sittings, two-thirds of which are free, was consecrated by the Bishop of St. Asaph on Monday, the 20th of August. On Tuesday his Lordship consecrated the new church at Brymbo, in the parish of Wrexham; and on Wednesday performed the same ceremony at the new church at Cefn Cyehan, near Ruabon; on Thursday he also repeated the same rite at Rhyl y Croean, in the parish of Llanfyllin, near Oswestry; and on Friday his Lordship completed his interesting labours, by consecrating the new church recently erected by a liberal individual in the parish of Llanfawr, near Bala.

At the seat of Lord Lyttelton, at Hagley, a bazaar was held in order to increase the funds for building a new church, towards which the sum of 1,450l. was raised. —Worcester Journal.

Consecration of St. John's Chapel, Uxbridge Moor.—On Monday, Aug. 27, the solemn and interesting ceremony of consecrating a new chapel and burial-ground took place on Uxbridge Moor, in the parish of Hillingdon. The chapel, which is a very neat and commodious structure, was built by voluntary contributions, aided by a grant from the Incorporated Society for Promoting the Building of New Churches and Chapels, and is calculated to afford sittings to four hundred persons, more than one-half of which are free and unappropriated. A permanent gallery has not yet been erected; but a temporary one, constructed for the occasion, demonstrates the facility with which a permanent one may hereafter be added, if the present accommodation should be found insufficient. The chapel was crowded in every part, and the large attendance both of clergy and laity evinced the interest which is very generally felt in this most important and necessary work. The service (except where it was otherwise appointed) was read by the Rev. Henry Campbell, M.A., Minister of the Chapel. The Communion Service was read by the Bishop and his chaplain. A very able and eloquent sermon, which was listened to with the utmost attention by the crowded auditory, was then preached by the Bishop from John xx. 19th verse, and a collection was made in aid of the funds of the chapel, which produced 50l. After consecrating the chapel, the Bishop proceeded to consecrate the burial-ground; and when that ceremony was over, the Bishop, preceded by the Committee, Chapel-wardens of Uxbridge, and Churchwardens of Hillingdon, and attended by the Clergy, proceeded to consecrate a piece of ground adjoining the burial-ground at Uxbridge, which has been recently inclosed and added to it. His Lordship, after thanking the Clergy for their attendance, and the Committee for the excellence of their arrangements, took an early leave, having to consecrate a burial-ground at Hanwell in the afternoon, making the unprecedented number of four consecrations in one day.

The ceremony of laying the first stone of the new church at Ashby-de-la-Zouch, which was performed by Earl Howe, took place on Saturday, August 25. The funds for building this church were raised by a subscription, headed by the Rev. Marmaduke Vavasour, M.A., vicar—a grant of 450l. from the Incorporated Society for Promoting the Enlargement, Building, and Repairing of Churches and Chapels, and 400l. from the Church Commissioners, secure for ever to the poor of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, 600 free sittings. John Marmaduke, John Davys, churchwardens; H. I. Stevens, architect. At six o'clock a party of about seventy gentlemen sat down to dinner at the Royal Hotel. The Right Hon. Earl Howe occupied the chair. Several addresses were delivered during the evening, and the meeting, which was a very interesting and agreeable one, broke up about ten o'clock. —Derby Mercury.

The new church at Donisthorpe was consecrated on Saturday, August 25, by the Lord Bishop of Lincoln, on behalf of the Bishop of Lichfield, in the presence of Earl Howe, and a numerous body of the gentry and clergy of the neighbourhood. This very neat country church, built of Harlshorne stone, has been provided in great measure, by the munificent contributions of those valued friends of our beloved church, the Misses Moore, of Appleby. These excellent ladies, besides a bell, church clock, and other fittings for the church, gave, in the first instance, 1500l. towards the erection and endowment of this house of prayer, and are now building at a short distance from the church, a commodious parsonage, for the residence of its future minister. Sir John Brown Cave, Bart., of Stretton-le-field, subscribed 200l., and C. S. Greaves, Esq., gave an acre of land for the site. The Marquess of Hastings, on behalf of the village of Molra, besides a subscription of 200l. gives a rent-charge of 30l. per year for ever, thus securing a second service and sermon in the church at all times. —Leicester Journal.

Church Rates.—On Thursday last, a numerous and highly respectable meeting was held in the vestry of the parish church of Halifax, for the purpose of laying a church-rate. The venerable Archdeacon Musgrave, D.D., the chairman, opened the business of the meeting by briefly stating the object for which they had assembled. Mr. Pollit, one of the churchwardens, read over the items, amounting together to the sum of 102l. 4s. 8d. It was then proposed and seconded that a rate for that sum should be laid. Mr. Foster, a delegate from Sowerby, moved as an amendment that the sense of the meeting should be taken upon each item, which was readily acquiesced in by the worthy chairman, although the amendment was not seconded; and upon each item being put, for and against, not a single hand was held up in opposition, and the rate was consequently carried unanimously. There were very few of the anti-church party present. When a church rate was asked for last year, the town was placarded with bills, calling upon the Dissenters to be at their posts, notwithstanding which they were then outvoted in number. This year they have acted more prudently. —Leeds Intelligence.

Bedford, Aug. 28.—A meeting was this day held in Bedford, in aid of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, being the commencement of a series of annual meetings for that most desirable object. Divine service was performed in St. Paul's church, and the sermon, a very able and eloquent one, and which is to be printed for the benefit of the Society, was preached by the Rev. Dr. Bonney, archdeacon of Bedfordshire. The meeting was held, after service, at the Bedford-rooms, and Earl de Grey, Lord Lieutenant of the county, presided. A vast proportion of the nobility, clergy, and gentry of the county were present; amongst others, Lord Ogleby, Lord Charles Russell, Mr. Baron Parke, Hon. and Rev. Mr. Cust, Mr. Pym, the High Sheriff, Mr. Charles Payne, Mr. Thomas Charles Higgins, the Mayor of Bedford, &c. A variety of resolutions were proposed, and the meeting went off with exceeding effect. The collection after the sermon was upwards of 60l., after the meeting about 40l., and an increase of about 30 guineas a-year in annual subscriptions, which now raises the number of subscribers in Bedfordshire to nearly 80.

Bristol, Aug. 29.—We are informed that Charles Bathurst, Esq., of Lydney Park, has forwarded to the Diocesan Church Building Association, through the hands of the Lord Bishop, the President, the munificent donation of 1000l. towards the endowment of the proposed new church at Cinderford, in the Forest of Dean. We are much gratified to learn the success which has attended the Church Building Association, more than 14,000l. have already been subscribed, of which sum nearly one-third has been contributed by the clergy.

Church-Rates.—Never, perhaps, was there a more signal victory achieved by the friends of order and religion than in the case of church-rates. We need not remind our readers of the efforts which a year or two ago were made, too often with success, to defeat the making of a rate, whereas now it is a rare event to find the friends of the church on the losing side. Much was owing formerly, no doubt, to trickery in one case and despondency in the other; but, be this as it may, the fact is undoubted that church-rates were a year or two ago refused, whereas they are granted now.—Brighton Gaz.

The first stone of Tipton church, in the parish of Ottery St. Mary, was laid on Friday last, by the Venerable the Archdeacon of Exeter. The Rev. Gentleman was attended by a large party of clergy and laity, and the arrangements on the ground were so good that the whole of the ceremony was witnessed by upwards of 1,500 persons, whose deep attention and serious demeanour gave additional interest to the proceedings.—Western Luminary.

The Churchwardens of Brandon, Norfolk, have presented the Rev. C. J. Orman (late Curate of that parish) with an elegant silver tea-pot, subscribed for by the inhabitants, as a testimony of esteem. It bears the following inscription, beautifully executed:—"Presented to the Rev. C. J. Orman, M.A., by the parishioners of Brandon, in gratitude for his services as their Minister during a period of eight years, A.D. 1838."

The Lord Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol appears to have given great satisfaction by the practice he has adopted of holding confirmations in several of the more retired parishes of his diocese. This practice has been of great use, and exceedingly convenient to our rural population, many of whom have availed themselves of the opportunity so afforded them of being confirmed, which they might have neglected had they been obliged to walk a long distance to some central town.—Wills and Gloucestershire Standard.

The Bazaar, in aid of the new church at Middleborough, has proved extremely prosperous. We are informed that upwards of 600l. were taken on the first day, and that at the close of the second day, this receipts exceeded 1000l.—Durham Advertiser.

IRELAND.

The sum of 1,300l. has been already subscribed, to found a Professorship of the Irish language at Trinity College, Dublin, including 1000l. from the Lord Primate, and 300l. from the Archbishop of Tuam. The Board of Fellows will give chambers and 500l. a-year to the Professor. About 400l. more will complete this desirable object.

The following clergymen of the diocese of Meath have challenged an equal number of priests to meet them in controversial discussion:—Rev. Messrs. R. Radcliffe, E. Nixon, S. Magee, R. Noble, W. H. Irvine, H. Leddard, G. L. Irvine, R. George, J. W. Charlton, W. G. Harman, T. Moriarty, J. R. Barnes, W. Tighe and M. Fox, Rector and Curates of the establishment. They pledge themselves to prove the Church of Rome an apostasy, her worship idolatry, and her confession demoralising.

The Rev. Richard Wright, of Killinacool, county of Louth, upon the decease of his late parish clerk, who was murdered near his door, took under his care one of the deceased's sons, William, with a view to plant him in his father's situation, and for that purpose sent him to a Protestant school, near Glydefarm. On Friday last, while on his way from school, the lad, above fifteen years of age, was followed by five men, who overtook him near Corballis, and compelled him to swear he would never go again to any but the national school, and that he should never again be seen at church. This is a specimen of the working of the system for extirpation of Protestantism. The dominion of popery in Louth is nearly complete.—Limerick Standard.

COLONIAL.

The Church, in Canada.—The following is an extract from a letter, written by the Rev. G. D. Cartwright, Chaplain to the late Bishop of Quebec, on the subject of the wants of the Church in Upper Canada:—

"The numbers who have within a few years emigrated from Great Britain and Ireland to Upper Canada, may be inferred from the fact, that the population, which in 1784 was computed at 10,000 may now be stated at 350,000, or, perhaps, nearly 400,000.

"There are at present in Upper Canada, about sixty clergymen, most of whom regularly officiate to two, and some to three, or even more congregations. Of these twenty-six receive a stipend of 1700l.; twenty-one others, 1000l.; and of the rest, two are paid by the congregations they serve; two by the generous exertions of the Rev. Mr. Waddilove, of Beacon-Grange, Henham, nephew of the late Bishop of Quebec; three are missionaries of a Society established in the province, and three by the Upper Canada Clergy Society of London. But how totally inadequate these are to the wants of the province may be inferred without much difficulty.

"Imagine a country extending from Amherstburgh, in the west, to Coteau du Lac, in the east, upwards of 500 miles, with only sixty clergymen of the Church of England. With such a scanty number of labourers, to meet the wants of the members of our church, who may be reckoned at 150,000, must be impossible. A few details will show plainly what our people endure. In 1831, while residing with the late Bishop of Quebec, as his chaplain, I was directed by his lordship to visit the town of Tecumseh, forty-two miles from Toronto. Having appointed a Sunday, I drove, on the Saturday previous, to the house of a respectable settler, near the centre of the township, where I was to pass the night; and the next day being remarkably fine, I preached to a very large congregation, chiefly Irish Protestants; administered the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper to thirty-four communicants; and baptised twenty-two children. These poor people, who were, indeed, as sheep having no shepherd, had not seen a clergyman for a year. I cannot attempt to describe the greeting with which I was welcomed; and, I assure you, there was no inconsiderable difficulty in declining the proffers of hospitality which, on every side, solicited my acceptance.—These people, I am thankful to say, have now a resident minister, the Rev. Mr. Ossler, who has been sent by the Upper Canada Clergy Society, and who arrived in June last. Nor is this a solitary instance of spiritual destitution under which emigrants from the mother-country labour. The accounts of the Rev. Adam Elliott, travelling missionary in the home district, in his reports to the Society for Converting and Civilising the Indians, and the Propagation of the Gospel amongst the Destitute Settlers in Upper Canada, asserts, that ten clergymen at least are required for that district alone. The Rev. Mr. Harper, travelling missionary in the midland district, under the same Society, gives a similar testimony; and, when it is considered that there are eleven districts in Upper Canada, it is, surely, no exaggeration to declare that, at this moment, nearly 100 additional clergymen are necessary to supply the members of our communion with the regular ministrations of the church of our fathers."

The following is the address of the Church of England Clergy of Upper Canada to his Excellency the Earl of Durham, with his lordship's reply:—

"To his Excellency the Right Hon. John George, Earl of Durham, Viscount Lambton, &c. &c., Knight, Grand Cross of the Most Hon. Military Order of the Bath, one of her Majesty's most Hon. Privy Council, and Governor General, Vice Admiral, and Captain General of all her Majesty's provinces within and adjacent to the continent of North America, &c."

"May it please your Excellency, "We, her Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the clergy of the Established Church of Upper Canada, beg leave to approach your Excellency with our cordial and sincere congratulations on your safe arrival in this province."

"A few weeks only have passed since your Excellency commenced the arduous duties of your exalted mission, and yet experience already justifies our confidence in your wisdom and ability, and calls forth our gratitude to our beloved Sovereign for having selected for the government of British North America, at this important crisis, a nobleman so well qualified to maintain the dignity of the empire and the character of her Majesty's representative."

"Deeply engaged in the duties of our sacred profession, and in strengthening the cause of order by our daily prayers and activity in diffusing religious knowledge, and those principles of piety, loyalty, and obedience to the laws, for which the Church of England has ever been distinguished, we behold with joy her rapid progress in the wilderness, notwithstanding the many difficulties she has to encounter; and our hearts are encouraged with the hope that, under your Excellency's kind auspices, these difficulties will be gently removed, without detriment or just cause of offence to any other denomination; and that under the nursing care of our beloved Queen, and in accordance with your Excellency's counsel, this magnificent province will in a short time be filled with churches and congregations, and a numerous clergy, ever prepared to support the cause of social order and to maintain our connexion with the parent state."

"Cherishing no other ambition than that of promoting the temporal and spiritual happiness of our people, and living in peace and harmony with our fellow-subjects, we fondly anticipate the greatest blessings from your Excellency's government, and earnestly hope that its remembrance may be embalmed in the grateful hearts of future generations."

"That Almighty God may take your Excellency into his holy keeping, and enlighten your mind with the spirit of wisdom, is the fervent prayer of the clergy of Upper Canada."

"In the name of the clergy of her Majesty's province of Upper Canada. "JOHN STRACHAN, D.D., LL.D., "Archdeacon of York."

HIS EXCELLENCY'S REPLY.

"I beg that the clergy of the Established Church will accept my best and most respectful acknowledgments for this testimony of their confidence in me. Such a tribute, coming from so venerable a body, is most gratifying."

"Deeply convinced, as I am, that states as well as individuals must prosper and deserve to flourish in proportion as their conduct is actuated by principles of pure religion, I shall always deem it a sacred duty to afford its ministers every encouragement in the exercise of their holy calling—knowing from long experience that their lives are scrupulously devoted to the practice of the tenets which they inculcate, and to the unwearied propagation of the eternal truths of Christianity."

LATE BISHOP OF QUEBEC.

The following justly-merited tribute to the memory of the late Bishop of Quebec appears in the last Report of the Quebec Diocesan Committee of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge:—"In thus rendering an account of the transactions of the past year, it is impossible to forbear from advertent to an event which has occurred since the last annual meeting—an event of solemn importance, not only to this particular institution, but to every thing connected with the interests of religion in the Canadas,—the death of that Apostolic Prelate, who was the President of the Quebec Diocesan Committee. In forwarding the object for which this Society is constituted,—namely, the Promotion of Christian Knowledge—by every means in which the labour of man can be applied to such a purpose, the late Bishop of Quebec was truly a chosen vessel; and of the good in which he was instrumental, during the thirty years in which either as Missionary or as Bishop of the Diocese, he laboured in the country,—it was not a small portion that he effected by means of the resources of this Society. Thousands of copies of the Word of God and of the Common Prayer-Book, and many thousands of the smaller publications of the Society, were distributed by his own hands, or through those of the Clergy and Catechists to whom he confided them; and the lessons which they contain were effectually enforced by his own exhortations and example. He is gone to his reward long before laid up in Christ: and the feeble tribute here rendered to his memory is mingled with testimonies of affectionate regret and reverence from all quarters, on both sides of the Atlantic, in which his public or private character was known."

The Lord Bishop of Australia left Sidney on the 7th of April last, in Her Majesty's ship Conway, on his visitation of the more southerly portion of New South Wales, and afterwards of Van Diemen's Land.

The Lord Bishop of Montreal, from our last advices, was about to proceed early in August, upon his visitation of Upper Canada.

FOREIGN.

The Moniteur publishes the discourse which Archbishop Quelen addressed to the King of the French on Tuesday, on his Majesty's entrance into Notre Dame to hear Te Deum sung for the birth of the Comte de Paris. It is as follows:—"Sire,—Decked in the rich ornaments which it owes to your munificence, the Church of Paris rejoices with Catholic France, that is almost saying, with entire France, in the solemn homage this day paid to its faith. It accepts with gratitude, at the foot of the altars of Mary, the pledge of hope and security which your presence in this day's thanksgiving brings to the ancient and holy religion of our fathers, which has ever formed the glory and happiness of our nation. Sire, our vows cannot remain concealed in the depth of our souls. We do not cease to ask of God, by the intercession of his august Mother, that he would deign to hasten that moment of mercy when all the French, being re-united in the bonds of the same faith, and in those of that charity which it inspires, there shall be no more but one flock and one pastor." The King replied,—"It is always with eagerness that I come to this church to render homage to the Most High. I am happy to have contributed to repair the disasters which my heart has deeply deplored. In offering my thanks to God for the especial protection with which he has covered my person on so many occasions, I have doubly to thank him on this, when I come to offer thanks for the perpetuation of my line, and for all the benefits which his hand has shed upon France, my family, and myself. I beg of him their continuation, and it is to this end I come to unite my prayers to yours, and to implore the blessing of the Most High upon France and upon us."

DEATHS.

The following particulars of the death of the Right Rev. Alexander Jolly, Bishop of Moray, the senior Bishop of the Scottish Episcopal church, whose death we noticed in our last number, are extracted from a provincial paper, and will be perused with interest. He was reading, the night before his decease, an old work, entitled "Disce Mori,"

Learn to Die, which he was anxious to finish. He continued reading till a late hour, when he dismissed his servant. In the morning he was found dead, and it appeared that he had closed his eyes with his own hand, had drawn a napkin over his face, and folded his arms over his breast. Thus closed a life of primitive simplicity, piety, and self-denial worthy of the purest ages of the Church.

The late Francis Barnes, D.D., Master of St. Peter's College, Cambridge, and Professor of Casulistry in that university, whose death at the great age of ninety-three we lately announced, was a native of Lancaster, or its neighbourhood, and was early remarkable for his acuteness and aptitude for learning. At a very early age he went to a school at Kellet, and afterwards to Silverdale, both in Lancashire, and having possessed himself of all the book-learning which it was in the power of those masters to teach him, he was removed to Eton School on the strength of the ability he displayed. Tradition relates, and the fact serves as an illustration of the nature of travelling in those days, that the (afterwards) Master of St. Peter's performed the journey to Eton, mounted behind his father, on one of the stout nags employed on the farm. In this way, proceeding by easy stages, young Barnes was safely deposited at Eton, where he pursued his studies with such ardour and success, that after a few years he was transferred to Cambridge, where he resided for the rest of his life, and where he was highly esteemed for his courtesy and hospitality to all with whom he came in contact. His reputed great wealth was an exaggeration. He left small legacies to a nephew and his children at Bolton, but his property generally to collegiate purposes and collegiate friends. Dr. Barnes was considered one of the best Greek scholars of the day.—Lancaster Guardian.

August 7.—At Oban, Argyllshire, the Rev. John Collier Jones, D.D., Rector of Exeter College, Vicar of Kidlington, and an acting magistrate for the county of Oxford. Dr. Jones was the son of a highly respectable medical man at Plympton, in Devonshire, where he was born on the 7th of October, 1770. He was educated under Dr. Cardew, at Truro school, and in 1788 entered at Exeter College, being matriculated as a Commoner of that Society on the first day of Michaelmas Term. On the 6th of June, 1792, he took the Degree of B.A., and was shortly after elected to a Petrean Fellowship in his College. Entering into Orders, he became for some time Curate of Mortlake, in Surrey, but was afterwards induced to accept a Chaplainship on board the Namur, Capt. Whitshed, and was present in the action off Cape St. Vincent, in 1797. He proceeded M.A. June the 30th, 1796, B.D. July 1, 1807, and returning to his residence in Oxford, in 1808, became one of the Tutors of the College.

In 1813 he was appointed a Public Examiner; Select Preacher in 1819; and on the death of Dr. Cole, was elected to the Rectorship of Exeter. In that year also (Nov. 12th) he took his degree as Doctor in divinity. Dr. Jones's other official appointments were Delegate of Accounts, 1824; Vice-Chancellor from October, 1828, to 1832; and Joint Curator of the Sheldonian Theatre, 1829. Dr. Jones married Charlotte, widow of Capt. Crawley; she died April 8th, 1836, leaving no surviving issue by her second husband. In deference to the wishes of those who have a right to command us, and in compliance with the well-known sentiments on this subject, of him whose loss is so universally deplored, we forbear any attempt to delineate, at length, the character of Dr. Jones. We may, however, be permitted to say, that a man of more inflexible integrity, more active benevolence, or more genuine kindness of disposition, never lived. Although despising every species of formality and ostentation, he possessed an ease of manner and a natural dignity of deportment which were peculiarly adapted to the official situations in which he was placed; nor is there an individual in his own College, in his own Parish, or in the University at large, from the highest to the lowest, who did not love, esteem, and respect him. The Oxford Herald of August 25, states, that notwithstanding every effort was made by the Society to procure the removal of the remains to England, for interment in the College chapel, it was found impossible to accomplish it. The ceremony was accordingly performed, with the sanction of the Rev. Alexander McKenzie, minister of Oban, on Tuesday, August 21st, by the Rev. W. Jacobson, vice-principal of Magdalen-hall, and late Fellow of the College, who had proceeded to Scotland immediately on the arrival of the melancholy news.

At the Rectory, Little Hinton, Wilts, aged 67, the Rev. Henry Purrier, M.A., Rector of that parish, and formerly Rector of St. Paul's, Deptford. The Rectory of Little Hinton is in the patronage of the Bishop of Winchester.

August 13.—At Wincanton, in Somersetshire, the Rev. Wm. Carpendale, M.A., Rector of Siltton, Dorset, and Perpetual Curate of Wincanton. Mr. Carpendale was the youngest son of the late Rev. Thos. Carpendale, of Armagh. On Friday, the 17th of August, the remains of the Rev. Gentleman were interred in Wincanton churchyard, and such were the feelings of the inhabitants towards the deceased, that all the shops were closed, and nearly the whole population of the place, of all religious parties, attended the funeral. In the late Mr. Carpendale the Church has lost a valuable and indefatigable minister, and the inhabitants of Wincanton, but more particularly the poor, a most kind and excellent friend.

At Ovingham Vicarage, in the 41st year of his age, the Rev. James Birkett, M.A., Perpetual Curate of that place.

Horsesham.—We have this week the truly melancholy task to record the death of the Rev. J. Aldridge, a young clergyman generally respected and esteemed. He left his home on Saturday afternoon last for the purpose of bathing, and was found drowned. An inquest was held on the body, when Mr. Bostock, surgeon, stated that there were no external marks of violence on the body, and proved that from the position of the legs and of the body, cramp must have caused a determination of blood to the head, which would bring on apoplexy. Verdict.—Accidentally drowned. Deceased had just been appointed to take the duty for six months of the new chapel now erecting.—Brighton Gazette.

August 15.—The Rev. John Barlow Seale, D.D., Rector of Stisted, in the county of Essex, and of Anstey, in the county of Hertford, and formerly Fellow and Tutor of Christ's College, Cambridge. B.A. 1774; M.A. 1777; D.D. 1789. The Rectory of Stisted is in the patronage of his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury; and of Anstey in that of the Master and Fellows of Christ's College, Cambridge.

August 24.—At Leamington, aged 74, the Rev. James Walhouse, B.C.L., of Pembroke College, nephew of the late Sir Edward Littleton, and cousin to Lord Hatherton. Mr. Walhouse entered as Commoner of Pembroke College, October 22, 1784, and was the son of Moreton Walhouse, Esq., of the county of Stafford. He proceeded to the degree of B.A. in 1788, and took that of B.C.L. July 12, 1791.

Same day died, at the house of his son at Honington, Warwickshire, the Rev. Thomas Hopkins, Rector of Tredington, in the county of Worcester, to which Living he was presented by the Principal and Fellows of Jesus College in 1789. He proceeded M.A. June 1, 1774; B.D. July 10, 1781.

At the Glebe, aged 43, the Rev. Eris Davis, Rector of Raheny, county of Limerick.

August 25.—In his 82nd year, the Rev. John Gardiner, D.D., of Wadham College, for more than fifty-seven years Rector of Brailford, in the county of Derby; and upwards of forty-two years Minister of the Octagon Chapel, Bath. He was a Magistrate for the county of Somerset. He proceeded M.A. July 8th, 1796; B.D. and D.D. July 16th, 1796. Earl Ferrers is the patron of Brailford.

"John Gardiner, D.D., was educated at Tiverton, whence he went to the University of Glasgow, where he studied the civil law. He then entered himself of the Middle Temple, with a view to qualify for the bar. A strong impulse induced him to exchange the law for the Church, and for this purpose he repaired to Wadham College, Oxford. In 1781 he took possession of the vicarage of Shirley, and rectory of Brailford, in the county of Derby, the presentation to which had been purchased by his father, with whom he afterwards resided for some years at Wellington, performing gratuitously the duty of curate of that parish. In 1789 he undertook the same office at Taunton, where he continued till his father, in 1796, purchased for him the Octagon Chapel at Bath, where he has ever since regularly officiated. His publications are:—A Sermon preached on the Fast-day, 1793, 4to. A Sermon on the Duties of a Soldier, preached at the consecration of the colours of a regiment of Yeomanry Cavalry. Brief Reflections on the Eloquence of the Pulpit, occasioned by a pamphlet, entitled, 'Remarks on a Sermon preached on the Fast-day, 1793, by J. Gardiner, Esq., 1796. Sermons on various subjects, preached at the Octagon Chapel, Bath. 8vo, 1802. Second edition, 1806. Causes of the Inefficacy of Fasts, a Sermon. 8vo, 1803. The Faith and Hope of the Righteous, a Sermon on occasion of the death of the Rev. Dr. MacLaine. 8vo, 1805. A Tribute to the Memory of Lord Nelson, a Sermon. 8vo, 1805. A Sermon on the Duties of Public Worship. 8vo, 1810. Reflections on the Shortness of Time, a Sermon, suggested by the Mourning for the Princess Amelia. 8vo, 1810. Thoughts on our Abuse of the Sabbath, extracted from a Sermon delivered at the re-opening of Laura Chapel, Bath. 8vo, 1811."

At Dover, aged 42 years, the Rev. William Theophilus Blackburne, M.A., son of the late William Blackburne, M.D., of Cavendish-square, and afterwards of Eastcot-house, near Wells, in Somersetshire.

At Gateshead, in the 64th year of his age, the Rev. Robert Arthur, twenty-four years Minister of the Castle-garth Chapel, in Newcastle, and formerly of Paul's Chapel, Perth.

Rev. J. H. Lloyd, Rector of Kellan, Cardiganshire, and Vicar of Llanwnnen, in the same county; patron of both Livings, the Bishop of St. David's.

On Thursday, the 30th ult., died, at the rectory, Tendring, Essex, aged 54, the Rev. Benjamin Cheese, B.D., rector of that parish, and formerly a Fellow of Balliol College. Mr. Cheese proceeded to the Degree of M.A., Feb. 14th, 1809; and of B.D., October 19th, 1822. In 1822 he was presented to the rectory of Tendring, by the Master and Fellows of the above Society.

On September 1, very suddenly, the Rev. Charles Holmes, of Kirby Underwood, near Falkingham, Lincolnshire. He was found dead in his garden.

At Burgh in the Marsh, Lincolnshire, on the 27th ult., after a short illness, the Rev. Wm. Barnes, vicar of the consolidated parishes of Burgh and Winthorpe, in his 69th year.

At his residence, Baggot-street, Dublin, the Rev. J. Q. Lloyd, Chaplain of the Moyleux Asylum.

Rev. Deane H. Nash, rector of Temple O'Malus, Diocese of Ross.

Suddenly, on his way from Dublin to Portarlington, the Rev. Wm. Hackett.

Aged 36, the Rev. T. Cooper, Assistant Curate of Frodsham. Sept. 1, Rev. J. W. Baugh, M.A., Prebendary of Hereford, Chancellor of the Diocese of Bristol, Vicar of Diddlebury, Shropshire; patrons the Dean and Chapter of Hereford; and rector of Ripple with Queenhill, Worcestershire; patron, the Bishop of Worcester.

Sept. 3, at the residence of his brother, Duloe, Cornwall, the Rev. Henry Dowell, M.A., of St. Peter's College, Cambridge, and late Curate of Membury, Devon.

It is with much regret that we announce the death of that learned Judge, the Right Hon. Sir John Nicholl, Knight, Vicar General of the Diocese of Canterbury. Sir John died at his seat Merthyr Maur, near Bridgend, Glamorganshire. He was educated at Bristol school, was elected a Founder's Kin Fellow of St. John's College, Oxford, June 26th, 1775; took his B.C.L. Degree, June 15th, 1780; and proceeded to his D.C.L. Degree, April 6th, 1785. Before the Reform Act, he represented in Parliament for many years the borough of Great Bedwin, in Wiltshire. In 1821 he was brought forward by his College as a fit person to represent this University in Parliament, in opposition to Richard Heber, Esq., but was unsuccessful. He for many years presided over the Arches' Court, the Prerogative Court, and subsequently over the Admiralty Court of England. He died without the least pain, and in the full possession of all his faculties.

Aged 44, much regretted, Rev. Josiah Thomas, B.D., Perpetual Curate of Llangeenoch, Carmarthenshire.

The Church of England, long accustomed to opposition, hostility, and annoyance, from individuals, is now attacked in a different and far more alarming manner. Societies have been formed in all the great towns, in connection with a Central Association in the Metropolis, for the avowed purpose of maintaining a systematic warfare against the Religious Establishments of the United Kingdom. Various rights and possessions of the Church, hitherto undisputed, are now openly questioned; and, if our National Religious Establishment is to be preserved, it must be, so far as human agency is concerned, by a system of defence, on the part of its friends, as well organized and sustained, as the system of attack adopted by its adversaries. The objects of the LAY UNION will be, to watch the proceedings and movements of the enemies of the Established Church; to convey to its distant or unsuspecting friends notice of threatened attack or impending danger; to encourage manifestations of attachment to its cause; to devise and suggest means of bringing such manifestations to bear most effectively and opportunely on the public mind; and, as emergency may demand, to combine, in defence of the Church, the activity and energies of all ranks and classes of its friends. The Society will thus seek to counteract the efforts of those Associations which the assailants of the Church have already formed; and which, by their correspondence with persons similarly disposed throughout the Kingdom, have both given great help and facilities to hostile attempts, and succeeded in creating against the Church a certain amount of popular feeling, of the most injurious tendency. These Associations, in fact, have arrayed, combined, and put in motion the enemies of the Establishment: the LAY UNION will labour to animate and unite its supporters and friends. With this view, they appeal to the Laity, in every part of the Kingdom, for their co-operation and support; and they will also gladly receive the assistance of the Clergy, either as Correspondents or as Subscribers to their Funds.

Annual Subscribers of one guinea and upwards, and Donors of ten guineas and upwards, are eligible to become Members of the Society.

Donations and Subscriptions, in aid of the Funds of the LAY UNION, are received at the Banking-house of Messrs. Harries, Parquhar, and Co., St. James's-street; and by Mr. Dalton, Bookseller, 28, Cockspur-street, London.

All Communications on the subject of the Society, and from those who may be desirous of enrolling themselves as Members, are requested to be addressed, by letter, to Mr. S. MILLS, Honorary Secretary, 28, Cockspur-street, London, Sept. 5, 1838.

THE ADVANTAGES OF THIS OFFICE, among others, are:

1. A participation septennially in two-thirds of the Profits, which may be applied either in reduction of the Premium, or to augment the Sum assured.

On a division of Profits for the seven years terminating on 25th of March, 1832, Bonuses, amounting from 18s. to 2l. 12s. per cent. per annum on the sums assured, varying with the age, were assigned to all Policies for the whole continuance of life effected previously to the 16th of May, 1829.

2. Premiums may be paid in a limited number of annual Sums, instead of by annual Payments for the whole of life; the Policy continuing to participate in profits after the payment of such Premiums has ceased.

3. The Assurance or Premium Fund is not subject to any charge for Interest to Proprietors.

4. Permission to pass to Continental Ports between Brest and the Elbe inclusive.

5. Parties (including Officers of the Army, Navy, East India Company, and Merchant Service) may be assured to reside in or proceed to all parts of the World, at Premiums calculated on real data.

A second division of profits was declared in January, 1837, and the Bonuses on Policies entitled, at the two divisions, amounted, on an average, to 22l. per cent. on the Premiums paid.

The profits are divided at the end of every succeeding term of five years; which the assured have the option of taking either in reduction of their payments of Premium, or of having them added to the sum assured by their Policy.

The rates of assurance are lower than at most other offices, in which the assured are allowed to share the profits.

Assurances may be effected (with this Society), payable on the death of the first or last of two or more lives, on very moderate terms; also on joint lives and survivorships, and on the lives of persons of advanced age.

This Society was the first established, which called the attention of the Clergy more particularly to the advantages of Life Assurance.

Prospectuses and full information may be obtained (free of expense) of any of the Company's Agents, or by addressing a letter to

BOARD AND EDUCATION.

A MARRIED CLERGYMAN, A.M. of the University of Cambridge, residing in a healthy and pleasant part of Derbyshire, and having now under his care a few PUPILS, is desirous of increasing their number, by receiving two or three more of the age of seven or upwards. The advertiser would prefer such boys as have not previously been out at school, and trusts that parents and guardians of youth will find his establishment suitable especially for younger children, as it is his desire to combine the comforts of home and parental care with the advantages of a religious education.

Terms, which are moderate, and other particulars, may be known on application by letter (post-paid) addressed to Rev. M. A. Bakewell. Should any young Gentleman be sent before the commencement of the next quarter, a proportionable deduction will be made.—August 3, 1838.

THE REV. JOHN HODGSON, Vicar of St. Peter's, in the Isle of Thanet, having been for some time engaged in investigating the course of mortality amongst the one particular class of society consisting of "the Clergy of the Established Church," would feel himself greatly obliged (and the profession may be very much benefited by it hereafter) if the Clergyman in every parish would assist him in the undertaking, which thus would be made easy, by procuring for him and sending to him in plain writing the following particulars sealed up.

1. The names of all and each of the Incumbents of his parish (specifying the parish and diocese), on and since the 1st of January, 1779; and, if possible, the dates, or thereabouts, of their becoming Incumbents of the same.

2. The date of their ceasing to be the Incumbents, and whether by death, or otherwise.

3. If by death, the date of their death, and their age at death; and whether the number of the years of the age specified be years completed, or to be completed next birth-day; if by removal, where removed to.

4. The authority for such age, whether from tablet, stone, register, or other source; specifying whence it is, and in what church found.

5. The account and particulars of 3 and 4, where the Incumbent of another parish may have been buried, and registered, or otherwise testified to, in his parish since the year 1778; specifying of what parish Incumbent, and in what county.

6. The account where an Incumbent was buried, if not in his own parish.

7. The date of the birth of the present Incumbent, in the year, and month, and day of it. It may appear that too much is asked under this head; but the information upon this one point alone would be very valuable in the mass; and the age of any individual would be kept strictly private.

8. Any account, with full particulars as above, concerning the husband, father, or other relation of a deceased Incumbent of ———, communicated by a widow, son, &c., will be thankfully received.

9. As some Clergymen take much more interest than others in such matters, Mr. Hodgson very respectfully requests such to collect information in their neighbourhood. Any of the particulars as above, where all cannot be procured, will be valuable.

Observe.—It is earnestly requested that statements as above, if procured, may be left, at any convenient opportunity, by means of a friend visiting London, and so as to cause no expense, for Mr. Hodgson, at Messrs. Rivington's; or Mr. Parker's, West Strand; or at Mr. Burder's, 27, Parliament-street; or at No. 40, Parliament-street.

EXCHANGE OF PREFERMENT.

A GENTLEMAN between 40 and 50 wishes to exchange a small Living (under 150l., with a good House, &c.) for one of equal, or nearly equal value. It is situated in a healthy part of the Country, and very near a good Market Town.

Letters, post-paid, addressed A. B., 10, Upper Baker-street, Regent's-park, London, will meet with prompt attention.

HOLY ORDERS.

A TITLE for ORDERS may be obtained immediately by a Graduate, on applying to the Rev. M.A., Post-office, Leyburn, Yorkshire.

The Advertiser continues to prepare Gentlemen for Episcopal Ordination, and has it in his power to procure Titles for those Graduates who read with him. All Communications to be post-paid.

THEOLOGICAL WORKS
 Published by James Duncan, 37, Paternoster Row.

I.

Lately published, in 3 vols. 8vo, 36s. boards,
PROOFS and ILLUSTRATIONS of the ATTRIBUTES of GOD, from the Facts and Laws of the Physical Universe, being the foundation of natural and revealed Religion. By JOHN MACULLOCH, M.D., F.R.S., F.L.S., F.G.S., &c. &c.

"The Church of England Quarterly" for October last commences a long review and analysis of this work in the following terms:—

"The talented writer of this inimitable work is no more, but stupendous is the monument which his genius has erected. Such an exuberance of ability flows through every part of these elaborate columns, that it is difficult to make a selection for the purpose of a review. The gifted author's name and eminence have long been well known in connection with natural science; but it now appears that all his devotion to that and other departments of human knowledge has been made subservient to this his last and ablest work, which we confidently predict will hand down his celebrity to the latest times."—Monthly Review.

THE APOSTOLICAL AUTHORITY of the EPISTLE to the HEBREWS; an Inquiry in which the received Title of the Greek Epistle is vindicated against the cavils of Objectors, ancient and modern, from Origen to Michaelis, chiefly upon grounds hitherto unnoticed; comprising a comparative analysis of the style and structure of this Epistle, and of the undisputed Epistles of St. Paul, tending to throw light upon their interpretation.

III.

Second Edition, in one volume 8vo (the two volumes compressed), illustrated with Portrait, &c., price 16s. cloth,

"As a relative and a friend, Mahop Jebb here shines as brightly as he does as a scholar; and what is yet more valuable, they who had not the privilege of seeing Mahop Jebb afar off his illness will learn from Mr. Forster an accurate and most interesting account how a Christian could suffer, and turn his suffering into a blessing to himself and others. The whole of the biography is written in a spirit of good feeling and good taste, which do the highest honour to Mr. Forster."—British Magazine.

"The life of this exemplary Prelate, this amiable, accomplished, and pious man, not only teems with the most weighty lessons of a practical kind, for the imitation of every Churchman in England, and still more especially in Ireland at the present time, but it exhibits one of the most engaging and soundly-constituted characters that have ever been delineated for the lasting benefit of mankind."—Monthly Review.

JOHN BULL NEWSPAPER, THE BEST AND MOST COMPLETE FAMILY JOURNAL.

THE recent alteration in the Newspaper Stamp Duties has enabled the Proprietors of this Journal to do that which had frequently been suggested to them, and it now comprises FOUR ADDITIONAL PAGES at the reduced price of SIXPENCE.

From the first establishment of JOHN BULL to the present moment, the gratifying and extensive patronage with which it has been favoured, has been unquestionably bestowed upon it for its undeviating devotion to the principles upon which it was originally started, and on account of the original articles which have appeared in its columns—a particular attention to which has frequently excluded from its pages, from want of space, much matter which, to general readers, more especially those in the country, must necessarily be highly interesting and important.

The Proprietors are therefore extremely glad that circumstances have permitted them—besides retaining all the original features and qualities of JOHN BULL—to render it a COMPLETE FAMILY NEWSPAPER, containing copious Intelligence, Foreign, Domestic, Fashionable, Provincial, and Metropolitan—the latest Judicial and Police Reports, when any case of importance has occurred—State of the Money Market, and City Commercial Intelligence—and, above all, the most extensive information connected with the Church, the Universities, and Clerical Matters.

The marked favour with which JOHN BULL has for many years been received by the ARMY and NAVY, renders it incumbent upon the Proprietors to devote an adequate portion of space to Naval and Military Affairs, and from various sources they are now able, in a much greater degree than heretofore, to meet the encouragement which has been afforded them by both Services. In addition to these more important objects, JOHN BULL contains Criticisms on the Theatres (which merit and have met the highest approbation for their talent and impartiality)—on Literature, and the Arts—Agricultural Reports, and Sporting News—together with a mass of general information, such as must render it acceptable to those who, maintaining its principles and professing its politics, may yet desire to find, mixed with its political and playful articles, a summary of News, for which, until its increase of size, they may have been obliged to refer to other papers.

The Proprietors of JOHN BULL have now the satisfaction to know that their arrangements for making it one of the most complete Weekly Newspapers—without in the slightest degree changing or deteriorating from its established character for original matter, as the FIRST CONSERVATIVE WEEKLY SUNDAY PAPER, STARTED IN LONDON AT A PERIOD OF SOMETHING VERY LIKE REBELLION, AND NOT VERY DISSIMILAR FROM REVOLUTION,—have met with universal approbation and the most gratifying success.

An Edition of JOHN BULL, for Country circulation, is published every Monday, in time for Post. It contains faithful Reports of the London Corn, Cattle, Wool, and other Markets—the latest Returns from the principal Provincial Markets—a Price-Current, embracing the leading Articles of Commerce, and other matters of interest to the Agriculturist, the Merchant, and the Manufacturer.

The Sunday Edition is printed at a late hour on Saturday night, and is circulated, by the early coaches and by railway, in most of the principal towns at an early hour on Sunday. Orders received at the Office, No. 40, Fleet-street, London, and by all Booksellers and Newspaper Agents in the United Kingdom.

THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.—The LITERARY GAZETTE of August 25 and September 1 contains a full and interesting Report (extending to nearly sixty closely-printed columns) of the proceedings of the above Association, which has just celebrated its Eighth Anniversary, at Newcastle.

It embraces Reviews of important New Works, with copious Extracts: the earliest Account of Scientific Expeditions; ample Reports of the Transactions of the Learned and Scientific Bodies; Criticisms on Music, the Drama, and the Fine Arts; Biographical Notices; Original Poetry, &c. &c.

“In these discourses, we have a series of Sermons upon the duties of life, in which the noblest principles of morality are combined with and enforced by the pure precepts of Christianity. The peculiar value of these Discourses consists in their practical character. DOCTRINAL ERRORS of the APOSTOLICAL and EARLY FATHERS.

By WILLIAM OSBURN, Jun.

“The learned and very important Work of Mr. William Osburn, Jun., on the ‘Doctrinal Errors of the Apostolical and Early Fathers’—a Work than which none could be more more accurate, or possess a stronger claim to the attention of the Clergy of the Established Church. Mr. Osburn and the Author agree in fervently desiring the welfare and perpetuity of the Episcopal and Established Church.”—By the Author of ‘Spiritual Despatch’.

* * Prospectuses and Books of Rules may be had at the Office. Attendance from eleven to four o'clock, daily.

"This Society is strictly confined to the Clergy and their families, and is distinguished from other institutions by the title of 'THE CLERGY MUTUAL ASSURANCE SOCIETY.'" Particular attention is requested in the addressing letters to "No. 40, Parliament Street."

Sickness Assurance.—A Clergyman being 24, or 30, or 40 years of age next birth-day, by payments annually until 70 of 2l. 19s., or 3l. 9s., or 4l. 14s., according to his age, will be entitled to 104l. per annum (or in proportion for any lesser term) in any sickness or sicknesses which may occur before he is 70 years of age, incapacitating him from officiating in the services of the Church. No sickness of less duration than six weeks is entitled to provision as above; and after such term of sickness provision commences, and is continued during the longest sickness. Clergymen at higher or intermediate ages are required to pay annual premiums in proportion to the above. The assurance may be made for $\frac{1}{2}$, $\frac{1}{4}$, or 104l.

Old Age Annuity.—A Clergyman, or the wife, widow, son, or daughter of a Clergyman, being 24, or 30, or 40, next birth day, by payments annually until 70 of 3l. 3s. 4d., or 4l. 7s. 4d., or 7l. 18s., according to his or her age, will be entitled to an annuity during life of 104l., to commence from 70 years of age, and to be due half-yearly. At lower, higher, or intermediate ages, annual premiums are in proportion to those above. The assurance may be made for 13l. per annum, or 26l., &c., &c., &c.

General Endowments.—1. The Rev. William G. pays 31l. 13s. 7d. annually during seven years for 250l., to be due to him at the end of seven years.

2. George T. Esq., son of a Clergyman, and Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, pays 42l. 7s. 1d. annually during ten years for 500l., to be due to him when being in holy orders, he expects to take a living at the end of ten years.

3. The Rev. John A., having borrowed 300l. of a friend, to pay expenses of furnishing, &c., upon appointment to a living, has to pay annually for fourteen years 17l. 1s., in order to be able to repay the loan at the end of fourteen years.

4. William P., Esq., godfather of Frederick W., a Clergyman's son, pays 6l. 16s. 10d. during twelve years, and 5l. 16s. during nineteen years, for which Frederick W. is to have 100l. at the end of twelve years, and 150l. at the end of nineteen years.

5. Mrs. Jane W., a friend of the Rev. Edward C., pays down 58l. 14s. 9d. at the birth of Susannah E., his daughter, and at the end of eighteen years, S. C. will be entitled to 100l.

Observe.—Whatever monies may have been paid for general endowments, whether in annual premiums or in single present payments in lieu thereof, are to be returned if the person for whom the assurance is made should die before it is due. Any amount not less than 50l., and not exceeding 1000l., may be assured.

This SOCIETY was formed for the purpose of drawing the attention of the Clergy, 1st, To the important advantages to be derived from the system of Assurance in general; 2dly, To give them an opportunity of making Assurances not offered or admitted in other public Assurance Offices; and 3dly, To keep down the Rates of Assurance at the lowest possible sum, by an inexpensive management, and a division every FIVE YEARS of the TOTAL AMOUNT of Profits (in which no Proprietors share) amongst the assured Members who may be entitled to them. Assurances may be made for a sufficient sum to be paid during sickness, infirmity, and old age, to meet the unavoidable expense of a Curate; for capital Sums or Annuities, to provide for the education of Children at School, or College, and for equipping them out in the world; for the maintenance of Orphan Children during Infancy, from the day of the Death of the Father, &c. &c. &c.

The terms, conditions, and advantages, of these Assurances, and the Tables of Rates payable for them, are fully set forth in the Prospectus. For a proof of the prosperous state of the SOCIETY, the Clergy are referred to a Report of its Proceedings, which was read at a General Meeting of Members on the 29th of June, the Lord Bishop of London in the chair; and also to a Resolution which was moved by the Lord Bishop of Winchester upon the occasion, inserted in No. I. of the Ecclesiastical Gazette. One-fourth part of the total amount of premiums paid for Life Assurances in and during the first seven years of this Institution, was returned back again as a bonus to the assured Members, and appropriated to a reduction of their future premiums, thus making the Rates of Premium which had been paid for the same during such seven years, 25 per cent. less than in the following Table. For instance, a Clergyman at the age of 50, having assured £1000 upon his Life in the year 1832, and having paid for the same up to 1836, five Annual Premiums of £43. 13s. 4d. each, received a bonus in cash of about £50 to be appropriated to the reduction of his future premium, so that in fact he paid only £33. 13s. 4d. or thereabouts, during the five first years of his assurance, or £3. 7s. 4d. for each sum of £100 assured, instead of £4. 7s. 4d. Any sum not less than £50, and not exceeding £2500, may be assured upon Life by any Clergyman, or the Father, Mother, Wife, Widow, Son, Daughter, Brother, Sister, of any Clergyman, upon terms as below, and the period appointed for the next bonus is 31st May, 1841. No charge for Stamps.

MEMORIALS OF OXFORD. By JAMES INGRAM, D.D., President of Trinity College.
The Engravings by J. Le Keux, from Original Drawings by F. Mackenzie.

The Woodcuts by O. Jewitt, from drawings by J. Fisher and W. A. Delamotte.

This work is now completed, containing one hundred Engravings on steel, and upwards of two hundred on wood.

"We have placed at the head of this article, one of the most beautiful and interesting illustrations which has yet been published of the external appearance of the University of Oxford. It contains some valuable historical sketches by the President of Trinity College, and will supply a very useful and pleasing introduction to that more serious consideration which is the present state of the country that University well deserves."—Quarterly Review, January, 1838.

"Most persons who fall in with this work would but consider it as a collection of beautiful prints in illustration of one of the most beautiful cities in Europe. In consequence they will be disposed to place it on their drawing-room table, a position which seems to confirm the impression which the first view of it creates. And it really is a most interesting publication, considered merely as a work of art; but those who have been led to cast their eyes over the letter-press, will find a kind of matter there of a very different complexion from the running accompaniment, in large type and small sense, which in such publications is commonly used to swell the volume without hurting its character. Dr. Ingram, however, the learned writer of the letter-press, is evidently not a man to figure as a mere cavalier aux dames, or to serve as an elegant appendage to the fashion of the hour. Judging by the work before us, we should say he was as little like a writer in an annual or album, as any author we ever read. He is apparently one of the race of men, now almost extinct, who used to live all their days both in and for the University."—British Critic, July, 1838.

INSTRUCTIONS for the CLERGY. By CHRISTOPHER HODGSON, Secretary to the Archbishop of Canterbury. The Fifth Edition.

A new Edition of "Hodgson's Instructions for the Clergy" has been called for at a time particularly seasonable, by reason that the principal subjects, treated of in the former editions, have been under the revision of Parliament during the last Session. By Acts passed in that Session, material amendments have been made in the law respecting the providing of fit houses for the residence of the Clergy; an entire alteration has been effected in the law for regulating the holding of benefices in plurality; and various amendments have been made as to the residence of the Clergy, and powers given for facilitating the union and disunion of benefices. These, with other alterations, additions, and amendments, are of so great extent, that by the insertion of them the present Edition may also be considered as a New Work.

TWENTY-ONE PLAIN SERMONS, Doctrinal and Practical.

By E. EDWARDS,

"To Mr. Edwards's Sermons we invite public attention: they realize our notion of Practical Sermons; and Mr. Edwards having, on a very important occasion, done real and lasting good to the Church, by having been the means of defeating a conspiracy against her, which was projected by certain of our modern Illuminati in power, has a decided claim on the consideration of all her members. On this, and on their own merits, we rest our recommendation of his Sermons."—Church of England Quarterly Review, Oct. 1838.

THE PROTESTANT'S COMPANION; or, a Seasonable Preservative against the Errors, Corruptions, and Unfounded Claims of a Superstitious and Idolatrous Church.

London: John W. Parker, West Strand.

On the First Saturday in January, 1839, will be Published, the First Number of a Weekly Newspaper, entitled, THE SOCIAL GAZETTE; a Journal of Public and Domestic Economy, and Municipal, Parochial, and Family Newspaper.

The title of the SOCIAL GAZETTE may sufficiently indicate the proposed nature of its contents. It will be a Journal expressly devoted to the great and sacred cause of social improvement. Its aim is to be a directory to the people in their homes and in their daily concerns; an auxiliary to the regular ministrations of the Clergy; a companion to works directly statistical, and a supplement to works directly spiritual, or directly educational.

While, therefore, it will embrace a vast number of the most important topics in common with existing publications, it will also have its own ground, its distinctive character, and its specific objects. Its survey will extend over the whole range of national, parochial, and domestic economy. Nothing will be excluded from it which tends, whether to illustrate or to meliorate the state of civilization in the British empire, or which affects, generally, the condition and prospects of mankind. It will institute an examination as close and as systematic, as complete and as comprehensive, as the circumstances of the publication will allow, into all the elements and materials of social good, all the agents and instruments which are employed, or may be employed, to promote it, all the ends to be attained, and all the means of attaining them; or, in other words, it will regard all human thought, all human industry, all human enterprise—the religion, the legislation, the literature, the science, the education, the occupations and diversions, the tastes, habits, and manners, the public and the internal arrangements of communities and families, with a direct and practical view to the uses of life, and the results on human happiness.

This, however, is a design, which a few individuals cannot adequately accomplish. The Proprietors of the SOCIAL GAZETTE appeal, therefore, to all Statists, all Economists, all Philanthropists, throughout the kingdom; not disguising, however, and not seeking to disguise, their own staunch adherence to the Ecclesiastical Establishment of the Empire, and their desire to connect the great work of social improvement, immediately and intimately with the National Church. Their wish is to interest as many parties as possible, not merely in the perusal, but in the authorship and circulation of the work. They would appeal, in a more especial manner, to the Parochial Clergy and their excellent co-adjutors in the several parishes and districts of the realm,—to the Municipal Bodies, the Magistrates and Guardians of the Poor,—to the Managers and Members of Religious, Educational, Charitable, and Provident Societies and Institutions.

To all such persons, forming, as it were, a large and noble association for the highest purposes of social science and social well-being they offer their Journal as a repository and organ, or medium of communication and a channel of intelligence; a publication in which their plans and opinions may be collected and compared, and their exertions combined and brought together as on a common or neutral ground; a publication, therefore, which may eventually do something to concentrate and consolidate, to organize and harmonize, their generous efforts for securing to the masses of the community physical comfort, moral and intellectual advancement, and which may take advantage of those generous impulses of inquiring and active benevolence, those ardent aspirations for the progress of the human race, which, not pretending to be separate, or separable, from religion and politics, yet free from religious and political bitterness, are already at work in the most enlightened minds, both of England and other countries.

The SOCIAL GAZETTE will be issued every SATURDAY MORNING, containing the News of the Week up to a late hour on Friday. It will be printed at the Steam Press of JOHN WILLIAM PARKER, in St. Martin's-lane, London, and published by him at 445, WEST STRAND, where Communications for the Editor, and Advertisements for insertion, will be received. But it is not necessary that Orders for the GAZETTE should be sent direct to the Publisher, as every Newsmen in Town and Country will regularly supply it, in precisely the same manner as the other London Journals.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE;

OR MONTHLY

REGISTER OF

OF ITS RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES AND INSTITUTIONS.

No. 6.

LONDON, TUESDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1838.

No. 6.

The ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE is published on the second Tuesday in every month, and may be obtained at sixpence per number, or six shillings per annum, by ordering it of any Newsmen in the Kingdom. It is also sent regularly every month, free of all charge, to the Resident Parochial Clergyman of every Parish throughout England and Wales.

WE beg to inform our Subscribers, and the Public generally, that the next, and all succeeding Numbers of the ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE, will be published at the OFFICE, No. 14, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND (corner of Tavistock Street), by Mr. CHARLES COX, to whom all Communications must in future be addressed.

The increase of the Subscribers, and of the business connected with this Work, has rendered it expedient, if not absolutely necessary, that there should be a separate Office and Establishment for conducting its affairs. The permanence of the Work being now secured, by the continued liberality of the Subscribers, and the general favour and support which it is receiving, we feel happy in being able to adopt a measure which is calculated at the same time to promote the interests and objects of the Publication, and the convenience of its friends and supporters.

We have found it necessary for the present month to enlarge the ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE to twenty-four pages.

We have to acknowledge, with thanks, the return of duplicate copies of Numbers 2 and 3, by which we have been enabled to supply the present demands of our new Subscribers.

ECCLESIASTICAL NOTICES.

The Bishop of London requests the attention of the clergy to the following notices:

1. That for the future six months' notice, at least, will be required of every person who wishes to be admitted as a candidate for ordination in the diocese of London.

2. That no letters testimonial will be received or countersigned by the Bishop of London, unless it be stated therein that the parties signing them have had opportunities of observing the conduct of the person in whose favour the testimonials are given for the period specified in such testimonials.

The Lord Bishop of London will hold an Ordination on Sunday, December 23, at the Parish Church of St. James, Piccadilly.

The Lord Bishop of Norwich will hold his next general Ordination at Norwich, on the 6th of January, 1839. Candidates are to forward their papers to the Secretary not later than the 5th of December, and are to attend at the Palace for Examination on Wednesday, the 2nd of January.

The Lord Bishop of Lichfield intends holding his next Ordination at Eccleshall, on the second Sunday in January next. Candidates are requested to forward their papers to the Secretary, J. Mott, Esq., the Close, Lichfield (post-paid), on or before the 1st of January next.

The Lord Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol will hold his next general ordination on the Sunday before Christmas-day, in the Cathedral at Gloucester. His Grace the Archbishop of York will hold an ordination at Bishopsthorpe, on Sunday, Dec. 16th.

The Lord Bishop of Oxford will hold an ordination on Sunday, the 23d of December.

67, Lincoln's Inn Fields, December, 1838.

The Rev. Dr. Short in the chair.

At a General Meeting of the SOCIETY held on Tuesday the 4th of December, 1838, Mr. N. Goldsmid brought forward the motion of which he had given notice at the last General Meeting, and proposed the following Resolution for the adoption of the Board; a small addition to the terms of the original motion being made with the consent of the Meeting:

"That in Rule IV., after the word, 'Month,' and before the word, 'Except,' the following words be added, 'Except when such Tuesday shall fall upon a Holyday of the Church, for which an Epistle and Gospel are appointed in the Book of Common Prayer, and then upon the first Tuesday not a Holyday'" and

This was seconded by the Rev. John Jennings, and carried.

The Fourth Rule of the SOCIETY, thus altered, will stand as follows:

"IV. That a General Meeting be holden at the SOCIETY'S house on the first Tuesday in every month, except when such Tuesday shall fall upon a Holiday of the Church, for which an Epistle and Gospel are appointed in the Book of Common Prayer; and then upon the first Tuesday not a Holyday; and except the months of August, and September, at one o'clock."

The next Meeting of the SOCIETY will be holden on Tuesday the 8th of January; the Festival of the Circumcision falling on Tuesday the 1st.

The Secretary stated, that the Lord Bishop of Barbados, who is now in England, had made a communication to the Standing Committee respecting the state of Religion and the interests of the Church in the islands under his Lordship's spiritual jurisdiction, which had induced them to recommend to the Board to make a grant towards promoting the SOCIETY'S designs in his diocese.

It appeared from this communication, that the sum of 500*l.* placed at his Lordship's disposal by the Board in July, 1834, was exhausted, and that peculiar grounds now existed for a renewal of the SOCIETY'S aid in the same good work.

It was immediately agreed to make a further grant of 500*l.* to be placed in the hands of the Bishop for this object.

His Lordship also recommended to the favourable consideration of the Board the subject of Lending Libraries for the use of School teachers in the West India Islands. Most of these teachers are natives, or persons of colour; and in order to enable them to convey Scriptural instruction more accurately to the children in their respective classes, they require to be regularly trained and exercised for the purpose. It is hoped that the plan of preparing native teachers will be attended with good results, and in a great degree supersede the necessity of sending out European teachers—a measure attended with much uncertainty and considerable expense.

The system of supplying instruction to native teachers, to which the Bishop has from time to time called the attention of his clergy, has already been adopted by the Rev. R. Holberton, Rector of St. John's, Antigua, a Member of the SOCIETY, who is in the habit of assembling the teachers in his parish at the Rectory School, every Saturday mornings, and giving them a plain and particular account of the contents of the chapter which is to form the subject of the Bible Lessons through the week. Each teacher is provided with a blank copy-book and pencil, and puts down the heads of instruction, to convey to the children in the School.

The Board agreed to grant Books for the School Teachers' Library in Antigua, to an amount not exceeding 20*l.*

The following Memorial of the Episcopalians in Inverness was read to the Meeting:—

"That your Memorialists, in the year 1836, finding that the Chapel in which they assembled for the public worship of Almighty God had fallen into decay, and their increasing numbers; also requiring an increase of Church accommodation, did, with the full sanction and approbation of the Bishop of the Diocese, commence a subscription for the purpose of erecting a Chapel in the town of Inverness, of structure and dimensions suitable to the Congregation, and with 100 free sittings for the poor. For this purpose a sum was raised, during that and the following year, of such amount as to encourage your Memorialists to proceed with the building, in the hope that, as it advanced, a good Providence would incline the hearts of piously-disposed persons to contribute still further towards its completion. In that expectation your Memorialists were not altogether disappointed; for since the foundation of the Chapel was laid, in August, 1837, several additional subscriptions have been obtained, both at home and from Christian friends at a distance. Still, the sum necessary to complete the building is greater than there is any reasonable prospect of obtaining among Episcopalians in this neighbourhood, however zealous to promote the undertaking. The subscriptions, obtained by great exertions on the part of the Building Committee, are still nearly 400*l.* short of the estimated expense, including the price of the site; but it is confidently expected, that were the venerable SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE to extend its well-known bounty, by a grant of 100*l.* towards this most important object, means might be adopted (grounded upon this benefaction) for raising the remainder of the sum required.

"The Episcopalians in Inverness would be thus relieved from the painful prospect of being left for an indefinite time without a place of worship; and thus also an interesting and flourishing branch of the Episcopal Church would be materially aided, at a very critical and important crisis, in promoting the spiritual welfare of her members, and in a degree, the general interest of the Catholic Church of Christ.

"CHARLES FYVIE, Episcopal Clergyman in Inverness."

A Letter was received from the Right Rev. Bishop Low, approving of this application, and recommending it to the Meeting.

The Board agreed to grant 100*l.*

A similar Memorial of the Scottish Episcopal Congregation at Alloa, of which the Rev. John Hunter is the Minister, was then read.

The following letter, upon the same subject, from the Right Rev. Bishop Walker to the Secretary was read to the Meeting:

"22, Stafford Street, Edinburgh,
Nov. 21, 1838.

"Reverend and Dear Sir,

"A general meeting of the clergy of this diocese was held here yesterday; after which the Rev. John Hunter from Alloa laid before me a copy of the memorial addressed to the SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE from the Episcopal congregation of that town, together with your letter of the 12th current addressed to him.

"Your venerable SOCIETY has so frequently and so liberally granted aid to our poor Church, that I feel peculiar reluctance in troubling you; and I had some hope that we might be able to manage in Alloa to raise a sum sufficient for the purpose of building a new chapel there without applying to you to whom we have never on any occasions applied in vain. Great exertions have been made and are making: but by these we cannot hope to raise an adequate supply. I can most sincerely say that no congregation for which I have ever applied, or in whose application I have concurred, has stronger claims than that of Alloa. It was the congregation of the very excellent Bishop Alexander; and when the last resident Minister died in 1808, Dr. Russell, was ordained, and did the duty there regularly, till he was removed to Leith. After this we were able only to provide occasional service once a month, and when Dr. Bain, who thus officiated, died, we were obliged most reluctantly to give it up altogether; such members as were able, going to Stirling as often as they could.

"I have had the greatest satisfaction in being able, after a long and painful interval, to place among the good people of Alloa a resident pastor of great worth, and who happily gives entire satisfaction to his flock. He has been known for many years to Bishop Russell and myself. He is satisfied with his situation and with the provision which his flock makes for him, which he is enabled to increase by teaching, without interfering with the duties of his sacred office. I have every reason to believe, that with such a modest structure as is contemplated, their numbers will greatly increase; and I know no country congregation with a better prospect of permanence. The members of it are Episcopalians, not in name but on principle, knowing well the peculiarities of our system, and attached to them because they believe them to be of Apostolic, and, therefore, of Divine origin. If your venerable SOCIETY can extend your aid to this congregation, I am sure that your bounty will be duly appreciated and most usefully applied."

The Memorial and Letter having been read, the Board agreed to grant the sum of 100*l.* towards building a new chapel at Alloa.

An Application was read in behalf of the fishermen of Brixham, Devon, under the following circumstances:—

"They form a large and very interesting class of the parishioners in Lower Brixham. They are as a body very well affected towards the Church, but from their occupations and habits require peculiar attention and instruction. To meet their wants a Sunday School has been established for them, which contains adults as well as boys. Attached to this school is a Lending Library, which has created and cherished a desire for reading among the fishermen and their families. It is wished to turn the influence and instruction of the school to their further good, during the absence of very many of them at Ramsgate, whither they go for six or eight months every year to fish. With this view, a plan has this season been proposed, (and already partly acted upon,) for furnishing every vessel with a few suitable Books and Tracts to take with them. To insure attention to these books, the Clergyman makes a point of seeing the crew of every vessel before they leave, and improving as far as possible, with each individual, this opportunity of personal intercourse. As far as the plan has been acted upon, the men have expressed themselves very thankful for the interest thus taken in their welfare, and the books furnished for their use. These vessels will return from Ramsgate in the summer, and again come under the ministrations of their Clergyman, whose work among them will be materially assisted if help can be obtained from the SOCIETY.

"It is desirable of course to obtain such books as will interest the minds of the men, while, under God's blessing, it is hoped they may reach their hearts."

The Lord Bishop of Exeter strongly recommended this application to the favourable consideration of the Board.

It was agreed to grant books to the amount of 10*l.*

At this Meeting it was agreed to present a large Bible and Common Prayer Books for the desks, and books for the Communion Table, for the use of a new church at Casterton, Kirkby Lonsdale.

Bibles and Common Prayer Books for the reading desk were granted for new churches at Bartley Green, near Birmingham; and at Newton Abbot, Devon.

A Quarto Bible and Common Prayer Books were also granted for the use of a School-room about to be licensed by the Lord Bishop of the diocese, for the purpose of Divine Service, at Great Baddow, Essex; and for each of three School-rooms licensed for the same purpose in the parish of Deane, Bolton-le-Moor.

Several gratuitous grants of books for Schools, Lending Libraries, &c. were made.

A letter was read from the Right Rev. Bishop Russell, thanking the SOCIETY for the grant of one hundred pounds towards the new Episcopal Chapel at Glasgow. He says the structure will cost 4,000*l.*; that it will hold 1,500 persons; and that there is the best prospect of its being fully occupied.

Two Legacies of 50*l.* and 19*l.* respectively, and sundry donations to the SOCIETY'S several designs were announced at this Meeting.

Forty new Members were admitted.

NEW MARRIAGE ACT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES.

Sir,—At our Board-room this morning we were both amused and shocked at the way in which a couple purposed to avail themselves of this abominable Act.

A young woman, aged twenty, who has been a widow only one month, and whose husband died in his eightieth year, proposes to be married to a young man, aged also twenty. The clergyman of the parish in which they reside, having very properly refused to marry them, because the young man is the grandson of the deceased husband, and consequently he wants to marry his own grandmother, both being under age, the bans have been this day published in the Board-room for the first time, and if no caveat is entered before the third publication, nothing can prevent the Registrar uniting this delightful couple.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,
ONE OF THE BOARD OF GUARDIANS.
Oundle Union, Northamptonshire, Oct. 18.

Sir,—Though you do not appear to have noticed my letter, signed "One of the Board of Guardians," Oundle, still I think the matter has so improved in interest, that I give you the proceedings that have since taken place.

At our last Board, the clergyman of the parish (Glaphorne), the Rev. Alexander Macdonald, entered a caveat in these words—

"Because William Taylor is the illegitimate son of Benjamin Paine, the son of William Paine, the deceased husband of the said Anne Paine."

This caveat has been sent to the Registrar-General, and I send you a literal copy of his reply.

"General Registry-office, Oct. 26, 1838.

"Sir,—By direction of the Registrar-General, I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 25th instant (enclosing the caveat), and in reply to inform you, that however objectionable the marriage to which you allude may be in a moral point of view, yet the caveat does not contain any grounds on which the solemnization of the marriage can be legally prevented. I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

"THOMAS MANN, Chief Clerk.

"To S. Tibbitts, Esq., Superintendent-Registrar, Oundle."

The parties in question are both under age.

If you think this, with my other statement, worth notice, you will do what you think right with them.

Yours, &c., C. P.

Oundle, Oct. 30, 1838.

•• We waited only for the authentication of these letters, which, having received, we publish them.—Times.

COMMUTATION OF TITHES.

The following circulars have been issued by the Tithe Commissioners:—

"Tithe Commission, Oct. 31, 1838.

"Rev. Sir,—It has been determined to select and carry through the courts, at the public expense, one case in which the law of rating tithes, as laid down in the case of 'The King v. Joddrell' may be reconsidered and finally settled by the Court of Queen's Bench.

"I send you notice of this intention, that in case you are involved in, or are contemplating, litigation, you may, if you think proper, avoid expense by suspending the course of that litigation, and abiding the result of the case selected for trial.

"If you are not the tithe owner, or not the sole tithe owner of the parish you reside in, you will oblige me by transmitting this letter or the information contained in it, to the tithe owner or tithe owners.

"If litigation has already begun, you will further favour me by transmitting to me, under cover to 'The Tithe Commissioners for England and Wales, London,' an account of your case, and of the stage it has reached.

"That case which seems best adapted to raise all the questions it is wished to have settled, and no others will be selected for trial and subsequent argument in the Queen's Bench.

"I have the honour to be, Rev. Sir, your faithful servant.

RICHARD JONES.

"To the Rev. the Officiating Minister of—."

MEMORANDUM ON THE SUBJECT OF RATING OF TITHES.

"The ascertaining of the principles of different relative liabilities, according to which different properties may be rateable, is the duty of the overseers in making the rate, not of the valuer in making his valuation.

"As respects the relative liability of several classes of property, especially the different liabilities of tithe and farmed lands, great doubts are at present entertained, and the commissioners are not competent to resolve them.

"The commissioners are very desirous of seeing some appeal tried in a way to raise the question in a manner in which it may be satisfactorily settled by the proper legal tribunals.

"In the mean time, and until a satisfactory decision can be obtained upon this subject, the commissioners would recommend that a temporary arrangement should be adopted, by which neither party could be eventually injured.

"The following arrangement appears likely to answer the purpose:—

"The tithes, or other property, in which the parties interested claim to be rated below the net annual value as defined by the Parochial Assessment Act, might, notwithstanding such claim, be provisionally rated at the net annual value as so defined and ascertained by the valuer.

"Until the question of relative liability be determined, the overseers might collect no more than a definite proportion, as, for example, two-thirds of the rate charged on the tithes, or such other proportion as the tithe owner might admit his liability to pay.

"When the question is finally determined, the intermediate payments should be considered as payments on account, and the excess should be returned, or the deficiency made up, as the case may then require.

"Sept. 8, 1838."

Poor Law Commission Office, Somerset House.
November 3, 1838.

Sir,—Since the date of the enclosed memorandum on the subject of rating of tithes, arrangements have been decided on for raising the question before the proper tribunals, by a suit to be carried on and conducted at the public expense. The Poor Law Commissioners trust that in the meantime, until a sufficient period has elapsed to allow of the decision being obtained, the individuals who have commenced, or decided to commence, legal proceedings which depend on the solution of this question, will see the propriety of taking such steps as may be necessary for suspending the proceedings, without prejudice to the claims in dispute, and that the boards of guardians, so far as lies in their power, will endeavour to discourage all such litigation.

Signed by order of the board,
EDWIN CHADWICK, Secretary.

DISSENTERS' REGISTERS.

THE Commissioners appointed by a Commission under the great seal, bearing date 13th September, 1836, for the purpose of inquiring into the state, custody, and authenticity of any such registers or records of births or baptisms, deaths or burials, and marriages lawfully solemnized, as had been heretofore, or were then kept in England and Wales, other than the parochial registers, &c. &c. &c. signed their report to Her Majesty on the 18th of June, 1838. The report has since been printed.

It appears that the Commissioners received about 7000 registers from 3630 religious congregations; that is to say, from

- 37 Foreign Protestant Churches.
- 2264 Presbyterian, Independent, and Baptist Congregations.
- 818 Wesleyan Methodists.
- 10 Moravian.
- 44 Lady Huntingdon's Connexion.
- 436 Calvinistic Methodists.
- 21 Swedenborgians.

3630

The facts contained in the appendices to the report will be found to contain highly valuable information respecting the progress of dissent in all its various forms. In a future Number some further notice may be taken of the contents of the above report. At present it is sufficient to state, that, exclusive of Jews, Quakers, and Roman Catholics, there appear to be 3630 religious communities, who have, to a greater or less extent, established some system of registration for the use of their members. From the congregations comprised under the general name of the "Three Denominations," the Commissioners received books professing to be Registers of 2264 congregations; but they have not verified, as worthy of public recognition, the Registers of more than 1880 of these congregations.

The following analysis of these 1880 Registers, will be found to exhibit the comparative number of Independent, Baptist, and Presbyterian congregations in each county.

In the following table an attempt has been made to arrange the congregations of the Three Denominations according to the date of their foundation; from which it appears, that of 1768 congregations whose dates are recorded,

239	were founded before the year 1700
194	in the succeeding quarter of a century before 1725

255	in the second ten years, &c. &c. 1820
257	in the third ten years, before 1830

This analysis is not warranted to be free from error: it will, however, be found substantially correct, so far as it exhibits a general outline of the state and increase of dissent as it is shown in the history of the Three Denominations.

AN ACT TO ABRIDGE THE HOLDING OF BENEFICES IN PLURALITY, AND TO MAKE BETTER PROVISION FOR THE RESIDENCE OF THE CLERGY.

XXXI. And be it enacted, that if any spiritual person shall trade or deal in any manner contrary to the provisions of this Act, it shall be lawful for the bishop of the diocese where such person shall hold any cathedral preferment, benefice, curacy, or lectureship, or shall be licensed or otherwise allowed to perform the duties of any ecclesiastical office whatever, to cause such person to be cited before his chancellor or other competent judge, and it shall be lawful for such chancellor or other judge, on proof in due course of law of such trading, to suspend such spiritual person for his first offence for such time not exceeding one year, as to such judge shall seem fit; and on proof in like manner before such or any other competent ecclesiastical judge of a second offence committed by such spiritual person subsequent to such sentence of suspension, such spiritual person shall for such second offence be suspended for such time as to the judge shall seem fit; and for his third offence be deprived ab officio et beneficio, and thereupon it shall be lawful for the patron or patrons of any such cathedral preferment, benefice, lectureship, or office, to make donation or to present or nominate to the same as if the person so deprived were actually dead; and in all such cases of suspension the bishop during such suspension shall sequester the profits of any cathedral preferment, benefice, lectureship, or office of which such spiritual person may be in possession, and by an order under his hand direct the application of the profits of the same respectively, after deducting the necessary expences of providing for the due performance of the duties of the same respectively, towards the same purposes and in the same order, as near as the difference of circumstances will admit, as are hereinafter directed with respect to the profits of a benefice sequestered in case of non-compliance after monition with an order requiring a spiritual person to proceed and reside on his benefice, save that no part of such profits shall be paid to the spiritual person so suspended nor applied in satisfaction of a sequestration at the suit of a creditor; and in case of deprivation the bishop shall forthwith give notice thereof in writing under his hand to the patron or patrons of any cathedral preferment, benefice, lectureship, or office, which the said spiritual person may have holden, in the manner hereinafter required with respect to notice to the patron of a benefice continuing under sequestration for one whole year, and thereby becoming void, and any such cathedral preferment or benefice shall lapse at such period after the said notice as any such last-mentioned benefice would under the provisions of this Act lapse: provided always, that no contract shall be deemed to be void by reason only of the same having been entered into by a spiritual person trading or dealing, either solely or jointly with any other person or persons, contrary to the provisions of this Act, but every such contract may be enforced by or against such spiritual person, either solely or jointly with any other person or persons, as the case may be, in the same way as if no spiritual person had been party to such contract.

XXXII. And be it enacted, that every spiritual person holding any benefice shall keep residence on his benefice, and in the house of residence (if any) belonging thereto; and if any such person shall, without any such licence or exemption as is in this Act allowed for that purpose, or unless he shall be resident at some other benefice of which he may be possessed, absent himself from such benefice, or from such house of residence, if any, for any period exceeding the space of three months together, or to be accounted at several times in any one year, he shall, when such absence shall exceed three months, and not exceed six months, forfeit one-third part of the annual value of the benefice from which he shall so absent himself; and when such absence shall exceed six months and not exceed eight months, one-half part of such annual value; and when such absence shall exceed eight months, two-third parts of such annual value; and when such absence shall have been for the whole of the year, three-fourth parts of such annual value.

XXXIII. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for any bishop, upon application in writing by any spiritual person holding any benefice within his diocese whereon there shall be no house or no fit house of residence, by licence under his hand and seal, to be registered in the registry of the diocese, which the registrar is hereby required to do, to permit such person to reside in some fit and convenient house, although not belonging to such benefice, such house to be particularly described and specified in such licence, and for a certain time to be therein also specified, not exceeding the period by this Act limited, and from time to time, as such bishop may think fit, to renew such licence; and every such house shall be a legal house of residence for such specified time to all intents and purposes: provided always, that no such licence shall be granted to such spiritual person to reside in any house unless it be within three miles of the church or chapel of such benefice, nor in case such church or chapel be in any city, or market or borough town, unless such house be within two miles of such church or chapel.

XXXIV. And whereas the governors of the bounty of Queen Anne have purchased, built, or procured, and may hereafter purchase, build, or procure, by way of benefaction or donation to poor benefices, houses not situate within the parishes or places wherein such benefices lie, but so near thereto as to be sufficiently convenient and suitable for the residence of the officiating ministers thereof; be it therefore enacted, that such houses, having been previously approved by the bishop of the diocese, by writing under his hand and seal duly registered in the registry of the diocese, shall be deemed the houses of residence belonging to such benefices to all intents and purposes whatsoever.

XXXV. And be it enacted, that in all cases of rectories having vicarages endowed or perpetual curacies, the residence of the vicar or perpetual curate in the rectory house of such benefice shall be deemed a legal residence to all intents and purposes whatever; provided that the house belonging to the vicarage or perpetual curacy be kept in proper repair to the satisfaction of the bishop of the diocese.

XXXVI. And be it enacted, that from and after the decease of any spiritual person holding any benefice to which a house of residence is annexed, and in which he shall have been residing at the time of his decease, it shall be lawful for the widow of such spiritual person to occupy such house for any period not exceeding two calendar months after the decease of such spiritual person, holding and enjoying therewith the curtilage and garden belonging to such house.

XXXVII. And be it enacted, that no spiritual person, being head ruler of any college or hall within either of the universities of Oxford or Cambridge, or being warden of the university of Durham, or being head master of Eton, Winchester, or Westminster schools, or principal or any professor of the East India college, having been appointed such principal or professor before the time of the passing of this Act, and not having respectively more than one benefice with cure of souls, shall be liable to any of the penalties or forfeitures in this Act contained for or on account of non-residence on any benefice.

XXXVIII. And be it enacted, that no spiritual person being dean of any cathedral or collegiate church, during such time as he shall reside upon his deanery, and no spiritual person having or holding any professorship or any public readership in either of the said universities, while actually resident within the precincts of the university, and reading lectures therein (provided always, that a certificate under the hand of the vice chancellor or warden of the university, stating the fact of such residence, and of the due performance of such duties, shall in every such case be transmitted to the bishop of the diocese wherein the benefice held by such spiritual person is situate, within six weeks after the thirty-first day of December in each year); and no spiritual person serving as chaplain of the Queen's or King's most excellent Majesty, or of the Queen Dowager, or of any of the Queen's or King's children, brethren, or sisters, during so long as he shall actually attend in the discharge of his duty as such chaplain in the household to which he shall belong; and no chaplain of any archbishop or bishop, whilst actually attending in the discharge of his duty as such chaplain; and no spiritual person actually serving as chaplain of the house of commons, or as clerk of the Queen's or King's closet, or as a deputy clerk thereof, while any such person shall be actually attending and performing the functions of his office; and no spiritual person serving as chancellor or vicar general or commissary of any diocese, whilst exercising the duties of his office; or as archdeacon, while upon his visitation, or otherwise engaged in the exercise of his archidiaconal functions; or as dean or subdean, or priest or reader, in any of the Queen's or King's royal chapels at Saint James's or Whitehall, or as reader in the Queen's or King's private chapels at Windsor or elsewhere, or as preacher in any of the inns of court, or at the rolls, whilst actually performing the duty of any such office respectively; and no spiritual person, being provost of Eton college, or warden of Winchester college, or master of the charter house, or principal of Saint David's college, or principal of King's college, London, during the time for which he may be required to reside and shall actually reside therein respectively, shall be liable to any of the penalties or forfeitures in this Act contained for or on account of non-residence on any benefice for the time in any year during which he shall be so as aforesaid resident, engaged, or performing duties, as the case may be, but every such spiritual person shall, with respect to residence on a benefice under this Act, be entitled to account the time in any year during which he shall be so as aforesaid resident, engaged, or performing duties, as the case may be, as if he had legally resided during the same time on some other benefice; any thing in this Act contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

XXXIX. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for any spiritual person, being prebendary, canon, priest vicar, vicar choral, or minor canon, in any cathedral or collegiate church, or being a fellow of one of the said colleges of Eton or Winchester, who shall reside and perform the duties of such office during the period for which he shall be required to reside and perform such duties by the charter or statutes of such cathedral or collegiate church or college, as the case may be, to account such residence as if he had resided on some benefice: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to permit or allow any such prebendary, canon, priest vicar, vicar choral, minor canon, or fellow, to be absent from any benefice on account of such residence and performance of duty for more than five months altogether in any one year, including the time of such residence on his prebend, canonry, vicarage, or fellowship: provided also, that it shall be lawful for any spiritual person having or holding any such office in any cathedral or collegiate church or college in which the year for the purposes of residence is accounted to commence at any other period than the first of January, and who may keep the periods of residence required for two successive years at such cathedral or collegiate church or college, in whole or in part, between the first of January and the thirty-first of December in any one year, to account such residence, although exceeding five months in the year, as reckoned from the first of January to the thirty-first of December, as if he had resided on some benefice, any thing in this Act contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

XL. Provided always, that every spiritual person being in possession of any benefice at the time of the passing of this Act, and entitled by the law previously in force to exemption from residence, or to apply for a licence for non-residence, shall, as to every such benefice, but not as to any after-taken benefice, be entitled to the same exemption from residence, and to the same capacity of applying for and obtaining a licence for non-residence, and to the same right of appeal, in case of refusal or revocation of a licence, to which he was entitled before the time of the passing of this Act; and every bishop and other person empowered before the passing of this Act, to grant such licence to such spiritual person shall have the like power after the passing thereof, any thing hereinbefore contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

XLI. Provided also, and be it enacted, that every spiritual person having any house of residence upon his benefice, who shall not reside therein, shall, during such period or periods of non-residence, whether the same shall be for the whole or part of any year, keep such house of residence in good and sufficient repair; and in every such case it shall be lawful for the bishop to cause a survey of such house of residence to be made by some competent person, the costs of which, in case the house shall be found to be out of repair, shall be borne by such spiritual person; and if the surveyor shall report that such house of residence is out of repair, it shall be lawful for the bishop to issue his monition to the incumbent to put the same in repair, according to such survey and report, a copy of which shall be annexed to the monition; and every such non-resident spiritual person who shall not keep such house of residence in repair, and who shall not, upon such monition, and within one month after service of such monition, show cause to the contrary to the satisfaction of the bishop, or put such house in repair within the space of ten months, to the satisfaction of such bishop, shall be liable to all the penalties for non-residence imposed by this Act, during the period of such house of residence remaining out of repair, and until the same shall have been put in repair.

XLII. And be it enacted, that every spiritual person applying for a licence for non-residence, shall present to the bishop a petition signed by himself or by some person approved by the bishop in that behalf, and shall state therein whether such spiritual person intends to perform the duty of his benefice in person, and in that case where and at what distance from the church or chapel of such benefice he intends to reside; and if he intends to employ a curate, such petition shall state what salary he proposes to give to such curate, and whether the curate proposes to reside or not to reside in the parish in which such benefice is situate; and if the curate intends to reside therein, then whether in the house of residence belonging to such benefice, or in some and what other house; and if he does not intend to reside in the parish, then such petition shall state at what distance therefrom, and at what place, such curate intends to reside, and whether such curate serves any other and what parish as incumbent or curate, or has any and what cathedral prebend, and any and what benefice, or offices in any other and what church or chapel; and such petition shall also state the annual value and the population of the benefice in respect of which any licence for non-residence shall be applied for, and the number of churches or chapels, if more than one, upon such benefice, and the date of the admission of such spiritual person to the said benefice; and it shall not be lawful for the bishop to grant any such licence unless such petition shall contain a statement of the several particulars aforesaid; and every such petition shall be filed in the registry of the diocese by the registrar thereof, and shall be open to inspection, and copies thereof made, with the leave in writing of the bishop.

XLIII. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the bishop, upon such petition being presented to him, and upon such proofs being adduced as to any facts stated in any such petition as he may think necessary and shall require, to grant in such cases as are hereinafter enumerated, in which he shall think fit to grant the same, a licence in writing under his hand for such spiritual person to reside out of the proper house of residence of his benefice, or out of the limits of his benefice, or out of the limits prescribed by this Act, for the purpose of exempting such person from any pecuniary penalty in respect of any non-residence thereon; which licence shall express the cause of granting the same licence: (that is to say), to any spiritual person who shall be prevented from residing in the proper house of residence or within the limits of such benefice, or within the limits prescribed by this Act, by an incapacity of mind or body; and also for a period not exceeding six months to any spiritual person on account of the dangerous illness of his wife or child making part of his family, and residing with him as such; but that no such licence on account of the illness of a wife or child shall be renewed save with the allowance of the archbishop of the province previously signified under his hand in pursuance of a recommendation in writing from the bishop, setting forth the circumstances, proofs, and reasons, which induce him to make such recommendation; and also to any spiritual person having or holding any benefice wherein there shall be no house of residence, or where the house of residence shall be unfit for the residence of such spiritual person, such unfitness not being occasioned by any negligence, default, or other misconduct of such spiritual person, and such spiritual person keeping such house of residence, if any, and the buildings belonging thereto, in good and sufficient repair and condition to the satisfaction of the bishop, and a certificate under the hand of two neighbouring incumbents, countersigned by the rural dean, if any, that no house convenient for the residence of such spiritual person can be obtained within the parish, or within the limits prescribed by this Act, being first produced to the bishop; and also to grant to any spiritual person holding any benefice and occupying in the same parish any mansion or messuage whereof he shall be the owner, a licence to reside in such mansion or messuage, such spiritual person keeping the house of residence and other buildings belonging thereto in good and sufficient repair and condition, and producing to the bishop proof to his satisfaction at the time of granting every such licence of such good and sufficient repair and condition: provided always, that any such spiritual person, within one month after refusal of any such licence, may appeal to the archbishop of the province, who shall confirm such refusal, or direct the bishop to grant a licence under this Act, as shall seem to the said archbishop just and proper.

XLIV. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for any bishop, in any case not hereinbefore enumerated, in which such bishop shall think it expedient, to grant to any spiritual person holding any benefice within his diocese a licence to reside out of the limits of such benefice: provided always, that in every such case the nature and special circumstances thereof, and the reasons that have induced such bishop to grant such licence, shall be forthwith transmitted to the archbishop of the province, who shall forthwith proceed therein as hereinafter provided in cases of appeal, and shall allow or disallow such licence in the whole or in part, or make any alteration therein, as to the period for which the same may have been granted or otherwise; and no such licence shall be valid unless it shall have been so allowed by such archbishop, such allowance thereof being signified by the signing thereof by such archbishop: provided also, that it shall not be necessary in such licence to specify the cause of granting the same.

XLV. And be it enacted, that during the vacancy of any see the power of granting licences of non-residence under this Act, subject to the regulations herein contained, shall be exercised by the guardian of the spiritualities of the diocese; or in case the bishop of any diocese shall be disabled from exercising in person the functions of his office, such power shall be exercised by the person or persons lawfully empowered to exercise his general jurisdiction in the diocese: provided always, that no licence granted by any other than the bishop shall be valid until the archbishop of the province shall have signified his approbation of the grant of such licence by signing the same.

XLVI. And be it enacted, that no licence for non-residence granted under this Act, or under the said hereinbefore second-recited Act, shall continue in force after the thirty-first day of December in the year next after the year in which such licence shall have been or shall be granted.

XLVII. And be it enacted, that every person obtaining any licence of non-residence, shall pay for the same to the secretary or officer of the bishop, or other person granting the same, the sum of ten shillings, over and above the stamp duty chargeable thereon, and no more, and also the sum of three shillings, and no more, to the registrar of the diocese, and shall also pay the sum of five shillings to the secretary of the archbishop when any such licence shall have been signed by such archbishop.

XLVIII. And be it enacted, that no licence of non-residence shall become void by the death or removal of the bishop granting the same, but the same shall be and remain valid, notwithstanding any such death or removal, unless the same shall be revoked as hereinafter mentioned.

XLIX. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for any archbishop or bishop who shall have granted any licence of non-residence as aforesaid, or for any successor of any such archbishop or bishop, after having given such incumbent sufficient opportunity of showing reason to the contrary, in any case in which there may appear to such archbishop or bishop good cause for revoking the same, by an instrument in writing under his hand to revoke any such licence: provided always, that any such incumbent may, within one month after service upon him of such revocation, if by a bishop, appeal to the archbishop of the province, who shall confirm or annul such revocation as to him shall appear just and proper.

L. And be it enacted, that every bishop who shall grant or revoke any licence of non-residence under this Act shall, and he is hereby required, within one month after the grant or revocation of such licence, to cause a copy of every such licence or revocation to be filed in the registry of his diocese; and an alphabetical list of such licences and revocations shall be made out by the registrar of such diocese, and entered in a book, and kept for the inspection of all persons, upon payment of three shillings, and no more; and a copy of every such licence, and a statement in writing of the grounds of exemption, shall be transmitted by the spiritual person to whom such licence shall have been granted, or who may be exempted from residence, to the churchwardens or chapelwardens of the parish or place to which the same relates, within one month after the grant of such licence, or of his taking advantage of such exemption, as the case may be; and every bishop revoking any such licence shall cause a copy of such revocation to be transmitted, within one month after the revocation thereof, to the churchwardens or chapelwardens of the parish or place to which it relates; which copies of licences and revocation, and statements of exemption, shall be by such churchwardens or chapelwardens deposited in the parish chest, and shall likewise be produced by them, and publicly read by the registrar or other officer, at the visitation of the ecclesiastical district within which such benefice shall be locally situate next succeeding the receipt thereof; and every spiritual person who shall neglect so to transmit a copy of such licence or statement of exemption, as hereby required, shall lose all benefit of such licence, and until he shall have transmitted such statement, shall not be entitled to the benefit of such exemption: provided always, that in case the archbishop of the province shall on appeal to him annul the revocation of any such licence, the bishop by whom such revocation shall have been made shall, immediately on receiving notice from the archbishop that he has annulled the same, order, by writing under his hand, that the copies of such revocation shall be forthwith withdrawn from the said registry and parish chest, and that the same shall not be produced and read at the visitation, and that such revocation shall be erased from the list of revocations in the said registry; which order shall be binding on the registrar and churchwardens respectively to whom the same shall be addressed.

LI. And be it enacted, that every archbishop who shall in his own diocese grant any licence of non-residence, or who shall approve and allow, in manner directed by this Act, any such licence in any case not enumerated in this Act, or any renewal of a licence in the case of the dangerous illness of the wife or child of any spiritual person, shall annually in the month of January in each year transmit to Her Majesty in Council a list of all licences or renewals so granted or allowed by such archbishop respectively in the year ending on the last day of December preceding such month of January, and shall in every such list specify the reasons which have induced him to grant or allow each such licence or renewal, together with the reasons transmitted to him by the bishops for granting or recommending each such licence in their respective dioceses; and it shall be lawful for Her Majesty in Council, by an order made for that purpose, to revoke and annul any such licence; and if Her Majesty in Council shall think fit so to do, such order shall be transmitted to the archbishop who shall have granted or approved and allowed such licence or renewal, who shall thereupon cause a copy of every such order to be transmitted to the bishop of the diocese in which such licence shall have been granted; and such bishop shall cause a copy of the mandatory part of the order to be filed in the registry of such diocese, and a like copy to be delivered to the churchwardens or chapelwardens of the parish or place to which the same relates, in manner hereinbefore directed as to revocation of licences; and every such archbishop shall cause a copy of the mandatory part of every such order made in relation to any such licence granted by him in his own diocese to be in like manner filed in the registry of his diocese, and a like copy also to be delivered to the churchwardens or chapelwardens of the parish or place to which such licence shall relate in manner before mentioned: provided always, that after such licence shall have been so revoked by Her Majesty in Council the same shall nevertheless, in all questions that shall have arisen or may thereafter arise touching the non-residence of the spiritual person to whom the same shall have been granted, between the time at which the same was granted or approved and allowed, and the time of the revocation thereof being so filed in the registry, be deemed and taken to have been valid.

LII. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for each bishop, and he is hereby required to transmit, some time in the month of January in each year, to every spiritual person holding any benefice within his diocese or jurisdiction, the questions contained in the first schedule to this Act, for the purpose of better enabling the several bishops to make the returns hereinafter mentioned; and every spiritual person to whom such questions shall be so transmitted shall, within three weeks from the day on which the same shall be delivered to him, or to the officiating minister of the benefice for the time being, make and transmit to the bishop full and specific answers thereto, such answers being signed by such spiritual person.

LIII. And be it enacted, that on or before the twenty-fifth day of March in every year, a return shall be made to Her Majesty in Council by every bishop, of the name of every benefice within his diocese or jurisdiction, and the names of the several spiritual persons holding the same respectively who shall have resided thereon; and also the names of the several spiritual persons who, by reason of any exemption under or by virtue of this Act, or by reason of any licence granted by such bishop, shall not have resided on their respective benefices; and also the names of all spiritual persons, not having any such exemption or licence, who shall not have resided on their respective benefices, so far as the bishop is informed thereof; and also the substance of the answers received in all cases to the questions so transmitted as aforesaid.

LIV. And be it enacted, that in every case in which it shall appear to the bishop that any spiritual person holding any benefice within his diocese, and not having a licence to reside elsewhere than in the house of residence belonging thereto, nor having any legal cause of exemption from residence, does not sufficiently, according to the true meaning and intent of this act, reside on such benefice, it shall be lawful for such bishop, instead of proceeding for penalties under this Act, or for penalties incurred before the passing of this Act under the Act of the fifty-seventh year of His Majesty King George the Third, or after proceeding for the same, to issue or cause to be issued a monition to such spiritual person, requiring him forthwith to proceed to and to reside on such benefice, and perform the duties thereof, and to make a return to such monition within a certain number of days after the issuing thereof; provided that in every such case there shall be thirty days between the time of serving such monition on such spiritual person, in the manner hereinafter directed, and the time specified in such monition for the return thereto; and the spiritual person on whom any such monition shall be served shall, within the time specified for that purpose, make a return thereto into the registry of the diocese, to be there filed; and it shall be lawful for the bishop to whom any such return shall be made to require such return or any fact contained therein to be verified by evidence; and in every case where no such return shall be made, or where such return shall not state such reasons for the non-residence of such spiritual person as shall be deemed satisfactory by the bishop, or where such return, or any of the facts contained therein, shall not be so verified as aforesaid, when such verification shall have been required, it shall be lawful for the bishop to issue an order in writing under his hand and seal, requiring such spiritual person to proceed and reside as aforesaid within thirty days after such order shall have been served upon him in like manner as is hereinafter directed with respect to the service of monitions; and in case of non-compliance with such order it shall be lawful for the bishop to sequester the profits of such benefice until such order shall be complied with, or such sufficient reasons for non-compliance therewith shall be stated and proved as aforesaid, and to direct, by an order to be made for that purpose under his hand, and filed as aforesaid, the application of such profits, after deducting the necessary expences of serving the cure, either in the whole or in such proportions as he shall think fit, in the first place to the payment of the penalties proceeded for, if any, and of such reasonable expences as shall have been incurred in relation to such monition and sequestration, and in the next place towards the repair or sustentation of the chancel, house of residence of such benefice, or of any of the buildings and appurtenances thereof, and of the glebe and demesne lands, and in the next place, where such benefice shall be likewise under sequestration at the suit of any creditor, then towards the satisfaction of such last-mentioned sequestration; and after the satisfaction thereof, then and in the next place towards the augmentation or improvement of any such benefice, or the house of residence thereof, or any of the buildings and appurtenances thereof, or towards the improvement of any of the glebe or demesne lands thereof, or to order and direct the same or any portion thereof to be paid to the treasurer of the governors of the bounty of Queen Anne, for the purposes of the said bounty, as such bishop shall, in his discretion, under all circumstances, think fit and expedient; and it shall also be lawful for the bishop, within six months after such order for sequestration, or within six months after any money shall have been actually levied by such sequestration, to remit to such spiritual person any proportion of such sequestered profits, or to cause the same or any part thereof, whether the same remain in the hands of the sequester or shall have been paid to the said treasurer, to be paid to such spiritual person; and every such sequester at the suit of the bishop, is hereby required, upon receiving an order under the hand of such bishop, forthwith to obey the same; and the said treasurer is hereby authorized and required, upon receiving a like order from such bishop, to make such payment out of any money in his hands: provided always that any such spiritual person may, within one month after service upon him of the order for any such sequestration, appeal to the archbishop of the province, who shall make such order relating thereto, or to the profits that shall have been so sequestered as aforesaid, for the return of the same or any part thereof to such spiritual person, or to such sequester at the suit of any creditor, (as the case may be), or otherwise as may appear to such archbishop to be just and proper; but nevertheless such sequestration shall be in force during such appeal.

LV. And be it enacted, that every spiritual person to whom any such monition or order in writing shall be issued as aforesaid, who shall be at the time of the issuing thereof absent from his benefice, contrary to the provisions of this Act, but who shall forthwith obey such monition or order, and the profits of whose benefice shall by reason of such obedience not be sequestered, shall nevertheless pay all costs, charges, and expences incurred by reason of the issuing and serving such monition or order, and that the proceedings thereon shall not be stayed until such payment shall be made.

LVI. And for effectually enforcing bona fide residence according to the intent of such monition and order, be it enacted, that if any spiritual person, not having a licence to reside out of the limits of his benefice, nor having other lawful cause of absence from the same, who after any such monition or order as aforesaid requiring him to reside, and before or after any such sequestration as aforesaid, shall in obedience to any such monition or order have begun to reside upon his benefice, shall afterwards, and before the expiration of twelve months next after the commencement of such residence, wilfully absent himself from such benefice for the space of one month together, or to be accounted at several times, it shall be lawful for the bishop, without issuing any other monition or making any order, to sequester and apply the profits of such benefice, as before directed by this Act, for the purpose of enforcing the residence of such spiritual person, according to the true intent of the original monition issued by the bishop as aforesaid; and it shall be lawful for the bishop so to proceed in like cases from time to time as often as occasion may require; provided that in each such case such spiritual person may, within one month after the service upon him of the order for any such sequestration, appeal to the archbishop of the province, who shall make such order relating thereto, or to the profits sequestered, or to any part thereof, as to him may seem just and proper, but nevertheless such sequestration shall be in force during such appeal.

LVII. And be it enacted, that in every case in which any archbishop or bishop shall think proper, after proceeding by monition for the recovery of any penalty under this Act for Non-residence of more than one-third part of the yearly value of any benefice for any non-residence exceeding six months in the year, to remit the whole or any part of any such penalty, such archbishop shall forthwith transmit to Her Majesty in Council, and such bishop shall forthwith transmit to the archbishop of the province to which he belongs, a statement of the nature and special circumstances of each case, and the reasons for the remission of any such penalty; and it shall thereupon be lawful for Her Majesty in Council, or for the archbishop, as the case may be, to allow or disallow such remission in whole or in part, in the same manner as is provided in this Act with relation to the allowance or disallowance of licences of Non-residence granted in cases not hereinbefore expressly enumerated; provided always, that the decision of the archbishop with respect to cases transmitted to him from a bishop shall be final.

LVIII. And be it enacted, that if the benefice of any spiritual person shall continue for the space of one whole year under sequestration issued under the provisions of this Act for disobedience to the bishop's monition or order requiring such spiritual person to reside on his benefice, or if such spiritual person shall, under the provisions of this Act, incur two such sequestrations in the space of two years, and shall not be relieved with respect to either of such sequestrations upon appeal, such benefice shall thereupon become void; and it shall be lawful for the patron of such benefice to make donation or to present or nominate to the same as if such spiritual person were dead, and the bishop on such benefice so becoming void, shall give notice in writing under his hand to such patron, which notice shall either be delivered to such patron or left at his usual place of abode, or if such patron or place of abode shall be unknown, or shall be out of England, such notice shall be twice inserted in the London Gazette, and also twice in some newspaper printed and usually circulated in London, and in some other newspaper usually circulated in the neighbourhood of the place where such benefice is situate; and for the purposes of lapse the avoidance of the benefice shall be reckoned from the day on which such notice shall have been delivered as aforesaid, or from the day on which six months shall have expired after the second publication of such notice in the London Gazette, as the case may be; and every such notice in the Gazette and newspapers shall state that the patron or the place of abode of the patron is unknown, or that he is said to be out of England, as the case may be, and that the benefice will lapse, at the furthest, after the expiration of one year from the second publication thereof as aforesaid; and upon any such avoidance it shall not be lawful for the patron to appoint by donation or present or nominate to such benefice so avoided the person by reason of whose non-residence the same was so avoided.

LIX. And be it enacted, that any agreement made for the letting of the house of residence, or the buildings, gardens, orchards, or appurtenances necessary for the convenient occupation of the same, belonging to any benefice, to which house of residence any spiritual person may be required, by order of the bishop as aforesaid, to proceed and to reside therein, or which may be assigned or appointed as a residence to any curate by the bishop, shall be made in writing, and shall contain a condition for avoiding the same, upon a copy of such order, assignment, or appointment being served upon the occupier thereof, or left at the house, and otherwise shall be null and void; and a copy of every such order, assignment, or appointment shall immediately on the issuing thereof be transmitted to one of the churchwardens of the parish, or such other person as the bishop shall think fit, and be by him forthwith served on the occupier of such house of residence, or left at the same; and any person continuing to hold any such house of residence, or any such building, garden, orchard, or appurtenances, after the day on which such spiritual person shall be directed by such order to reside in such house of residence, or which shall be specified in any such order, assignment, or appointment, and after such copy shall be so served or left as aforesaid, shall forfeit the sum of forty shillings for every day he shall, without the permission of the bishop in writing under his hand for that purpose obtained, wilfully continue to hold any such house, building, garden, orchard, or appurtenances, together with the expense of serving or leaving such order, assignment, or appointment, to be allowed by the bishop issuing the order or making such assignment or appointment; and it shall also be lawful for the spiritual person so directed to reside, or the curate to whom any such residence is assigned, to apply to any justice of the peace having jurisdiction in the place for a warrant for the taking possession thereof; and the justice to whom any such order for such possession is produced shall and he is hereby required, upon its being duly verified, to grant a warrant to some peace officer to deliver such possession, and possession may thereupon be taken of such house under such warrant at any time in the daytime, by entering the same by force, if necessary, without any other proceeding by ejectment or otherwise, any law or statute to the contrary notwithstanding; provided that any person who shall have been in possession of any such house of residence or premises under a verbal agreement only, or under any agreement in which the condition aforesaid for avoiding the same shall not be inserted, and who shall be turned out of possession by virtue of this Act, shall be entitled to sue the person with whom he or she had entered into such agreement for damages occasioned by his or her being so turned out of possession, to be recovered in any of Her Majesty's Superior Courts at Westminster.

LX. Provided always, and be it enacted, that no spiritual person shall be liable to any penalty for not residing in any such house of residence during such time as such tenant shall continue to occupy such house of residence or other building or appurtenances necessary to the occupation of the same.

LXI. And be it enacted, that no oath shall be required of or taken by any vicar in relation to residence on his vicarage; any law, custom, constitution, or usage to the contrary notwithstanding.

LXII. And be it enacted, that upon or at any time after the avoidance of any benefice it shall be lawful for the bishop and he is hereby required, to issue a commission to four beneficed clergymen of his diocese, or if the benefice be within his peculiar jurisdiction, but locally situate in another diocese, then to four beneficed clergymen of such last-mentioned diocese, one of whom shall be the rural dean (if any) of the rural deanery or district wherein such benefice shall be situate, directing them to inquire whether there is a fit house of residence within such benefice, and what are the annual profits of such benefice, and if the clear annual profits of such benefice exceed one hundred pounds, whether a fit house of residence can be conveniently provided on the glebe of such benefice, or otherwise; and if the said commissioners, or any three of them, shall report in writing under their hands to the said bishop that there is no fit house of residence within such benefice, and that the clear annual profits of such benefice exceed one hundred pounds, and that a fit house of residence can be conveniently provided on the glebe of such benefice, or on any land which can be conveniently procured for the site of such house of residence, it shall be lawful for the said bishop and he is hereby required to procure from some skilful and experienced workman or surveyor a certificate containing a statement of the condition of the buildings (if any), and of the value of the timber and other materials (if any) thereupon fit to be employed in building or repairing or to be sold, and also a plan or estimate of the work fit and proper to be done for building or repairing such house of residence, with all necessary and convenient offices, and thereupon, by mortgage of the glebe, tithes, rents, rent-charges, and other profits and emoluments, arising or to arise from such benefice, to levy and raise such sum or sums as the said estimate shall amount to, after deducting the value of any timber or other materials which may be thought proper to be sold, not exceeding four years net income and produce of such benefice, after deducting all outgoings (except only the salary of the assistant curate where such a curate is necessary), which mortgage shall be made to the person or persons who shall advance the money so to be levied and raised for the term of thirty-five years, or until the money so to be raised, with interest for the same, and such costs and charges as may attend the recovery thereof, shall be fully paid and satisfied according to the provisions of this Act; and the said mortgage shall be made by one or more deed or deeds in the form or to the effect for that purpose contained in the second schedule to this Act, and shall bind the incumbent of such benefice for the time being and his successors until the principal and interest, costs and charges, shall be fully paid off and satisfied, and every incumbent for the time being is hereby made liable to the payment of so much of the principal, interest, and costs as under the directions hereinafter contained shall become payable during the time he shall be such incumbent, and every such incumbent and his representatives shall be and are hereby also made respectively liable to the proportion of the payments for the year which shall be growing at the time of the death of such incumbent or avoidance of such benefice according to the directions hereinafter contained, which said principal, interest, and costs, and the proportion of payment growing at the time of the death of such incumbent or of such avoidance, shall and may be recovered by action of debt in any court of record.

LXIII. Provided always, and be it enacted, that the said bishop shall cause to be transmitted to the patron and the incumbent (if any) of such benefice, copies of the report so to be made by such commissioners, and of the plan, estimate, and certificate so to be made by such workman or surveyor, two calendar months at the least before making any such mortgage as aforesaid; and that in case the patron and the incumbent, or either of them, shall object to the proposed site for a residence, or to the proposed plan for erecting or repairing such residence, or to the amount proposed to be raised, and shall deliver such objections in writing to the said bishop before the expiration of such period of two calendar months, the said bishop shall have full power to direct that the plan proposed to be carried into effect shall be altered or modified in such manner as he may think fit: provided also, that if the bishop shall, after receiving the report to be made by such commissioners, be of opinion that it is not expedient under the special circumstances of any such benefice to levy and raise any sum or sums of money by mortgage, as hereinbefore required, or otherwise to take measures for providing a fit house of residence for such benefice, he shall state in detail such special circumstances and the grounds of his opinion in the next annual return to be made by him to Her Majesty in Council, according to the directions hereinbefore contained.

LXIV. And be it enacted, that every such mortgagee shall execute a counterpart of every such mortgage, to be kept by the incumbent for the time being; and a copy of every such deed of mortgage shall be registered in the office of the registrar of the bishop of the diocese, after having been first examined by him with the original, which officer shall register the same, and be entitled to demand and receive the sum of five shillings, and no more, for such register; and every such deed shall be referred to upon all necessary occasions, the person inspecting the same paying one shilling for every such search; and the said deed, or a copy thereof certified under the hand of the registrar, shall be allowed as legal evidence, in case any such mortgage deed shall happen to be lost or destroyed.

LXV. And be it enacted, that whenever the principal and interest directed to be paid to the mortgagee under the provisions of this Act shall be in arrear and unpaid for the space of forty days after the same shall become due, it shall be lawful for such mortgagee, his executors, administrators, or assigns, to recover the same, and the costs and charges attending the recovery thereof, by distress and sale in such manner as rents may be recovered by landlords or lessors from their tenants by the laws in being.

LXVI. And be it enacted, that the money so to be raised shall be paid into the hands of such person or persons as shall be nominated and appointed by the bishop of the diocese by writing under his hand to receive and apply the same for the purposes aforesaid, in the form for that purpose contained in the said schedule, after such nominee shall have given a bond to the ordinary, with sufficient surety, in double the sum so to be borrowed or raised, with condition for his duly applying and accounting for the same according to the directions of this Act; and the receipt of the person or persons so to be nominated shall be a sufficient discharge to the person or persons who shall advance and pay the money; and the person or persons so to be nominated shall enter into contracts with proper persons for such buildings or repairs as shall be approved by the said bishop and shall be specified in an instrument written upon parchment and signed by him, and shall inspect and have the care of the execution of such contracts, and shall pay the money for such buildings and repairs, according to the terms of such agreements, and also the expences of preparing the mortgage deed and incident thereto, and of making such certificate, plan, and estimate, and copies thereof as aforesaid, and shall take proper receipts and vouchers for the same; and as soon as such buildings or repairs shall be completed, and the money paid, shall make out an account of his receipts and payments, together with the vouchers for the same, and enter them in a book fairly written, which shall be signed by him, and laid before the bishop of the diocese and examined by him, and when allowed by writing under his hand, such allowance shall be a full discharge to the person so nominated in respect to the said accounts; and if any balance shall remain in the hands of such nominee or nominees, the same shall be laid out in some further lasting improvements in building upon such glebe, or shall be paid and applied in discharge of so much of the said principal debt as such balance will extend to pay, at the discretion of the said bishop, by order signed by him; and an account shall also be kept, made out, and allowed of such further disbursements in manner aforesaid; all which accounts when made out, completed, and allowed, shall be deposited with the vouchers in the hands of the said registrar, and kept by him for the use and benefit of the incumbents of such benefice for the time being, who shall have a right to inspect the same whenever occasion shall require, paying to such registrar or deputy registrar the sum of one shilling for every such inspection.

LXVII. And be it enacted, that the incumbent of every such benefice, in cases where such mortgage or mortgages shall be made as aforesaid, and his successors for the time being, shall, from and after the expiration of the first year of the said term (in which year no part of the principal sum borrowed shall be repayable), yearly and every year (such year to be computed from the date of such mortgage) pay to the mortgagee one-thirtieth part of the principal sum until the whole thereof shall be repaid, and shall at the end of the first and each succeeding year pay the yearly interest on the principal sum, or so much thereof as shall from time to time remain unpaid; and that every such incumbent shall annually, at his own expense, from the time such buildings authorized to be made by this Act shall be completed, insure, at one of the public offices established in London or Westminster for insurance of houses and buildings, the house and other buildings upon such glebe against accidents by fire, at such sum of money as shall be determined upon by the bishop; and in default of the payment of either the principal or interest in manner aforesaid, or neglect of the incumbent to make such insurance, the bishop shall have power to sequester the profits of the benefice till such payment or insurance shall be made.

LXVIII. And be it enacted, that the sum payable at the end of any year in which there shall be an avoidance of such benefice shall be apportioned between the successor and the incumbent avoiding such benefice by death or otherwise, or his representatives, in such proportions as the profits of such living shall have been received by them respectively for the year in which such death or avoidance shall happen; and that in case any difference shall arise in adjusting or settling the proportions aforesaid, the same shall be determined by two indifferent persons, the one to be named by the said successor, and the other by the person making such avoidance, or his representatives in case of his death; and in case such nominees shall not be appointed within the space of two calendar months next after such death or avoidance, or if they cannot agree in adjusting such proportions within the space of one calendar month after they shall have been appointed, the same shall be determined by some neighbouring clergyman, to be nominated by the bishop, whose determination shall be final and conclusive between the parties.

LXIX. And be it enacted, that all sums of money recovered or received, by suit or compositions, from the representatives of any former incumbent of such benefice, and not laid out in the repairs of such buildings, shall go and be applied in part of the payments under such estimate as aforesaid; and that all money thereafter to be recovered or received, in case the same cannot be had before such buildings are completed, and the money paid for the same, shall be applied as soon as received in payment of the principal then due, as far as the same will extend; or in case the said mortgage money shall have been discharged, all such money arising from dilapidations shall be paid into the hands of the nominee to be appointed as aforesaid, or of some other person or persons to be nominated by the bishop, in case such nominee shall be dead or shall decline to act therein, to be laid out and expended in making some additional buildings or improvements upon the glebe of such benefice, to be approved by the bishop; and in the mean time, or in case such buildings shall not be necessary, then in trust to lay out the same in government or other good securities, and pay the interest thereof to the incumbent for the time being.

LXX. And be it further enacted, that where new buildings are necessary to be provided for the residence of the incumbent of any benefice exceeding in value one hundred pounds a year, and avoided after the passing of this Act, and where such new buildings cannot be conveniently erected on the glebe of such benefice, it shall be lawful for the bishop to contract, or to authorize, if he shall think fit, the person so to be nominated by him as aforesaid to contract, for the absolute purchase of any house or buildings in a situation convenient for the residence of the incumbent of such benefice, and also to contract for any land adjoining or lying convenient to such house or building, or to contract for any land upon which a fit house of residence can be conveniently built, and to raise the purchase money for such house or buildings and land adjoining, or for such land upon which a house of residence can be conveniently built (as the case may be), by mortgage of the glebe, tithes, rents, and other profits and emoluments arising or to arise from such benefice, in the same manner in all respects as is hereinbefore directed with respect to the mortgage hereinbefore authorized or directed to be made, which mortgage shall be binding upon the incumbent and his successors, and he and they and their representatives are hereby made liable to the payment of the principal, interest, and costs, in the same manner and to the same extent as hereinbefore directed with respect to the aforesaid mortgage; and the receipt of such nominee or nominees as aforesaid shall be a sufficient discharge to the person or persons who shall advance or pay the money so to be raised: provided always, that no greater sum shall be charged on any benefice under the authority of this Act than four years net income and produce of such benefice (after such deduction as aforesaid).

LXXI. And be it enacted, that the buildings and lands so to be purchased shall be conveyed to the patron of such benefice and his heirs or successors, as the case may be, in trust for the sole use and benefit of the incumbent of such benefice for the time being and his successors, and shall be annexed to such benefice, and be enjoyed and go in succession with the same for ever; but no contract of purchase made by the nominee shall be valid until confirmed by the bishop by writing under his hand; and every such purchase deed shall be in the form or to the effect contained in the schedule hereunto annexed, and shall be registered in such manner and in such office as the other deeds are hereby directed to be registered.

LXXII. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the governors authorized or appointed to regulate and superintend the bounty given by Her late Majesty Queen Anne for the augmentation of the maintenance of the poor clergy, to advance and lend out of the money which has arisen or shall from time to time arise from that bounty, for promoting and assisting the purposes of this Act, any sum not exceeding the amount hereby authorized to be raised upon such mortgage and security as aforesaid, and subject to the several regulations of this Act, and to receive interest for the same not exceeding four pounds for one hundred pounds by the year.

LXXIII. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for any college or hall within the universities of Oxford and Cambridge, or for any other corporate bodies possessed of the patronage of ecclesiastical benefices, to advance and lend any sum or sums of money of which they have the power of disposing in order to aid and assist the several purposes of this Act for the building, rebuilding, repairing, or purchasing of any houses or buildings for the habitation and convenience of the clergy, upon benefices under the patronage of such college or hall, upon the mortgage and security directed by this Act for the repayment of the principal, without taking any interest for the same.

LXXIV. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said bishop, by writing under his hand, to make such allowance to the person or persons to be nominated by him for the purpose of paying and applying the money so to be raised as aforesaid as he shall think fit, not exceeding the sum of five pounds for every one hundred pounds so to be laid out and expended as aforesaid.

LXXV. And be it enacted, that if any spiritual person holding any benefice, who shall not actually reside thereon nine months in each year, (unless such person shall, with the consent of the bishop, from time to time, signified in writing under his hand and revocable at any time, perform the ecclesiastical duties of the same, he either being resident on another benefice, of which he shall also be the incumbent, or having a legal exemption from residence on his benefice, or having a licence to reside out of the same, or to reside out of the usual house of residence belonging to the same,) shall for a period exceeding three months altogether, or to be accounted at several times, in the course of any one year absent himself from his benefice, without leaving a curate or curates duly licensed or approved by the bishop to perform such ecclesiastical duties, or shall, for a period of one month after the death, resignation, or removal of any curate who shall have served his church or chapel, neglect to notify such death, resignation, or removal to the bishop, or shall for the period of four months after the death, resignation, or removal of such curate neglect to nominate to the bishop a proper curate, in every such case the bishop is hereby authorized to appoint and license a proper curate, with such salary as is by this Act allowed and directed, to serve the church or chapel of the benefice in respect of which such neglect or default shall have occurred: provided always, that such licence shall in every case specify whether the curate is required to reside within the parish or place, or not; and if the curate is permitted by the bishop to reside out of the parish or place, the grounds upon which the curate is so permitted to reside out of the same shall be specified in such licence; and the distance of the residence of any curate from any such church or chapel which he shall be licensed to serve shall not exceed three statute miles, except in cases of necessity, to be approved by the bishop, and specified in the licence.

LXXVI. And be it enacted, that in every case where a curate is appointed to serve in any benefice upon which the incumbent either does not reside or has not satisfied the bishop of his full purpose to reside during four months in the year, such curate shall be required by the bishop to reside within the parish or place in which such benefice is situate, or if no convenient residence can be procured within such parish or place, then within three statute miles of the church or chapel of the benefice in which he shall be licensed to serve, except in cases of necessity, to be approved of by the bishop, and specified in the licence, and such place of residence shall also be specified in the licence.

LXXVII. And be it enacted, that whenever the bishop shall see reason to believe that the ecclesiastical duties of any benefice are inadequately performed, it shall be lawful for him to issue a commission to four beneficed clergymen of his diocese, or if the benefice be within his peculiar jurisdiction but locally situate in another diocese then to four beneficed clergymen of such last-mentioned diocese, one whereof shall be the rural dean, if any, of the rural deanery or district wherein such benefice is situated, directing them to inquire into the facts of the case; and it shall be lawful for the incumbent of the said benefice to add to such commissioners one other incumbent of a benefice within the same diocese; and if the said commissioners or the major part of them report in writing under their hands to the said bishop that in their opinion the duties of such benefice are inadequately performed, it shall be lawful for such bishop, if he shall see fit, by writing under his hand, to require the spiritual person holding such benefice, though he may actually reside or be engaged in performing the duties thereof, to nominate to him a fit person or persons, with sufficient stipend or stipends, to be licensed by him to perform or to assist in performing such duties, specifying therein the grounds of such requisition; and if such spiritual person shall neglect or omit to make such nomination for the space of three months after such requisition so made as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the bishop to appoint and license a curate or curates, as the case shall appear to him to require, with such stipend or stipends as he shall think fit to appoint, not exceeding the respective stipends allowed to curates by this Act in the case of non-resident incumbents, nor, except in the case of negligence, exceeding one half of the net annual value of such benefice; and such bishop shall cause a copy of every such requisition, and the evidence to found the same, to be forthwith filed in the registry of his court: provided always, that it shall be lawful for any such spiritual person within one month after the service upon him of such requisition to nominate a curate, or of notice of any such appointment and licence of such curate or curates, to appeal to the archbishop of the province, who shall approve or revoke such requisition, or confirm or annul such appointment, as to him may seem just and proper.

LXXVIII. And be it enacted, that whenever the annual value of any benefice, the incumbent whereof was not in possession at the time of the passing of this Act, shall exceed five hundred pounds, and the population thereof shall amount to three thousand persons, or though the population do not amount to three thousand persons, if there be in the said benefice a second church or chapel situated not less than two miles from the mother church, and with a hamlet or district connected with it containing four hundred persons, it shall be lawful for the bishop, if he shall see fit, to require the spiritual person holding such benefice, although he shall be resident thereon or engaged in performing the duties thereof, to nominate a fit and proper person to be licensed as a curate to assist in performing the duties of such benefice, and to be paid by the person holding the same; and if a fit person shall not be nominated to the bishop within three months after his requisition for that purpose shall have been delivered to the incumbent, or left at his last or usual place of abode, it shall be lawful for the bishop to appoint and license a curate, with such stipend as he shall think fit to appoint, not exceeding the respective stipends allowed to curates by this Act, nor in any case exceeding one-fifth part of the net annual value of the benefice: provided always, that such spiritual person may, within one month after service upon him of such requisition to nominate a curate, or of notice of any such appointment of a curate, appeal to the archbishop of the province, who shall approve or revoke such requisition, or confirm or annul such appointment, as to him may appear just and proper.

LXXIX. And be it enacted, that in case of a stipend being assigned by the bishop, according to the provisions of this Act, to the curate of any benefice, the incumbent whereof shall have been duly found a lunatic or person of unsound mind, the committee of the estate of any such lunatic or person of unsound mind shall pay such stipend to such curate out of the profits of the benefice which shall come to his hands.

LXXX. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the bishop, in his discretion, to order that there shall be two full services, each of such services, if the bishop shall so direct, to include a sermon or lecture on every Sunday throughout the year, or any part thereof, in the church or chapel of every or any benefice within his diocese, whatever may be the annual value or the population thereof; and also in the church or chapel of every parish or chapel, where a benefice is composed of two or more parishes or chapelries, in which there shall be a church or chapel, if the annual value of the benefice arising from that parish or chapel shall amount to one hundred and fifty pounds, and the population of that parish or chapel shall amount to four hundred persons: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be taken to repeal or affect the provisions of an Act passed in the fifty-eighth year of the reign of His Majesty King George the Third, intitled "An Act for building and promoting the building of additional churches in populous parishes," by which the bishop of any diocese is empowered to direct the performance of a third or additional service in the several churches or chapels within his diocese under the circumstances therein mentioned.

LXXXI. And be it enacted, that every bishop to whom any application shall be made for any licence for a curate to serve for any person not duly residing upon his benefice shall, before he shall grant such licence, require a statement of all the particulars by this Act required to be stated by any person applying for a licence for non-residence; and in every case in which application shall be made to any bishop for a licence for any stipendiary curate to serve in any benefice, whether the incumbent be resident or non-resident, such bishop shall also require a declaration in writing to be made and subscribed by the incumbent and the curate, to the purport and effect that the one bond fide intends to pay, and the other bond fide intends to receive, the whole actual stipend mentioned in such statement, without any abatement in respect of rent or consideration for the use of the glebe house, and without any other deduction or reservation whatever.

LXXXII. And be it enacted, that every curate obtaining such licence as aforesaid, shall pay to the secretary or other proper officer of the bishop for the same, the sum of ten shillings, over and above any stamp duty which may be chargeable thereon, which sum of ten shillings shall be in lieu of all fees heretofore demandable by such secretary or officer for such licence, or for any certificate connected therewith; and that whenever any person shall be licensed to two curacies within the same diocese at the same time, it shall be sufficient for such person to sign a declaration appointed to be signed by an Act, intitled "An Act of uniformity," once only; and it shall be sufficient for such person to produce one certificate only of his having so signed such declaration.

LXXXIII. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the bishop of the diocese and he is hereby required, subject to the several provisions and restrictions in this Act contained, to appoint to every curate of a non-resident incumbent such stipend as is specified in this Act; and every licence to be granted to a stipendiary curate, whether the incumbent of the benefice be resident or non-resident thereon, shall specify the amount of the stipend to be paid to the curate; and in case any difference shall arise between the incumbent of any benefice and his curate touching such stipend, or the payment thereof or of the arrears thereof, the bishop, on complaint to him made, may and shall summarily hear and determine the same, without appeal; and in case of wilful neglect or refusal to pay such stipend, or the arrears thereof, he is hereby empowered to enforce payment of such stipend, or the arrears thereof, by monition, and by sequestration of the profits of such benefice.

LXXXIV. And be it enacted, that it shall not be lawful for the bishop to appoint for the curate of any benefice, to which the spiritual person holding the same was instituted, licensed, or otherwise admitted before the twentieth day of July, one thousand eight hundred and thirteen, any stipend exceeding seventy-five pounds per annum, together with the use of the house of residence, and the gardens and stables belonging thereto, or a further sum of fifteen pounds in lieu of the use of the rectory or vicarage house, or other house of residence, in case there shall be no house, or it shall not appear to the bishop convenient to assign the house to the curate.

LXXXV. And be it enacted, that in every case in which any spiritual person shall have been, since the twentieth day of July, one thousand eight hundred and thirteen, or shall hereafter be instituted, inducted, nominated, or appointed to, or otherwise become incumbent of any benefice, and shall not duly reside thereon, the bishop shall appoint for the curate licensed under the provisions of this Act to serve such benefice such stipend as is hereinafter next mentioned; (that is to say,) such stipend shall in no case be less than eighty pounds per annum, or than the annual value of the benefice, if such value shall not amount to eighty pounds; nor less than one hundred pounds per annum, or than the whole value, if such value shall not amount to one hundred pounds, in any parish or place where the population shall amount to three hundred persons; nor less than one hundred and twenty pounds per annum, or than the whole value, if such value shall not amount to one hundred and twenty pounds, in any parish or place where the population shall amount to five hundred persons; nor less than one hundred and thirty-five pounds per annum, or than the whole value, if such value shall not amount to one hundred and thirty-five pounds, in any parish or place where the population shall amount to seven hundred and fifty persons; nor less than one hundred and fifty pounds per annum, or than the whole value, if such value shall not amount to one hundred and fifty pounds, in any parish or place where the population shall amount to one thousand persons.

LXXXVI. And be it enacted, that where the annual value of any such benefice shall exceed four hundred pounds, it shall be lawful for the bishop to assign to the curate, being resident within the same, and serving no other cure, a stipend of one hundred pounds, notwithstanding the population may not amount to three hundred persons; and that where the annual value of any such benefice shall exceed four hundred pounds, and the population shall amount to five hundred persons, it shall be lawful for the bishop to assign to the curate, being resident within the same, and serving no other cure, any larger stipend, so that the same shall not exceed by more than fifty pounds per annum the amount of the stipend hereinbefore required to be assigned to any such curate; and that where the population of any such benefice shall exceed two thousand persons, it shall be lawful for the bishop to require the incumbent thereof to nominate to him two persons to be licensed as curates; and if such spiritual person shall neglect or omit to make such nomination for the space of three months after such requisition so made as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the bishop to appoint and license two curates or a second curate, and in all and every of such cases to assign to each curate so nominated or appointed such stipend as he shall think fit, not exceeding together the highest rate of stipend allowed by this Act in the case of one such curate, except in cases where the incumbent shall consent to a larger stipend: provided always, that such incumbent may within one month after service upon him of such requisition, or of notice of any such appointment of two curates or a second curate, appeal to the archbishop of the province, who shall approve or revoke such requisition or confirm or annul such appointment, as to him may appear just and proper.

XXXXVII. And be it enacted, that in every case in which the bishop shall be satisfied that any spiritual person holding any benefice within his diocese is non-resident, or has become incapable of performing the duties thereof from age, sickness, or other unavoidable cause, and that, from these or from any other special and peculiar circumstances, great hardship or inconvenience would arise if the full stipend specified in this Act should be allowed to the curate of such benefice, it shall be lawful for such bishop, with the consent of the archbishop of the province, to be signified in writing under the hand of the said archbishop upon the licence to be granted to such curate, to assign to the curate such stipend less than the full amount in this Act specified as shall appear to him just and reasonable: provided always, that in the licence granted in every such case it shall be stated that for special reasons the bishop hath not thought proper to assign to the curate the full stipend required by this Act: provided also, that such special reasons shall be entered fully in a separate book to be kept for that purpose, and to be deposited in the registry of the diocese, which book shall be open to inspection with the leave of the bishop, as in the cases of application for licences for non-residence.

NOVEMBER 16.

DORMER (falsely called WILLIAMS) v. WILLIAMS. Illegal Licence.—This was a question as to the admission of the libel in a suit of nullity of marriage by reason of the invalidity of the licence, under the Act 4 Geo. 4, c. 76, sec. 22. The libel pleaded that the parties, William Henry Williams and Maria Teresa Dormer, the former a bachelor of 21 and the latter a minor of 19, without parents or guardians, agreed to marry, and though the relations with whom Miss Dormer resided were averse to the marriage, they mutually determined to effect the same clandestinely; that Mr. Williams undertook to procure a licence for the purpose of their being married at the parish church of Swinnerton in the county of Stafford, in the diocese of Lichfield and Coventry (in which parish Miss Dormer resided): but instead of procuring such licence from some person having authority to grant the same, he procured a licence from a surrogate and under the seal of the Bishop of St. Asaph, as for a marriage in the parish of Swinnerton, which was not within that diocese; that having obtained this licence, and finding it null, but fearing that in the event of any delay in procuring another licence, the relations of Miss Dormer might interfere, he induced her to consent to the celebration of the marriage at the parochial chapel of his own parish of Halston, in the county of Salop, and the diocese of St. Asaph, provided he could procure a clergyman who would perform the ceremony therein by virtue of this licence; that Mr. Williams accordingly, on 22nd December 1826, proceeded to the village of Ellesmere, nine miles from Halston, and there obtained the consent of the Rev. Joseph Fish, to celebrate the marriage in the parochial chapel of Halston (in the absence of the officiating minister) by virtue of the licence; that, as had been pre-arranged, Miss Dormer left Swinnerton early in the morning of the 23rd December, in Mr. Williams' carriage, accompanied by a female servant, proceeded to Ellesmere, where she was joined by Mr. Williams, and thence to Halston, where the marriage was solemnized by the Rev. Mr. Fish.

Dr. Lushington gave the judgment of the Court at some length. At the conclusion he observed, in the case of Tongue v. Tongue, all their lordships agreed that there must be evidence to establish a wilful disobedience of the law in both parties; but the facts in this libel do not show such a guilty knowledge, without proof of which I could not declare this marriage null and void. And I must not lose sight of this, that though, in the present case, the lady avails herself of the law for her own protection, that law, if not administered with caution, might be wrested against her and against the innocent offspring of the marriage. I cannot admit the libel.

ARCHES' COURT.

NOVEMBER 19.

THE OFFICE OF THE JUDGE PROMOTED BY THE
REV. MR. BREEKS v. WOOLFREY.
(Before Sir Herbert Jenner.)

THIS is a suit in which the office of the Judge has been promoted by the Rev. J. Brecks, vicar of the parish of Carisbrook, in the Isle of Wight, against Mrs. Mary Woolfrey, "for her soul's health, and for the reformation of her manners and excesses," and especially for having erected, or caused to be erected, without lawful authority first had and obtained, a tombstone in the church of the said parish, to the memory of her husband; and for having had placed an inscription upon the same, which is contrary to the canons, discipline, &c., of the Church of England. The circumstances of this case have already attracted much attention in the public mind, and the court was much more numerously attended than is usually the case. The inscription upon the tombstone articulated against is to the following effect:—

"Pray for the soul of Joseph Woolfrey."

"It is a good and a wholesome thought to pray for the dead."—Second Maccabees, ch. xii. 46. (Douay version.)

After the case had been argued at great length on both sides,

Sir Herbert Jenner said, the Court would take time to consider its decision, as the case was a novel one. And he trusted that the parties on both sides would furnish him with the works from which they had read extracts; so that he might convince himself that the whole sense and meaning of the authors they had quoted had been fairly copied. He would give notice of delivering his judgment.

Judgment postponed.

NOVEMBER 27.

THE OFFICE OF THE JUDGE PROMOTED BY LAW AGAINST GAYFERE.

THIS was a question as to the admissibility of the articles in a suit promoted by the Venerable Henry Law, Archdeacon of Wells, as rector of the parish of St. Peter and St. Paul, Bath, with the vicarage of Lyncomb and Widcomb annexed, against the Rev. Thomas Gayfere, for obstructing the curate, duly appointed and licensed, of the chapel of St. Mark, in the parish of Lyncomb and Widcomb, built under the Church Building Act, as chapels of ease to the parish of St. Peter and St. Paul, Bath, in the exercise of his functions. The proceeding, though necessarily in the criminal form, was merely intended to raise the question, for the Court's decision, as to the civil right of the incumbent of the parish to appoint a curate to the chapel in substitution of Mr. Gayfere. The facts of the case were shortly these:—In March, 1836, Mr. Gayfere was appointed curate of the chapel by the late incumbent of the parish, the Rev. George Crooke, and licensed by the diocesan. His stipend was paid out of the pew rents. On the death of the incumbent, and the appointment of Archdeacon Law, in May last, he nominated the Rev. Gabriel Valpy as curate of the chapel of St. Mark. This gentleman was licensed by the Bishop of Bath and Wells on the 30th of June, and the next day, being Sunday, he appeared at the chapel to perform divine service; but his right to officiate was denied by Mr. Gayfere, and it was agreed to take the opinion of this Court as to the legal question, which included two points—first, whether, under the Church Building Acts, the licence was revocable at pleasure by the new incumbent; and secondly, whether, supposing there was a right of revocation, it should not be exercised in a more formal manner than by the mere nomination and licensing of another person.

After the subject had been a good deal discussed by Dr. Phillimore and Dr. Addams, against the revocation; and the Queen's Advocate and Dr. Haggard contra.

Sir H. Jenner intimated that the question had not been raised in a proper shape to enable the Court judicially to decide the question. The facts laid in the articles, which went merely to show that Mr. Valpy came to the chapel and offered to officiate, but that Mr. Gayfere did officiate, did not amount to such an obstruction as would justify the Court in considering it an offence liable to be visited by ecclesiastical censure and costs. It was proper that anything like brawling should be prevented, but if an actual obstruction was not admitted (as he now understood there was no intention to do on the part of the defendant), the articles should have pleaded that Mr. Valpy was prevented from officiating. He should therefore let the case stand over till the first session of next term, in order that the parties might put the case into a better shape for deciding the point. His impression was, that the incumbent had a right to revoke the licence, and appoint another curate.

QUEEN'S BENCH, Nov. 24.

THE QUEEN v. THE REV. M.A. GATHERCOLE.

In this case a criminal information had been granted against the defendant for a libel on the inmates of the Scorton and Darlington nunneries, contained in a publication called the Churchman. He was afterwards tried at the assizes for Yorkshire and found guilty.

The defendant was to-day brought up for judgment.

The sentence of the Court was that he should be imprisoned in the custody of the marshal of the Marshalsea for the space of three calendar months.

THE QUEEN v. THE SELECT VESTRY OF ST. MARGARET'S, LEICESTER.

A rule had been granted some time since for a mandamus, to command the select vestry of St. Margaret's, Leicester, to call a meeting and impose a rate for the repair of the church. There was a local act of Parliament, by which the vestry had power to make a rate for the repair of the church. It appeared that a vestry meeting had been called for this purpose, but, as the churchwardens refused to give an estimate of the expenses, the vestry adjourned the meeting. The rule was therefore moved for on the ground that this adjournment was equal to a refusal on the part of the vestry, and, therefore, that this Court had jurisdiction to compel them to comply with the provisions of the act of Parliament.

Sir W. Follett and Mr. Waddington now showed cause against the rule, contending that the Court could not direct the vestry to make a rate, though it might have power to compel them to meet and assemble together for that purpose, and cited "The King v. St. Margaret's, Westminster," in support of this proposition.

Mr. Balguy, in support of the rule, insisted that the adjournment was, in fact, a refusal; that the notice was sufficient in law; that the act called upon the vestry to make a rate, and therefore that the collusive adjournment was such a violation of the very terms of the act as authorized the Court to interfere by mandamus.

The Court expressed an opinion that the rule must be made absolute. In ordinary cases it was quite true that this Court could only order a vestry to assemble for the purpose of making a rate, but in the present case the act not only authorized, but commanded the vestry to make the rate; a refusal to obey the provisions of the act alone gave the Court jurisdiction. It was clear that in this instance the adjournment had been collusively made, and was in substance a refusal. This Court then possessed the power to enforce obedience to the act, and the circumstances of this case were sufficient to justify the exercise of that power.

Rule absolute.

SCOTTISH EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

A GENERAL SYNOD of the Scottish Episcopal Church was held in St. Paul's Chapel Edinburgh, on Wednesday, the 29th of August, 1838, and continued by adjournment till Thursday, the 6th of September. The Synod consisted of two chambers—the first, of the bishops only; the second, of the deans and a representative of the clergy elected by each diocese. The following are the names of the members:—

FIRST CHAMBER.

Right Rev. James Walker, D.D., Bishop of Edinburgh and Primus.
 Right Rev. Patrick Torry, D.D., Bishop of Dunkeld, &c.
 Right Rev. William Skinner, D.D., Bishop of Aberdeen.
 Right Rev. David Low, LL.D., Bp. of Ross and Argyle, &c.
 Right Rev. Michael Russell, LL.D., Bishop of Glasgow.
 Right Rev. David Moir, A.M., Assistant Bishop of Brechin.

The Very Rev. H. Horsley, A.M., Dean of Brechin and Prolocutor.
 The Very Rev. John Torry, A.M., Dean of Dunkeld, &c.
 The Rev. George G. Milne, A.M., Delegate of ditto.
 The Rev. William Henderson, A.M., Delegate of Brechin.
 The Very Rev. John Cumming, Dean of Aberdeen.
 The Rev. Patrick Cheyne, A.M., Delegate of ditto.
 The Rev. C. Fyvie, A.M., Delegate of Ross, Argyle, and Moray.
 The Very Rev. C. H. Terrot, A.M., Dean of Edinburgh.
 The Rev. E. B. Ramsay, A.M., Delegate of ditto.
 The Very Rev. William Routledge, Dean of Glasgow.
 The Rev. W. Wilson, A.M., Delegate of ditto.
 The Rev. J. W. Ferguson, A.M., Clerk.

Morning prayer was read by the Rev. J. Sinclair, A.M., and an address delivered by the Right Rev. the Primus; all the clergy present then joined in the holy communion; after which the Primus constituted the Synod, saying, "In the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, Amen. By the authority and in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, the divine Head of the Catholic church" of which we form a part, I hereby constitute this assembly, and declare it to be, a General Synod of this church, &c., and therefore competent to consider, deliberate upon, and to determine, all questions connected with the discipline and government of the church, which may be regularly and canonically submitted to our judgment in our legislative and judicial capacities. The Synod having been summoned by the Episcopal College in Oct., 1837, in the course of the past year the clergy of each diocese were assembled by their respective bishops, and agreed upon various alterations in the canons of the church, which were submitted to both chambers of the General Synod.

Various amendments were made in the existing canons, and several new canons enacted, of which we shall only specify the most important.

In the case of a bishop feeling himself incompetent for his duties from age, he may now have a coadjutor.

Candidates for orders are required to have gone through a regular course of education in some university or college; to submit to an examination on any part of the whole of the Greek Testament; at the bidding of their examiners to compose a discourse in Latin, and another in English; and also to attend the lectures of the episcopal professor of theology, and of the professor of ecclesiastical history, in Edinburgh.

The canonical age for ordination has been made the same as in England, and in the case both of deacons and priests a bond fide title is required.

Before being instituted to a pastoral charge, every clergyman is required to produce his letters of orders, and (if not ordained in Scotland) also a certificate that he has gone through a regular course of education in some university or college.

The clergy are recommended to study the scriptures in the original languages, and also the writings of the fathers of the apostolic and of the two succeeding ages.

The Scottish Episcopal Church recognises, as in full communion with herself, the United Church of England and Ireland, the Colonial Branches of the same, and the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America.

Every clergyman is required to instruct the young members of his congregation in the catechism of the Book of Common Prayer, and is prohibited from using any other catechism, unless approved of by the bishop of the diocese.

Every clergyman is required to keep a register of baptisms, marriages, and burials, and of his catechumens and communicants.

It is sometimes said, that there is some difference between the service of the Church of England and that of the Scottish Episcopal Church. The following canon, which is given at length, will doubtless set this question at rest:—

Canon xxviii.—On the Uniformity to be observed in Public Worship.—As in all the ordinary parts of divine service, it is necessary to fix by authority the precise form, from which no bishop, presbyter, or deacon, shall be at liberty to depart by his own alterations or insertions, lest such liberty should produce consequences destructive of "decency and order," it is hereby enacted, that in the performance of morning and evening service, the words and rubrical directions of the English liturgy, shall be strictly adhered to: and it is further decreed, that if any clergyman shall officiate or preach in any place publicly without using the liturgy at all, he shall for the first offence be admonished by his bishop; and if he persevere in this uncanonical practice, shall be suspended until, after due contrition, he be restored to the exercise of his clerical functions. In publicly reading prayers and administering the sacraments, the surplice shall be used as the proper sacerdotal vestment.

Several very important canons were framed, appointing diocesan, general, and episcopal synods; and also regarding a form of process in the case of any accusation being made against a bishop, presbyter, or deacon. Like her sister Church in America, the Scotch Episcopal Church has prohibited the admission of counsel into her judicial meetings.

In a Church circumstanced like the Episcopal Church in Scotland, congregations must frequently be found where there is no little difficulty in maintaining regular ministrations; to meet this, and in order to promote the Christian spirit of "every man looking, not on his own things, but also on the things of others," the following canon was enacted, which, it is expected, will produce many important benefits to the church:—

Canon xl. For establishing and maintaining a Society in aid of the Church. Whereas in the primitive Church, and by apostolic order, collections were made for the poorer brethren and for the propagation of the Gospel, it is hereby decreed that a similar practice shall be observed in the Scottish Episcopal Church. Nor ought the poverty of the Church, nor of any portion of it, be pleaded as an objection, seeing that the Divine commendation is given equally to those who from their poverty give a little with cheerfulness, and to those who give largely of their abundance. For this purpose, a society, called "The Scottish Episcopal Church Society," shall be formed, the objects of which shall be—1st, to provide a fund for aged or infirm Clergymen, or salaries for their assistants, and general aid for congregations struggling with pecuniary difficulties; 2ndly, to assist candidates for the ministry in completing their theological studies; 3rdly, to provide episcopal schoolmasters, books, and tracts for the poor; 4thly, to assist in the formation or enlargement of diocesan libraries. To promote these important purposes, a certain day shall be fixed upon, annually, by every diocesan synod, when a collection shall be made in every chapel throughout the diocese, and the nature and object of the Society, in reference to the existing wants of the Church, shall be explained to the people.

Agreeably to the law of the Church, no canon was enacted until it had met with the approbation of a majority of both chambers, between which the utmost harmony prevailed, as also among their various members; while every freedom was given to discussion, and to the expression of that variety of opinions which is essential to the well-being of a deliberative assembly.

The canons having been read over in the presence of both chambers, on Thursday, the 6th of September, were approved of, authenticated, and ordered to be printed; after which the Primus dissolved the synod in the same solemn manner in which it had been constituted, and released the members from their attendance.

The Rev. Dr. Schroeder, an episcopal clergyman from the United States, was present at the opening of the synod; and from the intimate connexion subsisting between the two Churches, declared that he felt himself at home.—British Magazine.

FEES FOR BURYING PAUPERS.

To the Editor of the Times.

Sir,—The Times of this day contains a paragraph copied from the Bristol Mirror, in which a statement is made relative to a correspondence between the Poor Law Commissioners and the guardians of the poor of the Clifton Union, with reference to the subject of the payment of burial fees in a case therein stated.

As the statement is incorrect, and likely to mislead the public, I am directed to transmit a copy of an opinion of Dr. Lushington, the effect of which opinion it was the object of the letter of the commissioners to convey to the board of guardians.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

GEORGE COODE, Assistant Secretary.

Poor Law Commission Office,
 Somerset House, Dec. 6, 1838.

COPY OF OPINION.

I am of opinion, that where a pauper not belonging to Brixworth dies in the union workhouse situate in Brixworth, no fee can be enforced for his interment in Brixworth churchyard, and for this reason—no clergyman can (the canon being express) delay or refuse burial on account of the non-payment of a fee, and the corpse being buried, the clergyman cannot maintain an action against the overseer. No clergyman can refuse burial to the corpse of a person dying in the parish; it is of common right.

METROPOLIS.

Metropolis Church Extension.—Much activity prevails among the friends of the Established Church, and all classes desirous of extending the means of providing church accommodation for the poor in populous districts, in the erection of new churches and chapels of ease. Three new churches have been recently consecrated in the large parish of Stepney, which now contains five spacious churches, with 3000 free sittings for the poor. Until within the last ten years this large portion of the metropolis only contained one church, the ancient edifice, with which so many interesting recollections are associated. A large church, on the estate of Sir Charles Morgan, in Tredegar-square, Stepney, has just been finished. Although much has been done in Stepney, more has been done in Rotherhithe, on the opposite shore, which contains a population of 13,000 inhabitants. In the year 1836 there was only one church in the parish, with 1300 sittings, when the present rector, the Rev. Mr. Blick, proposed that three new churches should be erected, assigning a district to each containing a population of 3000, leaving 4000 to the mother church. One church, Trinity, in the lower part of Rotherhithe, near the Commercial Dock, was consecrated Nov. 6; another in Paradise-street, built and endowed by Mrs. Hyndman's trustees, from the munificent bequest of that worthy lady, is nearly finished; and the first stone of a third will be shortly laid in the Deptford-road, opposite the workhouse. In order to provide for the wants of the parishioners in education, four large school-rooms, in addition to two for boys and two for girls previously existing, were built and paid for last year; and a fifth school for infants, on a large scale, with apartments over for two mistresses, has also been built adjoining the church in the lower town. These schools are superintended by the rector, curate, and appointed ministers of the new churches. A sum of 6000*l.* has been awarded by the Parliamentary Commissioners and the Committee of the Metropolis Churches' Fund towards the building of two of the Rotherhithe churches, the whole expense of which will not be less than 11,000*l.* Committees are to be formed in each of the parishes of St. George's in the East and St. George's, Southwark, to receive subscriptions for the building of additional churches; each to contain 500 free sittings and schools in connexion therewith. Grants from the Metropolis Church Building Fund and from Her Majesty's Commissioners for building and enlarging Churches and Chapels will be made in furtherance of the plan. A new church, St. Paul's, capable of holding 1100 persons, was consecrated by the Bishop of London, in Lisson-grove, Nov. 17. Among the new churches building in the metropolis are one in the Tenter-ground, Whitechapel, and another in Berwick-street, Soho. Grants have been made from the funds of the Metropolitan Church Building Fund towards the erection of these churches. One of the largest and handsomest of the new ecclesiastical buildings in London is being erected on a plot of ground given by Mr. Potts, the vinegar-merchant, at the back of Park-street, Southwark. The whole expense will be defrayed by Mrs. Hyndman's trustees.

The offices of First Fruits and Tenthings (consolidated by Act of Parliament with the office of Queen Anne's Bounty) will, as appears by an advertisement in this Number, to which we refer our readers, be removed to the Bounty Office in Dean's Yard, Westminster, on the 24th day of the present month of December; and afterwards the yearly tenths are to be paid there at the commencement of the next, and of every succeeding year, and the first fruits are from the same day also to be paid there.

A Circular from the Society for Promoting the due observance of the Lord's Day has been submitted to the Lord Bishop of London, and sent to the clergy of the diocese, with his lordship's sanction. It arrived too late for insertion, but we give the following extracts:—

"Your attention is seriously requested to the statement, which the Committee of the Lord's Day Society are anxious to lay before you, in reference to a proposal which they lament to learn has been recently made to carry on the business of the London Post Office on the Lord's Day, and which, though not yet a regulation of the Post Office, there is too much reason to apprehend will become so, unless the strongest remonstrances be made against its adoption.

"In the session of 1838, a Select Committee of the House of Commons was appointed to examine into the affairs of the Post Office, and to report upon the same. There are portions of the evidence taken before this Committee which clearly discover the painful fact that the opening of the Post Office on the Lord's Day in London has been deliberately contemplated. Extracts from the evidence are subjoined, which leave no doubt upon the point.

"The Committee of the Lord's Day Society do not believe that the citizens of London desire the change proposed; and they cherish the hope that the government will not wish to make that change, if the feeling of the community be but expressed against it. They have ventured, therefore, to address the Clergy of London on the subject, assured that it will receive at their hands immediate attention, and that through them the attention of society at large will be best directed to it. It is important, however, that no time should be lost. There is reason to fear that arrangements are already in progress, which, if not speedily arrested, may soon render all attempts to avert the threatened evil fruitless.

"These considerations have induced the Committee to endeavour to awaken the attention of the public bodies connected with the commerce of London to the subject, and they have hitherto met with considerable encouragement. But their hope of arresting the progress of the evil mainly depends, under God, upon the expression of public feeling in deprecation of the measure. They have therefore prepared a memorial to the Right Honourable the Lords Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, to which, if it meet your approbation, they trust that you will obtain as many signatures as possible. They have also thought it desirable to put you in possession of the above information.

"The Committee are persuaded that the Clergy of London will, in the exercise of their own discretion, and with fervent prayer to the Lord of the Sabbath for His blessing, make every effort in their power to avert the calamitous consequences which the contemplated changes, and those which will necessarily follow, in the London Post Office, in common with every other public violation of the Lord's Day, must inflict on the vast population committed to their charge."

PROVINCIAL.

The Lord Bishop of Lincoln having decided to revise the office of Rural Dean in the southern part of his diocese, has appointed the undermentioned Clergymen to that office:—The Rev. John Drake, rector of Amersham; the Rev. T. Carter, vicar of Burnham; the Rev. William M. Bradford, rector of Heddon; the Rev. William M. K. Bradford, rector of Hambleton.

On Saturday, the 20th of October, the new chapel lately erected at East Doniland, in the county of Essex, was consecrated by the Bishop of London, in the presence of a large assemblage of the neighbouring clergy and gentry. The service was read by the Rev. John Hallward, rector of East Thorp, and the Bishop delivered a most impressive Sermon, after which a liberal collection was made. His Lordship then proceeded to consecrate the ground around the chapel as a burial-ground, which concluded the ceremony. It is intended to apply to the Church Commissioners under the provisions of the 1st and 2nd of Victoria, cap. 107, to constitute this chapel the parish church of East Doniland, instead of the ancient parish church, which is situated at a very inconvenient distance from the population.

The Bishop of Ripon has recently consecrated three new churches in the archdeaconry of Craven—Lothersdale, Stoneyhurst Green, and Settle. Lothersdale Church, consecrated on Monday, the 22nd of October, is the first church which has been built and consecrated in Craven for the last three hundred years. We cannot omit to notice the munificent gift of 1000*l.* from the Rev. Walter Levitt, the vicar of Carlton, towards the endowment of the church. This is truly a good beginning, after a rest of three hundred years, and an example which we trust will be followed by many in the beautiful and romantic district of Craven, where nothing seems wanting to complete the delightful scenery with which it abounds but the more frequent occurrence of the tower or spire of a church. The new church at Stoneyhurst, or Hurst Green, has been built under peculiarly interesting circumstances; it is erected within the immediate vicinity of the Jesuit College at Stoneyhurst; the situation is romantic in the extreme, and viewing the beautiful little church in its proximity to the college, one cannot but pray the Great Disposer of all events that he would graciously aid his servant, the minister of this truly interesting church, in his labours amongst a people whose locality is so peculiarly circumstanced. The peculiar feature in the consecration of the new church at Settle is, that amongst the largest contributors towards the erection of the new church are several members of the society of friends.—Leeds Intelligencer.

A public meeting was held at Chelmsford, Oct. 23, for the purpose of forming an Essex Association, in aid of the Incorporated Society for building and enlarging Churches and Chapels. It was originally suggested by the Lord Bishop of the diocese. The subscription is already a munificent one, amounting to nearly 2000*l.*—Essex Standard.

The Bishop of Winchester consecrated the new chapel at Burghcler (built by the Rev. Mr. Barter, the rector) on the 24th of October; and on the following day held a confirmation in the said chapel.—Hampshire Telegraph.

On the 1st of November, in the township of Clay-ton-le-Moors, was laid the foundation stone of a new church, by the Rev. W. Wood, incumbent of Altham. The site was the gift of John Fort, Esq., of Read Hall, M.P. for the borough of Clitheroe, who has also granted a site for a parsonage-house and a national school. The estimated expense of erection is 1700*l.*; endowment, 2000*l.*; total, 3700*l.*; of which sum, 500*l.* were subscribed by John Fort, Esq.; 1000*l.* towards the building fund, and 1000*l.* towards the endowment, were the munificent donations of his sister, Ann Fort; 700*l.* were granted by the Diocesan Society, and the remainder raised by subscription, aided by the trustees of the late H. Halstead, Esq.

On the 1st of November, the new church at Trowbridge was consecrated by the Lord Bishop of Salisbury.

The chapel of Christ Church, in the parish of Egham, calculated to hold from 400 to 450 persons, and erected at a cost little exceeding 2000*l.*, was consecrated by the Bishop of Winchester, Nov. 3. The patronage is vested in trustees, one of whom, Miss Irvine, gave the munificent donation of 2000*l.* as an endowment.—Standard.

A chapel of ease at Wear was consecrated on the 3rd of November, by the Bishop of Exeter; and a new chapel of ease, capable of holding 300 persons, has been opened for divine service at Hartland.—Exeter Gazette.

Lord Braybrooke has given the sum of 100*l.* towards building and endowing a church at Knowle Hill, Berks.—Times.

Mr. Gladstone, a Liverpool merchant, has contributed the munificent sum of 4000*l.* towards the erection of a church, besides endowing it with a perpetual annuity of fifty pounds towards the maintenance of a minister.—Liverpool Standard.

Earl Fitzwilliam has given the munificent sum of 1000*l.* towards affording additional church accommodation at Malton.

Lord Ward has subscribed 200*l.* to the Worcestershire Diocesan Church Building Society, and 300*l.* to that of Lichfield. His Lordship will also erect parsonage houses at Netherton and at Cosely, at his own expense.—Worcester Journal.

On the 7th of November, the new church of St. George's, Mount Pleasant, Leeds, was consecrated by the Bishop of Ripon, in the presence of some of the most influential and opulent persons of the town and its vicinity.

Society for the Relief of Poor Pious Clergymen.—The claims of this excellent institution are, we have great reason to fear, not sufficiently known to the members of our Church. In the course of forty-seven years, during which the Society has existed, it has distributed to distressed clergymen 2324 grants of various sums of money, according to the nature of the respective applications and the exigency of each case; the whole sum distributed by such grants being 68,239*l.* The income of the last year amounted to 3745*l.* 18*s.* 7*d.*; and many of the cases of clerical distress relieved by means of the Society were of the most painful character.—Morning Herald.

Government are preparing a bill to alter the collection of ministers' money in cities, the receipt of which will be transferred to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for several years, and finally it will be redeemed.—Record.

At a public meeting at the Town-hall, Birmingham, Nov. 27, the Bishop of Worcester in the chair, a society was formed, called "the Birmingham Church Building Society," to supply the appalling deficiency of Church accommodation in that town, the population of which is nearly 180,000, while the church accommodation does not exceed 24,000 sittings in all. The Society proposes to provide, within five years, ten additional churches; but limits its contribution, in each case, to 3000*l.*, and an endowment of 1000*l.* The patronage to be vested in five trustees, viz.; the Bishop of the diocese, the Rector of the parish, and three others to be chosen by a majority of the subscribers in value. The subscriptions already amount to more than 10,000*l.*

On Wednesday, Nov. 28, the new church of St. George's, Edgbaston, was consecrated by the Bishop of Worcester. The ground on which it stands is the liberal gift of Lord Calthorpe, who has endowed the church, and contributed the greater portion of the funds (between 5000*l.* and 6000*l.*) required for its erection.—Worcester Guardian.

The Countess of Bridgewater has given 500*l.* towards the fund for erecting additional churches and parsonage-houses in the diocese of Lichfield.—Lichfield Journal.

Re-opening of St. Peter's Church, Stockport.—This place of worship, which has been closed for the last two months, for the purpose of erecting two galleries in it, was re-opened on Sunday last, when two Sermons were preached in aid of the fund for meeting the expenses of the improvement—the one in the morning by our worthy rector, the Rev. C. K. Prescott, and that in the evening by the Rev. John Burnet, of St. George's Church, Macclesfield. The collections amounted to the sum of 64*l.*, which we consider extremely handsome, when the previous exertions of the congregation assembling at St. Peter's is taken into consideration. The whole expense of the improvement is about 600*l.*, of which 500*l.* had been raised by voluntary subscription, chiefly amongst the pew holders, before the work was commenced.—Stockport Paper.

On Thursday, the 29th ult., a most important meeting was held in the large Assembly Rooms in Cheltenham, to form an Association for the purpose of maintaining and upholding the Established Church in these realms, in connexion with her National Schools, &c. Very efficient speeches were delivered by the incumbent of Cheltenham, and several of the parochial clergy, and all the important resolutions were passed not only unanimously, but with the strongest expressions of lively interest, and full approbation. An Association was immediately formed, the importance and beneficial effects of which will, we doubt not, be heard and felt far beyond the boundaries of that great and influential place from which they emanated.

A church-rate contest has just been terminated at St. Neot's by a poll, the result of which was a majority of 140 in favour of making a sixpenny rate; the numbers being for it 231, against it 61.

It is gratifying to the friends of the Establishment to observe that churches erected both by public charities and private munificence are multiplying throughout the land to answer the wants of the growing population. On Sunday last a new church, erected by Mr. James Brook, of Thornton Lodge, near Huddersfield, for the accommodation of the inhabitants of Meltham Mills, in the employ of Messrs. Jonas Brook and Brothers, was opened by license from the bishop of the diocese. The church is dedicated to St. James, and is built after a plan recommended by the Bishop of Sodor and Man. It will seat about 250 persons, and adjoining it is a school, which by means of sliding shutters may be thrown open and form part of the church. The school-room is calculated to hold about 600 children. At the other end of the school there are two dwelling-houses erected to correspond externally with the church, one for the clergyman and the other for the schoolmaster. The whole of the edifice, we are told, is erected at an expense of no less than 4000*l.* A truly Christian example is here set for the opulent manufacturers in the country to provide for the spiritual wants of those who are in their daily employ.—Leeds Intelligencer.

New Marriage Act.—Notwithstanding the outcry made by certain parties against making those adverse to the doctrines of the Church have their marriages solemnized there, there have been but three marriages before the registrar in this district.—Lincoln Chronicle.

Wesleyan Methodist Meetings in Manchester.—Unprecedented Contributions.—The commencement of a general movement in this large and zealous body has been made in this town during the present week, with a view to commemorate the centenary of Methodism.—We believe that the establishment of what is termed "itinerancy," in the preaching of the Society, was made in 1739; and that it is intended at the conference, next year (July, 1839), to celebrate the centenary by the founding of several institutions, and the total liquidation of certain debts on various chapels, connected with the Society. The Watchman of last week contained, in a supplement, a full account of the proceedings at the Manchester meeting, with a report of the speeches, and a list of the donations. The amount subscribed at the close of the meeting was near 30,000*l.* Contributions, however, continued to flow in for more than a week after that time, at the rate, we believe, of 1000*l.* per day. And when the first list was made out for publication, the whole amounted to near 45,000*l.* Since that time the amount has been regularly increasing, and on Tuesday evening last, had reached the sum of 47,000*l.* An additional list of the donors will, we suppose, be printed in the Watchman this week, and regularly continued. As the one already published shows the amount contributed by each family, we have selected some of the largest, and lay them before our readers as instances of Christian liberality, such as have never before come under our notice, and can be the effect only of a deeply-rooted attachment to the principles of Wesleyan Methodism, on the part of the families of the Connexion.

Bequest of the Late Col. Ollney.—It may not be uninteresting to our readers to republish the amounts that appeared in our columns in February, 1836; the more especially as the widow of the colonel died on the 16th inst., and as no division was to take place until her decease.

To the clergymen and churchwardens of Cheltenham, 8,000*l.*, to found almshouses at Cheltenham, for ten poor men and eight poor women, with a weekly allowance to each.

All these sums are to be placed out at interest, and the proceeds to be applied at Christmas, partly in the purchase of coals and blankets for the deserving poor of the several towns named.—Cheltenham Chronicle.

New College at Bath.—A grand project, of a national character, is announced, viz., the erection, in the immediate neighbourhood of Bath, of a magnificent college, auxiliary to the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge. The prospectus is published, and does not disguise the fact that the institution is projected with the view to meet and counteract the exertions of the Roman Catholics in this kingdom, who, in England alone, have nine colleges, of which three are in the county of Somerset. The site, we believe, is not exactly determined upon, but that once done, operations will instantly commence, and it is supposed that the whole will be completed in less than two years.

Church Pastoral Aid Society.—Yesterday (Nov. 16) a public meeting was held in Bath, (the Ven. Archdeacon Law, rector of Bath, in the chair,) in the Upper Rooms, for the purpose of forming an auxiliary society, under the above name, in accordance with the plans already adopted in other large places, by which the population might be benefited in districts where the supply of religious instruction on the principles of the Church of England was inadequate to the wants and demands of a large portion of the inhabitants. The meeting was numerously and very respectably attended.—Bath Paper.

IRELAND.

It is the intention of Government to extend to Ireland the provisions of the Clergy Residence Act, passed last session for England, and to assimilate the powers, jurisdiction, and emoluments of archdeacons in both countries.—Limerick Chronicle.

COLONIAL.

Canada.—A copy of the legal opinion of the law officers of the Crown in England, on the endowment of the fifty-seven rectories by Sir John Colborne, appears in the Toronto papers. It has been decided, that "the erection and endowments of fifty-seven rectories by Sir John Colborne are valid and lawful acts;" and, "that the rectors of the parishes so erected and endowed have the same ecclesiastical authority within their respective limits as are vested in the rector of a parish in England." Quebec Herald, Aug. 31.

A vessel which sailed from Liverpool lately takes out a Roman Catholic titular bishop and seven of his clergy, who are appointed to disseminate the doctrines of their church in Demerara. From such a visitation the colony has hitherto escaped. It is at length selected, it would seem, as an arena in which the emissaries of Romanism have determined to extend and perpetuate the struggle for proselytism, which, "by compassing sea and land," they have of late vigorously pursued. The reverend gentlemen commissioned to achieve this object in Demerara are not chosen from among the extensively read and classically polished priesthood educated on the Continent; they are rough, unhehewn, unsophisticated, and true specimens of the respectable licentiates of Maynooth. — Salisbury Herald.

The consecration of the Protestant Church at Gibraltar took place on the 17th of October, during the late visit of Her Majesty, the Queen Dowager, to the Garrison, in her way to Naples and Malta. Her Majesty having graciously consented to be present at the ceremony, every preparation was made by His Excellency Sir Alexander Woodford for the proper accommodation of the Queen and the party of distinguished visitors forming her Majesty's suite. The Church had been closed for some months to receive both substantial repairs and internal decoration; and the whole was completed but a few hours before the time fixed for the solemnity. At 11 o'clock the building was filled by the civil and military congregation, and a considerable number of strangers of all ranks and religious denominations.

After the initiatory part of the ceremony, consisting of the presentation, by the principal functionaries and inhabitants, of the usual Petition to consecrate addressed to the Rev. Dr. Burrow, the Civil Chaplain, who was authorized to perform the office by commission from His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury, the clergy returned to the great west door in their surplices, in readiness to begin the service on the Queen's arrival. At half-past 10 Her Majesty, attended by His Excellency the Governor and his staff, entered the Church, and proceeded up the nave, while the national anthem was performed by the band of the 82d regiment.

As soon as Her Majesty was seated, the service commenced according to the appointed forms, and the Church was dedicated in the name of the Holy Trinity. The consecrator was assisted at the altar by the Rev. J. R. Wood, Her Majesty's Private Chaplain; and the service for the day was read by the Rev. J. Buchanan, the Military Chaplain of the Garrison. The Rev. J. Campbell, Chaplain of the Hastings, and the Rev. L. Lucena, Minister of the Spanish Protestant Congregation, also took part in the ceremony. After the sermon, which was preached by the consecrator, and the concluding prayers, Her Majesty left the Church by the same door at which she had entered it, and had an opportunity of observing the font and chandelier, recently put up, and contributing greatly to the general effect and appropriate character of the building. The font, of Maltese stone and workmanship, and of a model to correspond with the Moorish style of architecture in which the Church is built, had been a present from the Governor; and the chandelier, of large dimensions and handsome design, had been provided at the joint expense of the Government and the Civilians of the congregation. It was understood that the Queen Dowager expressed herself much gratified by all that she had seen and heard on this interesting occasion.

FOREIGN.

A Church has lately been erected at Hamburg by the voluntary contributions of the British residents, aided by a grant from this Government, and by another from the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge. The site was allotted by the senate at Hamburg, and is situate near the harbour. The church being completed, the consecration took place on Sunday, the 11th of November, in the presence of a numerous congregation, including Her Majesty's consul and vice-consul, and other public authorities. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Richard Baker, the resident chaplain, under the authority of a special commission from the Lord Bishop of London.

Hanover, Nov. 11.—Information having been given to the Department for Ecclesiastical Affairs that the Roman Catholic chaplain had repeatedly refused to administer the sacrament to a Roman Catholic who is married to a Protestant, because he sends his children to a Protestant school, and accounts are received from other parts of the kingdom of similar intrigues and arbitrary acts of the Romish clergy, it is expected that rigorous measures will be adopted against the well-known circular of the suffragan Bishop of Osnaburgh, and in general against all such assumptions of authority by the Romish clergy.

It appears from the last census made in Prussia, that the entire population amounted to 14,098,125 persons. Out of this number there were 2,278,601 children frequenting the public schools. It results from this calculation that almost all the children in Prussia receive the benefit of a regular education.

The Archbishop of Cologne.—The Journal des Flandres gives the following as the text of the letter lately addressed by the Archbishop of Cologne to the King of Prussia:—"Sire, for nearly twelve months I have been confined here, in the fortress of Minden, whereby I am legally prevented from administering my diocese, as in duty bound. My conscience would be overburdened if I remained any longer silent. I ask no favour; I demand only justice. Your Majesty is called the 'Just'; I hope, therefore, my appeal will be taken into consideration, and the more readily, as I have been a prisoner for ten months, without knowing why I am guarded as a criminal, and without being allowed to appear before my judges. Should your Majesty refuse to do me justice I shall be obliged to lay my complaint before the Germanic Diet, which I am convinced holds the sacred right of preventing all oppression and violation of the laws within the territories of the Germanic Confederation. As far as regards my own person, I am resigned, for the love of Christ, to sustain a much longer captivity; but as I know that during my absence from the diocese of Cologne events are taking place to the great prejudice of our holy religion, I have felt it my sacred duty to lay this my demand before your Majesty, in order that I may be brought before my judges."

ADVERTISEMENTS.

OXFORD MEMORIAL OF CRANMER,

RIDLEY, and LATYMER.—Magdalen Hall, Nov. 17, 1838.—At the present period, when there seems to be a general disposition to commemorate, by national monuments, the great achievements of our illustrious countrymen, it has occurred to several persons that it would be desirable to erect in Oxford some permanent memorial of the three revered prelates who had so large a share in restoring our own branch of the Catholic Church to primitive orthodoxy, and who, for the maintenance of the Scriptural truths which they embodied in its articles and other formularies, suffered death in this city. A meeting, therefore, of the gentlemen of the University and city who were favourable to the proposed object was summoned, and it was unanimously agreed to recommend it to the support of the public. The proposal, as might be supposed, was not a new one, but had not hitherto been carried into effect, principally because a difference of opinion had arisen with respect to the site of the intended memorial. It was resolved at the meeting, that the best mode of testifying a grateful admiration of these pious martyrs would be the erection of a monumental structure, in which architecture and sculpture should combine, to record the fact of their preferring the endurance of the most cruel death to a sacrifice of principle. Even as a work of art, a memorial of such men ought to be worthy both of them and of the city in which it is proposed to place it, and therefore, when considered only in this subordinate point of view, it is to be wished that a sum should be raised sufficient to secure the employment of the most eminent architect and sculptor. This, however, ought to be regarded as secondary to the moral benefit which may reasonably be expected to result from it, and that benefit will be proportioned to the number of those who are enabled to take part in the erection of this tribute of respect and veneration to self-denying Christian faith and constancy.

The meeting, therefore, instead of inviting only local subscriptions, are anxious that none should be excluded who revere the memory of these devoted servants of God who loved the cause for which they were content to die, and are mindful of the blessings of that Protestant reformed religion which, by the instrumentality of their lives and deaths, was, at length, under God's good providence, established by law. A committee of management will be nominated to determine the character and style of the monument, and to take the necessary measures for its erection; but whatever that may be, it will require an explanatory inscription, and it is deemed most satisfactory that it should accompany the request for donations, as otherwise some persons might be unwilling to subscribe, lest they should be considered responsible for the opinions which might be conveyed in one subsequently written, and which they might not approve. It is hoped that the one subjoined will obtain the concurrence of all who feel a sufficient regard for the memory of Cranmer, Ridley, and Latymer, to subscribe to this Memorial.

To the Glory of God,
And in Grateful Commemoration of his

Servants,
Thomas Cranmer, Nicholas Ridley, Hugh Latymer,

Prelates of the Church of England,

Who, near this spot,

Yielded their bodies to be burned,

Bearing Witness to the Sacred Truths

Which they had affirmed and maintained,

Against the

Errors of the Church of Rome,

And rejoicing that to them it was given,

Not only to believe in Christ,

But also to suffer for His sake,

This Monument,

Was Erected by Public Subscription,

In the year of our Lord God

MDCCLXXXIX.

N.B.—An opinion having been expressed in various quarters that a Monument combined with a Church near the spot where the Prelates suffered martyrdom, would be a more appropriate memorial than a monument by itself; and some of the subscribers to the Monument having signified their intention of adding to their subscriptions if a Church should be built,—

The Committee give notice that a public meeting of the Subscribers will be held on Thursday the 31st of January in order to decide this question. Meanwhile, Subscribers are requested to signify their preference for one or both of these objects when they record their subscriptions.

TO INCUMBENTS OF LIVINGS.

THE REV. JOHN HODGSON, (Vicar of St. Peter's, in the Isle of Thanet, and Secretary of the Clergy Mutual Assurance Society), having been for some time engaged in investigating the course of mortality amongst the one particular class of society consisting of "the Clergy of the Established Church," would feel himself greatly obliged (and the profession may be very much benefited by it hereafter) if the Clergyman in every parish would assist him in the undertaking, which thus would be made easy, by procuring for him and sending to him in plain writing the following particulars sealed up.

1. The names of all and each of the Incumbents of his parish (specifying the parish and diocese), on and since the 1st of January, 1779; and, if possible, the dates, or thereabouts, of their becoming Incumbents of the same.

2. The date of their ceasing to be the Incumbents, and whether by death, or otherwise.

3. If by death, the date of their death, and their age at death; and whether the number of the years of the age specified be years completed, or to be completed next birth-day; if by removal, where removed to.

4. The authority for such age, whether from tablet, stone, register, or other source; specifying whence it is, and in what church found.

5. The account and particulars of 3 and 4, where the Incumbent of another parish may have been buried, and registered, or otherwise testified to, in his parish since the year 1778; specifying of what parish Incumbent, and in what county.

6. The account where an Incumbent was buried, if not in his own parish.

7. The date of the birth of the present Incumbent, in the year, and month, and day of it. It may appear that too much is asked under this head; but the information upon this one point alone would be very valuable in the mass; and the age of any individual would be kept strictly private.

The object of the investigation is to ascertain whether life amongst the Clergy be of more than common duration, and to find the lowest possible rates at which Clergymen may be invited to make Assurances upon Life. The Lord Bishop of London was pleased at the late visitation of his Diocese to request his Clergy to assist Mr. Hodgson in his inquiries.

If the Incumbents of Parishes throughout England and Wales will have the kindness to send in all the information which they can collect, Mr. Hodgson has no doubt that he shall be able by such means, aided through other channels, such as the University and Public School Registers, to perfect a very useful work in a most satisfactory manner. Mr. Hodgson most sincerely thanks the Clergymen who have already furnished him with the Statements required, and requests an early return from those who have not yet been able to send them. As there are many hundred letters to consult and to enter up, the very "plainest writing" is desirable.

Observe.—It is earnestly requested that statements as above, if procured, may be left, at any convenient opportunity, by means of a friend visiting London, or so as to cause no expense, for Mr. Hodgson, at Messrs. Rivingtons; or Mr. Parker's, West Strand; or at the Bounty Office, Great Dean's Yard; or at Mr. Burder's, 27, Parliament Street; or at No. 40, Parliament Street.

ADVOWSON OR NEXT PRESENTATION.

A MARRIED CLERGYMAN, of high qualifications, in his 45th year, wishes to purchase the above, with a probability of early induction. Value from 300*l.* to 600*l.* per annum.

Address, post-paid, Rev. L. L., Mr. Parker's, 445, West Strand, London.

EDUCATION.

A MARRIED CLERGYMAN, M.A., Oxon, wishes to receive into his house, after the ensuing Christmas vacation, to educate with his son (his only child), rather more than seven years old, a young Gentleman of or about the same age. As the Advertiser does not contemplate taking more than one Pupil, Parents may assure themselves of a child receiving every care and attention. Terms, Fifty Guineas per Annum. Respectable references can be given.

Address, post paid, Rev. S. P. N., to the care of Mr. Short, Bookseller, Hinckley, Leicestershire.

PORTRAITS AND MEMOIRS OF THE ARCH-BISHOPS, BISHOPS, and other Distinguished DIG-NITARIES and CLERGYMEN, of the United CHURCH OF ENGLAND AND IRELAND, and of the EPISCOPAL CHURCH IN SCOTLAND.

It is intended that this great National Work shall comprise a Series of Portraits, accompanied with brief Memoirs of the Archbishops, Bishops, and other living Dignitaries and Clergymen of the United Church of England and Ireland: and the distinguished patronage and success with which this undertaking has been already honoured, inspires the Proprietor with the confidence that it will be highly acceptable to the nation at large, as well as to the members of our venerable and Apostolic Church.

The above Work will be in the same size and style as the Conservative Portraits, now publishing by Messrs. Ryly and Dawe, 8, Regent Street, London.

The Portraits will be engraved in the first style of the art, and neither trouble nor expense spared to render this great work worthy of the noble cause to which it is dedicated, and one of the most splendid that has ever appeared.

A Part containing three Portraits, with their respective Memoirs, will be published every alternate month, in a thick handsome wrapper, for the protection of the plates. The size of each engraving will be nine inches by seven.

All Portraits will be given in full canonicals; and those Clergymen who have approved pictures of themselves will oblige the Proprietor by lending them to him for the purposes of this work. They will be carefully preserved, and returned free of expense; but where an approved Portrait does not exist, the Proprietor will have one painted expressly for the work at his own expense.

Subscribers' Names and Communications received by G. DAWE, 9, Southampton Place, New Road, London. The names will be published from time to time on the covers of the Work, and early Subscribers will have the first impressions from the Plates. Orders received by all Booksellers in Town and Country.

THE ORDER OF BAPTISM, both Public and Private, according to the Use of the United Church of England and Ireland; illustrated from the "Use of Salisbury," the "Religious Consultation of Herman, Archbishop of Cologne," and the Sentiments of the Compilers and Revisers of the Book of Common Prayer.

By the Rev. T. M. FALLOW, M.A.,
Curate of All Souls, St. Marylebone.

"The contents of the present volume, with the exception of the introductory remarks, consist of documents which more or less relate to the compilation and revisions of the Baptismal Offices of the United Church. They are offered to the public with the simple object of enabling others to ascertain for themselves the principles on which the offices in question are framed, as well as the sense in which the terms therein adopted are used. Among the documents will be found the "Ordo Baptismi" of the Use of Salisbury, and the Baptismal Liturgy of Herman, Archbishop of Cologne—rituals from which our own offices were compiled; the authoritative statements of Cranmer and the Church of England, on the subject of Baptism, from the period of her emancipation from the Roman yoke up to the publication of the first Service-Book of Edward VI.; synoptical tables, shewing the alterations made in the offices at their several revisions in 1552, 1604, and 1661; together with a history of the conferences connected with these revisions, and exhibiting the reasons of the various changes which were then introduced into them. These are now published with the hope that they may be useful in assisting such as are desirous of ascertaining what are the real sentiments of the Reformed Church of England on the subject of holy baptism."—Advertisement.

"Mr. F. has here brought together, and admirably arranged, all that seems requisite to a right understanding on this important subject. The work, besides being highly valuable and important, has made its appearance at the very point of time when it will be of the greatest use to the Church, by enlightening the minds of her inquiring sons upon a very weighty matter."—Conversative Journal.

"Mr. F. has executed his task with ability and judgment."—British Magazine.

On the 1st of January next will be published, in 8vo, price 6d., with a Splendid PORTRAIT of the LORD BISHOP OF LONDON, No. 1. of the CHURCH MAGAZINE, under the direction of eminent Clergymen of the Church of England.

All sound and pious Churchmen agree, that if ever it were requisite to supply the favoured sons and daughters of the Church of England with facts and arguments in defence of those great Scriptural and Catholic principles whereby they are broadly distinguished from the Romish Dissenters on the one hand, and the various divisions of Protestant Dissenters on the other, it is especially so at the present time, when these numerous and conflicting sectaries, agreeing only in hatred of the Church, have combined their efforts for her utter subversion. Under this conviction, and for the express purpose of furnishing a platform on which to discuss, in a Christian, charitable, and devotional spirit, those points in dispute between the Church and her adversaries, "The Church Magazine" is about to be commenced. The nature, constitution, government, doctrines, discipline, worship, and ritual of the Christian Church, together with the sins of heresy and schism, will furnish the more prominent topics of discussion. In this way the Scriptural foundation and character of the Church of England will be exemplified; her members established in their most holy faith; provided with solid reasons for attachments to the communion of their forefathers; and armed against the ever-varying attacks to which they are now more than ever exposed.

As whatever is new in religion must be false, so, in opposition to the novelties of the age, the conductors of "The Church Magazine" will constantly enforce the duty of inquiring for the old paths, and of walking therein; and to check the spirit of "strife and division," which so unhappily prevails in "the religious world," the duty of unity and the blessings of brotherly love will be zealously inculcated.

With this view, those points upon which Churchmen may be found to differ, if not altogether avoided, will be less frequently discussed, and more space thus devoted to the dissemination and defence of those sacred and eternal principles held forth by that spiritually, flourishing, and most important branch of Christ's "One Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church,"—the Church "established by law in these realms."

As "The Church Magazine" is designed for extensive circulation throughout the great body of Churchmen, the arguments, and statements, and information will be brought forward in pointed, clear language, and in a popular style. And as the Press is most extensively used against the best interests of our ancient and venerable Church, and her children thereby alienated from the sacred fold, it is confidently hoped that the members of the Church will render their cordial assistance to the present undertaking, by purchasing "The Church Magazine" themselves, and recommending it to their friends.

The conductors of "The Church Magazine," being in constant communication with eminent Clergymen in the British Colonies, as well as with Episcopal Clergymen in Scotland and America, will be enabled frequently to give original and other important information respecting those branches of the Christian Church.

The Proprietor intends frequently to present to the readers of "The Church Magazine" a well-executed Portrait of some eminent living Clergyman; and should his design meet with the approbation which he confidently anticipates, he will give a Portrait with each Number worth much more than the whole price of the Magazine.

SCRIPTURAL STUDIES: Comprising—The Creation; the Christian Scheme; the Inner Sense.

By the Rev. WILLIAM HILL TUCKER, M.A., Fellow of King's College, Cambridge.

"The grand object of this publication is to prepare the mind for the perusal of the Bible, by developing, in the first instance, the harmony of its plan, and showing clearly and systematically the great design of the Creation—the Scheme of Christianity—and the uniformity which pervades the whole of the works and attributes of the Creator.—In the execution of this vast undertaking, Mr. Tucker displays a very general acquaintance with those sciences that are necessary to illuminate its obscurity, and remarkable force and perspicuity in argument.—To the Clergy it must prove a text book, and we also earnestly recommend it to the attentive consideration of the laity."—Atlas.

"The excellence of the object to which this work is adapted, will be admitted by Christians of every denomination. Nor have we discovered in its pages a single passage to which objection can be taken by any sect which professes to believe in the religion of the Bible. It is a complete book of family worship. The Prayers are earnest in supplication, exhibit a deep and abiding faith in the atonement, and are full of an intense devotional spirit, that is well calculated to touch the affections of the communicant. We recommend this work with confidence to all families who preserve in their household the Christian practice of domestic devotion."—Atlas.

"In these discourses, we have a series of Sermons upon the duties of life, in which the noblest principles of morality are combined with and enforced, by the pure precepts of Christianity. The peculiar value of these discourses, consists in their practical character. They are addressed to the business of life; they display an intimate acquaintance with the human heart, and they unfold the truths of Revelation with such simplicity and power, that they are admirably calculated to move the affections as well as to instruct the mind. If conviction be the end of eloquence, this volume may be pronounced one of the most eloquent of its class."—Atlas.

DEDICATED (BY PERMISSION) TO HIS GRACE THE LORD ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY.

A LIBRARY OF FATHERS OF THE HOLY CATHOLIC CHURCH, ANTERIOR TO THE DIVISION OF THE EAST AND WEST.

TRANSLATED BY MEMBERS OF THE ENGLISH CHURCH, WITH NOTICES OF THE RESPECTIVE FATHERS, AND BRIEF NOTES BY THE EDITORS, WHERE REQUIRED, AND SUMMARIES OF CHAPTERS AND INDICES.

Edited by the Rev. E. B. PUSEY, D.D., Regius Professor of Hebrew, Canon of Christ Church, late Fellow of Oriel College.
The Rev. JOHN KEBLE, M.A., Professor of Poetry, late Fellow of Oriel College.
The Rev. J. H. NEWMAN, B.D., Fellow of Oriel College.

A PUBLICATION, answering to the above title, appeared to the Editors calculated to answer many and important ends, and to supply considerable wants, some peculiar to our own Church and times, others more general.

Their chief grounds for thinking it very desirable were such as the following:—

1. The great intrinsic value of many of the works of the Fathers, which are, at present, inaccessible, except to such as have large libraries, and are familiar with the languages in which they are written; and this the more, since a mere general acquaintance with the language will not enable a person to read with ease many of the Fathers. E.g. Knowledge of Latin alone will not suffice to read Tertullian; and in cases less strong, ecclesiastical language and peculiarity of style will often present considerable difficulties at first.

2. The desirableness of bringing together select works of different Fathers. Many who would wish to become acquainted with the Fathers, know not where to begin; and scarcely any have the means to procure any great number of their works. Editions of the whole works of a Father, (such as we for the most part have,) are obviously calculated for divines, not for private individuals: they furnish more of the works of each Father than most require, and their expense precludes the acquisition of others.

3. The increased demand for sacred reading. The Clergy of one period are obviously unequal to meet demands so rapid, and those of our day have additional hindrances, from the great increased amount of practical duties. Where so much is to be produced, there is of necessity great danger that much will not be so mature as, on these subjects, is especially to be desired. Our occupations do not leave time for mature thought.

4. Every body of Christians has a peculiar character, which tends to make them look upon the system of faith, committed to us, on a particular side; and so, if they carry it on by themselves, they insensibly contract its limits and depth, and virtually lose a great deal of what they think that they hold. While the system of the Church, as expressed by her Creeds and Liturgy, remains the same, that of her members will gradually become contracted and shallow, unless continually enlarged and refreshed. In ancient times this tendency was remedied by the constant living intercourse between the several branches of the Catholic Church, by the circulation of the writings of the Fathers of the several Churches, and, in part, by the present method—translation. We virtually acknowledge the necessity of such accessions by our importations from Germany and America; but the circumstances of Germany render mere translation inadvisable, and most of the American Theology proceeds from bodies who have altered the doctrine of the Sacraments.

5. The peculiar advantages of the Fathers in resisting heretical errors, in that they had to combat the errors in their original form, before men's minds were familiarized with them, and so risked partaking of them; and also in that they lived nearer to the Apostles.

6. The great comfort of being able to produce, out of Christian antiquity, refutations of heresy, (such as the different shades of the Arian;) thereby avoiding the necessity of discussing, ourselves, profane errors, which, on so high mysteries, cannot be handled without pain, and rarely without injury to our own minds.

7. The advantage which some of the Fathers (e.g. St. Chrysostom) possessed as Commentators on the New Testament, from speaking its language.

8. The value of having an ocular testimony of the existence of Catholic verity, and Catholic agreement; that truth is not merely what a man troweth; that the Church once was one, and spoke one language; and that the present unhappy divisions are not necessary and unavoidable.

9. The circumstance that the Anglican branch of the Church Catholic is founded upon Holy Scripture and the agreement of the Universal Church; and that therefore the knowledge of Christian antiquity is necessary in order to understand and maintain her doctrines, and especially her Creeds and her Liturgy.

10. The importance, at the present crisis, of exhibiting the real practical value of Catholic Antiquity, which is disparaged by Romanists in order to make way for the later Councils, and by others in behalf of modern and private interpretations of Holy Scripture. The character of Catholic Antiquity, and of the scheme of salvation, as set forth therein, cannot be appreciated through the broken sentences of the Fathers, which men pick up out of controversial divinity.

11. The great danger in which Romanists are of lapsing into secret infidelity, not seeing how to escape from the palpable errors of their own Church, without falling into the opposite errors of Ultra-Protestants. It appeared an act of especial charity to point out to such of them as are dissatisfied with the state of their own Church, a body of ancient Catholic truth, free from the errors, alike of modern Rome and of Ultra-Protestantism.

12. Gratitude to Almighty God, who has raised up these great lights in the Church of Christ, and set them there for its benefit in all times.

PLAN OF THE WORK.

1. The subjects of the several treatises to be published shall mainly be, Doctrine, Practice, Exposition of Holy Scripture, Refutation of Heresy, or History.

2. The treatises shall be published entire, so as to form a whole.

3. The notices of the respective Fathers shall be confined to such brief accounts of them (mostly taken from ancient sources) as shall put the general reader in possession of their age, character, and the like.

4. The notes shall be limited to the explanation of obscure passages, or the removal of any misapprehension which might not improbably arise (after the manner of the Benedictines).

5. The best editions shall be procured for the Translators.

6. Each volume shall consist either of a work or works of a single Father, or of those of several Fathers upon the same subject, or connected subjects, as in selections of Homilies.

7. Each volume (or at most two volumes) shall form a whole in itself: but the volumes shall be continued uniform, so that those who wish for fuller sets, may be able to obtain them. Each volume to contain from 400 to 600 pages.

8. The Editors hold themselves responsible for the selection of the several treatises to be translated, as also for the faithfulness of the translations; they will, however, thankfully receive any hints upon the subject, especially from divines, or their ecclesiastical superiors.

9. The work shall be published in closely printed 8vo volumes; and with as much attention to cheapness as is consistent with the good execution of the work, and the necessary remuneration of the Translators and Booksellers.

10. The Editors have assented to the suggestion of the Publishers, that the work should be published by subscription, in the hope that its price may thereby be considerably reduced, in consequence of the increased number of copies printed. The Editors declining all pecuniary profit, that arising from the additional copies printed, will go to the reduction of the price of the whole. It must, however, be distinctly understood, that the Editors hold themselves under no responsibility to the Subscribers, as such, with regard to the choice of the works to be translated.

11. The originals of the works translated shall be printed either at once or subsequently, if this shall appear desirable. It would be well, therefore, if Subscribers would specify, if they wish for the originals, either with or without the translations.

12. It is understood that subscriptions continue, until it be intimated that they are discontinued, and that they extend, under ordinary circumstances, to the end of each year. It will be arranged, however, that the works of each year should form a whole; so that the subscription might be broken off without inconvenience to the Subscriber.

13. Subscriptions might be confined, if desired, to certain larger works (as St. Chrysostom on the Epistles of St. Paul), but this obviously would be too complicated to be extended to works of small compass.

14. Four volumes are to appear in each year: the price to Subscribers not to exceed 9s. for a closely printed 8vo of 400 pages; to the public it will be raised one-fourth. When old Translations are revised, the price will be diminished.

INSTRUCTIONS for the CLERGY. By CHRISTOPHER HODGSON, Secretary to the Archbishop of Canterbury. The Fifth Edition.

A new Edition of "Hodgson's Instructions for the Clergy" has been called for at a time particularly seasonable, by reason that the principal subjects, treated of in the former editions, have been under the revision of Parliament during the last Session. By Acts passed in that Session, material amendments have been made in the law respecting the providing of fit houses for the residence of the Clergy; an entire alteration has been effected in the law for regulating the holding of benefices in plurality; and various amendments have been made as to the residence of the Clergy, and powers given for facilitating the union and disunion of benefices. These, with other alterations, additions, and amendments, are of so great extent, that by the insertion of them the present Edition may almost be considered as a New Work.

•• Prospectuses and Books of Rules may be had at the Office. Attendance from eleven to four o'clock, daily.

"This Society is strictly confined to the Clergy and their families, and is distinguished from other institutions by the title of 'THE CLERGY MUTUAL ASSURANCE SOCIETY.'" Particular attention is requested in the addressing letters to "No. 40, Parliament Street."

This SOCIETY was formed for the purpose of drawing the attention of the Clergy, 1st, To the important advantages to be derived from the system of Assurance in general; 2dly, To give them an opportunity of making Assurances not offered or admitted in other public Assurance Offices; and 3dly, To keep down the Rates of Assurance at the lowest possible sum, by an inexpensive management, and a division every FIVE YEARS of the TOTAL AMOUNT of Profits (in which no Proprietors share) amongst the assured Members who may be entitled to them. Assurances may be made for a sufficient sum to be paid during sickness, infirmity, and old age, to meet the unavoidable expense of a Curate; for capital Sums or Annuities, to provide for the education of Children at School, or College, and for equipping them out in the world; for the maintenance of Orphan Children during Infancy, from the day of the Death of the Father, &c. &c. &c.

The terms, conditions, and advantages, of these Assurances, and the Tables of Rates payable for them, are fully set forth in the Prospectus. For a proof of the prosperous state of the SOCIETY, the Clergy are referred to a Report of its Proceedings, which was read at a General Meeting of Members on the 29th of June, the Lord Bishop of London in the chair; and also to a Resolution which was moved by the Lord Bishop of Winchester upon the occasion, inserted in No. I. of the Ecclesiastical Gazette. One-fourth part of the total amount of premiums paid for Life Assurances in and during the first seven years of this Institution, was returned back again as a bonus to the assured Members, and appropriated to a reduction of their future premiums, thus making the Rates of Premium which had been paid for the same during such seven years, 25 per cent. less than in the following Table. For instance, a Clergyman at the age of 50, having assured £1000 upon his Life in the year 1832, and having paid for the same up to 1836, five Annual Premiums of £43. 13s. 4d. each, received a bonus in cash of about £50 to be appropriated to the reduction of his future premium, so that in fact he paid only £33. 13s. 4d. or thereabouts, during the five first years of his assurance, or £3. 7s. 4d. for each sum of £100 assured, instead of £4. 7s. 4d. Any sum not less than £50, and not exceeding £2500, may be assured upon Life by any Clergyman, or the Father, Mother, Wife, Widow, Son, Daughter, Brother, Sister, of any Clergyman, upon terms as below, and the period appointed for the next bonus is 31st May, 1841. No charge for Stamps.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE;

OR MONTHLY

REGISTER OF

THE AFFAIRS OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND, AND

OF ITS RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES AND INSTITUTIONS.

No. 7.

LONDON, TUESDAY, JANUARY 8, 1839.

No. 7.

The ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE is published on the second Tuesday in every month, and may be obtained at sixpence per number, or six shillings per annum, by ordering it of any Newsmen in the Kingdom. It is also sent regularly every month, free of all charge, to the Resident Parochial Clergyman of every Parish throughout England and Wales.

WE request the attention of our Subscribers and Correspondents to the change which has taken place this month in regard to our Publisher and to the place of publication. The ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE is now published at the Office, No. 14, Southampton Street, Strand, (corner of Tavistock Street,) by Mr. Charles Cox, to whom all communications are to be addressed.

We take the opportunity afforded by this announcement to state that we are endeavouring to carry out more effectually than we have yet been able to do, some of the objects originally proposed in this work, more especially with reference to Reports and statements of Church Societies. And we hope in this matter to have the assistance of those Societies themselves.

We have been frequently requested to insert more detailed accounts of provincial and local matters. Our Correspondents have justly observed that many things are said and done at the founding and consecration of Churches, the meetings of local Societies, &c., which would be both interesting and useful to other persons and Societies in different parts of the kingdom. The same observation applies to the rules of such Societies, and to the different plans of parochial management which prevail in different parts of the country. At present the great obstacle which prevents us from doing this more effectually is the want of space, and the difficulty which exists with our gratuitous circulation, of enlarging this work to the extent which would be required. This difficulty we hope however will soon be removed, by the increasing number of our Subscribers, and by the additional support which we trust will be obtained from the Laity, through the kind recommendation of the Clergy.

We feel it due to ourselves to state the peculiar advantages offered by this publication, in the words of a correspondent:—"I can now accomplish by a single insertion in the ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE what I could not have done before by a dozen different publications; for I am now able by one advertisement to make my works known to the whole body of the clergy."

ECCLESIASTICAL NOTICES.

MONTHLY REPORT OF THE SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE.

67, Lincoln's Inn Fields, 8th January, 1839.

The Rev. Dr. SHORT in the chair.

THE Secretary read a communication addressed to the Foreign Translation Committee, from the Rev. C. F. Schlienz, who has recently returned from Egypt, of which the following are extracts:—

Malta, October 18th, 1838.

Rev. and dear Sir,—I had the honour to address you last under date of June 8th, 1838. My communication then referred chiefly to the two great objects I had in view in undertaking the journey, from which I returned six weeks ago, viz., the printing of our version of the Common Prayer Book in the Arabic, and the intended new version of the Scriptures into that language. During my subsequent stay in Egypt, I continued for some time to have much intercourse both with Christians and Muhammedans, which enabled me to form a better judgment as to the nature and importance of this work, as well as to exert myself in a measure to secure its acceptance, and to promote its usefulness. I perceive distinctly that the Eastern churches in those parts, regard the publication of these two works with feelings of much deeper interest than they commonly manifest, in regard to works issuing from our press at Malta. As to the Common Prayer Book, it far outweighs with them in merit, any religious tract, or any scientific or educational work. Considering the great want of general knowledge among the Christians in these parts, their ignorance of the Protestant churches in the West, the unfavourable prejudices which the Roman Catholics have infused into their minds against us; and, moreover, considering their own formularies, or the formularies of the Roman Catholics, which have been partly presented to them, and the absence, which they observe, of any formulary among missionaries of the Independent persuasion, from America, we cannot expect, that they should be able to conceive beforehand, those intrinsic excellences, which, though they lie modestly concealed, as it were, in the contents of our Common Prayer Book; are evident in the comforts, the right knowledge of eternal truth, the paths of righteousness, of peace, joy, and happiness, of millions of souls;—excellences these, which may well hold it forth as a model to any Christian community, who desire a sanctified devotion of heart, purity of doctrine, edification, order, and decency, in all their doings. Without doubt, even as a mere formulary, and, although, still almost unexamined, yet as being the formulary of devotion, doctrine, the rites and ordinances of a very large, highly respectable and influential community of Christians, and, therefore, bearing the stamp of the concurrent approbation of millions, in enlightened England, and many other parts of our globe, it cannot be uninteresting to our Eastern brethren, and must attract, particularly, the attention of the clergy. I was quite struck with the manifestation of friendly feeling, expressed by many members of the Coptic clergy, and by their very patriarch, after they had seen and in part read the Common Prayer Book in Arabic, as printed at Bishop's College, in Calcutta, a copy of which Dr. Mill presented to the patriarch, and which I have shewn also to bishops, presbyters, and lay-members of that Church. The priests, almost invariably, turned first to the respective creeds. The three golden links of the Apostolical, the Nicene, and the Athanasian Creeds, presented a pleasing attraction to their eye, and the catholicity of feeling, thereby evinced by our Church, gave them general satisfaction. I mentioned in my last communication, that the Copts as well as the Greeks, protest against the filioque in the Nicene Creed, and I shall feel much obliged to you for any directions in reference to the printing, omitting, or putting into a clause, of this phrase. Of course I shall be ready to follow the final decision of the Committee of your honourable SOCIETY, to whose judgment I deem the first deference to be due. They also seemed to be much pleased with our Communion Service, declaring that it removed the prejudice from their minds which had existed, under the idea that we had no commemoration of the Lord's Supper at all, or only once in the year; and even then, in a manner very unbecoming Christians. They now perceive the contrary to be the truth. The Book excited also various enquiries: for instance, after the confession of faith (the Articles) of our Church, which this edition does not contain; the rites of consecration and ordination, in which I found they differed from us, in that their presbyters too may ordain deacons, if there be no bishop present to perform the service. Besides these, there are other points of doctrine and discipline, which the Common Prayer Book induced me to discuss amongst them with feelings of deep interest. From the information which I have obtained in regard to the printing of the Common Prayer Book, I am inclined to the belief, that if it be published, with all the contents, as we have contemplated and prepared it, in intelligible, correct, and graceful language, it is likely to meet with acceptance among many members of the Eastern churches, in these parts, and to prove to them, in various ways, even in a public sense, highly useful. The more they will read and examine, with attention and care, its contents, the more they will find to approve and admire. The Greek and the Copt, if they are at all acquainted with their own formularies, cannot peruse ours without discovering a striking similarity between both in many important things. Our prayers contain many a phrase which they find in their own, many a heart-consoling expression, calculated to animate, to excite and cement the most harmonious and tender Christian union. Our Creeds are approved of by them, with the exception of one Latin phrase. There is but little in form, and still less in doctrine, to which they would object, in the administration of our Sacraments. As to Episcopal Church government, they feel themselves on the most brotherly footing with ourselves. The reading of portions from the Sacred Scriptures, and the singing of Psalms during Divine Service, and the reading of Homilies also, they find to be identical to both churches. But it will appear by a fair comparison, that there is better order and greater perfection in ours than in theirs. What an improvement, and what a blessing would it be, should the Coptic Church of its own accord, adopt our formulary of prayers and rites! At present they have only old disfigured manuscripts in Arabic and Coptic, from which they perform Divine Service; and these manuscripts in many of their churches, contain only parts of their service; an inconvenience this which becomes the more injurious to their congregations, as their churches generally are very dark, the light of the wax candle, as well as the eye of the reader, dim, and the minds of many, perhaps the majority of them, uninstructed in the art of reading well. May our Heavenly Father, to whose kind care and gracious Providence we would commend our sister churches in the East, soon illuminate their minds with the plenitude of divine truth, so as to render their path of duty in this important concern, both straight and pleasant!

That under present circumstances this translation of the Liturgy is likely to attract the attention of the upper classes of Muhammedans, and to find readers among them, is very probable. They are eager enough to read and to examine any thing which affects the national character and the destiny of European nations, especially the English.

With regard to my enquiries respecting the Arabic Bible, I beg briefly to state—

1. That there are two editions of the Arabic Bible in print, known to the Christians and Muhammedans in Egypt and Syria; the version which has been taken from Bishop Walton's Polyglott Bible, and the one published by the Propaganda, 1672.

2. That the Christians in these parts do not receive at all the version of the Polyglott Bible; and that, under a great many difficulties, the version of the Propaganda has, in a measure, obtained among them. How this version was regarded about a century ago, fifty years after its publication, we may learn from Rich. Simon's Lettres Choisées. Amsterd. 1730. tom. ii. p. 165. "On a imprimé à Rome une version entière de la Bible en Arabe, qui avoit été retouchée sur la Vulgate. Mais cette traduction Arabe est tombée d'elle même, les peuples de Levant ne peuvent goûter ces sortes de versions. Les Maronites mêmes, quoiqu'ils soient entièrement soumis au Pape, ne les approuvent point." An attempt was made to print another version of the Arabic Bible at Rome, 1752, of this, however, only the first part appeared. This part comprises almost all the historical books of the Old Testament. As far as my knowledge extends concerning it, I am inclined to think that the version has been made from the Septuagint. A bishop of the Coptic Church, who entered the service of the Pope, at the Propaganda, was the editor of the first part. For what reasons the publication of the other parts was stopped, or suppressed, I could not learn.

3. The reason that the Propaganda version has in a measure obtained, among the Christians in these parts, cannot have been, because it had the sanction of the Pope. The Greek, the Copt, the Armenian, the Nestorian, care little for the mandates of the Roman pontiff, and unite in their aversion to receive any thing from him that might lay them under any obligations, or draw them into the net of his numerous emissaries. The Maronites, who through Jesuitical intrigue were induced to enrol themselves under the papal banner, form the only exception to papal disobedience and dislike among these oriental churches. But, besides the strenuous exertions of the Roman missionaries in favour of the circulation of this version in these parts, it must be allowed that it possesses much intrinsic worth. For as to the faithfulness of the translation, although it has not been so faithfully executed as the holy import of the contents of the original would certainly seem to demand, yet it has, in this respect, much less demerit than that version which has been printed from Walton's Polyglott Bible. This the respective churches might easily have perceived by a mere comparison of those portions of the Sacred Scriptures, which they possess, either in manuscript or in print. Again, the language and style of this version shews much propriety and good taste. It keeps aloof from the phraseology of the Coran, and also in a great degree from the vulgarisms of the Bazaars and the Mishrabas (coffee-houses of the Arabs). True it is that a great many instances may easily be pointed out in which it betrays a want of good taste regarding classical language, as well as a great many passages, especially in the Prophets, the Psalms, and the Apostolical writings, which do not faithfully reflect the true sense of the original. A variety of causes may notwithstanding have concurred, to induce people to connive at this circumstance, and, perhaps, even to approve and love such defects. The oriental Christians generally in these parts, who for a long time have almost entirely neglected the classical study of the Arabic, would perhaps often prefer a want of classical taste, in their religious books, to a strict adherence to it, whilst the priests would, perhaps, occasionally prefer a want of faithfulness to strict probity. The truth of this I have witnessed in a great many cases, both among the clergy and laity. During my sojourn in Egypt, I have not wanted opportunities to discuss the correctness of passages, in which the editors of the Romish edition have taken good care to give an unfaithful translation, in order to sanction or palliate their own theological errors, as well as those of the oriental churches, if identical with theirs. Besides, there is so little of general, and more especially of theological learning, and such a want of Scriptural interest and research amongst the present clergy of these churches, that they might well remain ignorant of, or indifferent as to the defects of this version. But had they remained even to the present time, so disaffected towards the version as to discountenance its use altogether, their duty would have been to produce a better one themselves, if they at all wished to be possessed of the whole canon of the Word of God. But as to such an undertaking, whence could they have had the means, the knowledge and learning, the workmen, and the necessary pecuniary resources to carry it into execution? The opinion of the Muhammedans differs materially from that of the Christians, with regard to these two versions. Their aversion to both of them is perhaps equally great. The Polyglott Bible version they dislike chiefly for its "presumptuous impropriety," in adopting the phraseology of the Coran, and for its inequality of style; the Propaganda version for its vulgarity and inelegancy of language. With regard to the Muhammedans of these countries, the truth is, that the Bible has hitherto been circulated almost exclusively amongst persons in the first rank of society, and of learned Sheikhs, who have been accustomed to hear, and especially to read classical language. These disdain to read translations, even of the most interesting works, if they betray vulgarity of language. During my stay in Egypt, I had sufficient opportunities to see proof of this. On a voyage on the Nile, I met several Muhammedan Sheikhs of great respectability, at the residence of the governor of Mansura; Abd Er Rahman Bey, a gentleman of uncommon talent, and one of the first functionaries of the pasha. He had brought these learned Sheikhs from Cairo to perform, and to be present at a marriage ceremony of one of the ladies of his Harem. After the festivities of the occasion were over, he led me, in the presence of a very respectable assembly of Muhammedan guests, into a religious discussion with his Eastern sages, which lasted for several hours. In the course of the controversy, the subject of the translation of the Bible was touched upon. In their enquiries respecting the state of learning in Europe, they also asked, whether we paid any attention to the study of oriental literature? to which I replied in the affirmative. I told them that at most of our universities professorships of Hebrew, of Arabic, of Persian, and of oriental languages in general, had been instituted, and that hundreds of youths were studying the languages of the East, and exploring the golden mines of its literature without ever traversing its sandy plains. They were surprised to hear that many of our students were reading their Coran, for the sake of obtaining a knowledge of its classical language. Whilst they were admiring the liberality of our sentiments, I expressed to them the hope, that we should be so happy as to witness similar feelings influencing them and their people, and that they too, would soon begin to study our Sacred Scriptures. "If the translation of your sacred books, they rejoined, has been as badly executed in the English, as it has been in the Arabic language, we shall not think of doing so. Nothing could be more unpalatable to the good taste of an Arabic reader than the language in which you offer to us your Bible. If there be any evidence wanting to testify to the truth of the prophetic gift of our prophet, we have but to cite from the Coran the passage wherein he proscribes to us the reading of your Sacred Scriptures, because of your having corrupted them. We would never entertain the uncharitable feeling, that you had ever corrupted the original of your Bible: but any candid Arabic scholar, who will take the trouble to read over a few chapters of this work, must feel persuaded that Muhammed, in his accusation alluded merely to the worthless translation of your Bible, whereby the original beauty and perfection of divine truth must have been in a great measure lost or obscured. Give us your sacred books in correct and elegant language, and you will find us disposed to read them."

On a subsequent day I was again invited by the governor to meet these learned Sheikhs at his mansion. In presence of a great many persons, the governor requested the principal Shiekh to read portions from the Psalms. In the course of reading, the Shiekh repeatedly stopped, making his critical remarks upon the pitiful language into which, he said, the noble sentiments of the royal poet had been squeezed by the poor translator. At Cairo also, I had sufficient opportunity to learn the delicate sentiments of the Muhammedans, in regard to our translations; and, undoubtedly, if there be any work, which, in their estimation merits a translation, executed with correctness and elegance, it is that which contains the word of God. Indeed this feeling of prejudice is with some of them so strong, as to make them believe, that a book containing a revelation from God cannot be translated at all.

I beg now to make a few general remarks with regard to the work of a new translation of the Bible into the Arabic language.

1. The undertaking of preparing a new version of the Bible into Arabic, must, I think, appear from my foregoing statement, a very desirable work, and a measure fitted to promote Christian knowledge in the East, to a vast extent, both amongst Christians and Muhammedans.

2. As this work opens to the charity of the Church a large field of activity, so it leads also to the contemplation, that unless it be effected by our Church, millions both of Christians and Muhammedans, would, in all probability, have to remain, at least for a long time to come, without a correct version of the Sacred Scriptures. And hence its vast importance, as well as our great responsibility with regard to it.

3. This work, being of such a desirable and important nature, it ought to be executed with the greatest precision and care, no pains being spared in order to render it as perfect as possible.

4. This version should be made faithfully to adhere to the original. If it be the design of translators to convey the true sense of the original, this ought to be the leading characteristic in the translation of every work, and more especially that of the Bible! Its divine Author, its sacred contents, the moral wants of its readers, the eye of the critic, and the eye of the enemy, all speak but one language to us. Take care! Be faithful!

5. But in this version, the endeavour to have the sense of the original faithfully and literally rendered, ought not to be made at the expense of the purity of the Arabic language. This must appear not only free from Hebraisms and Grecisms, but must also satisfy the just demands of Arabic grammar, and, so to speak, the vernacular cast of the language; its peculiarities; its independent spirit. Correct language will be expected both by Muhammedans and Christians in the East, and nothing could bring greater contempt upon our work, from both, than our appearing deficient in this point. It would be regarded by them as the surest proof of our incompetency as to the whole undertaking. Here I beg to submit to the consideration of the Committee, that it would be desirable to prepare and to print this work with the vowel signs, in all cases, where the sense of the original might, without them, be misconstrued, particularly by persons who have not been in the habit of reading the Bible, except in but very imperfect versions; or, where, without them, the right sense cannot be ascertained, but with much difficulty. This, I think, is of much importance generally, inasmuch as we ought to exhibit truth in the clearest and most unequivocal light possible. In making this remark, however, I feel particularly influenced by the consideration, that there at present exists so large a number of half-educated youths, both Muhammedan and Christian in these countries, who will be much in need of such an help, in order to enable them, easily and correctly to read and understand the records of eternal truth. And even the perfect Arabic scholar, if such an one be in existence, whether young or old, whether accustomed or not to the reading of our sacred books, even such a man would not be likely to despise the assistance thus proposed. Besides, there are great numbers of adult Christians, both of the clergy and laity, who, without such aid, would be unable to read a single chapter of the Bible with understanding*.

As regards a good style, elegance of language, and refinement of expression, we should not perhaps be consulting the best interests of the sacred objects we have at heart, by paying too much regard to this particular. A good deal, however, I think may be accomplished without offending the taste of the Eastern Christians, or robbing the Coran of "the sacred pearls of its diadem," or without violating the sacredness of our own task, or obstructing its usefulness. I deem it to be a paramount duty of a Christian writer in the Arabic language, to show to the Muhammedans that we may write this language well, and apply it even to the most holy of purposes, without borrowing the language or phraseology from the Coran. Yet as this is not an easy duty, so it is not absolutely necessary; and much time ought not to be spent in search of the beauties of language, only for the sake of gratifying a comparatively small number of high personages and learned sheikhs of delicate taste, whilst the far greater proportion of readers would in all probability be unable to appreciate them. The most expedient way, therefore, seem to be, to adopt a middle style, avoiding "poetical dainties" as well as plebeian vulgarity. A certain difference of style must of course appear in parts of the translation, analogous to the different contents of the Bible. The translator must not be indifferent to the sublimity of the sacred poets and prophets,—the plainness of the historians,—the perspicuity, the vigour, and dignity of the Apostles,—the heavenly beauty and sacred majesty of Him who "spoke as never man spake." Yet the application of the middle style will be proportionably most suitable to the whole work, and will most probably prove most useful to its readers.

6. With all deference to the opinion and judgment of the Committee, I beg to submit to their kind consideration, that the version should contain also the Apocryphal Books. This measure I venture to propose, because the Eastern Churches have been for many centuries past, and are still, in a measure, accustomed to the use of these books, and ask for them; because there is such a general and total want of the knowledge of the canon of the sacred volume, such an ignorance of its original languages, such an absence of its critical study among the Oriental Churches in these parts, as renders it extremely difficult, and almost impossible for us, to give them any satisfactory reason, why it is that we withhold from them these books, especially as there are many of them impressed with the opinion, imparted to them by verbal tradition, that these books have some claims to their being used by the Christian Church, though they may not be canonical; because they may be usefully read by Christians, and, if accompanied with a few explanatory notes, without injury either to Christian faith or morals: without them the history of the Church seems to be in want of a connective link of some importance: because we are likely thereby to stop the mouths of our adversaries in these parts—(the Roman Catholics)—who accuse us before other Christian Churches of corrupting the Scriptures, just on this very account, saying that we cut out whole books from the Bible to suit the convenience of our confession. What sad effects such slanderous insinuations are capable of producing we know sufficiently from experience. We have only to call to mind some strictures of the melancholy disputes, which followed the translation of the Bible into modern Greek, and its publication and dissemination in Greece and Turkey. Yet I would not that the denunciation of the advocates of the Roman heresy should lead to the commission of the very crime it denounces—the corrupting of the sacred Scriptures; not indeed by cutting out, but by adding to their canon what does not belong to it rightfully. I would beg, therefore, to submit that the apocryphal books may be added at the end of the canonical books of the Old Testament, with a superscription to designate their character, and with a few notes in explanation of certain passages, which, without such notes, might prove prejudicial to the right faith and practice of Christians.

7. The present circumstances of the Eastern Churches in these parts, affords us little hope for help in the execution of this work. They have neither the men nor the means, neither the knowledge nor the will, requisite for such an undertaking. In all my repeated enquiries, among both the Coptic and Greek Clergy, after persons capable of rendering us assistance in this work, I met with entire disappointment. Among the Copts I could not find a single individual who understood either Greek or Hebrew. They also entirely neglect the study of the classical Arabic. The Greeks also, to whom the Arabic is vernacular, have sadly neglected biblical philology, as well as the study of the classical Arabic. Lately the Greeks of Syria have urgently requested us to aid them in the establishing of schools; and a Syrian gentleman, who has the religious and moral welfare of his countrymen much at heart,—an intimate friend of the Greek Patriarch of Antioch,—told me, but a short time ago, that it would be in vain to seek for a person amongst his countrymen possessing the abilities of my translator. Amongst the Maronites of Syria, we might possibly find a few individuals capable of rendering us some assistance; but I have reason to fear, that their religious prejudices would prevent them from doing any thing in behalf of such an object. I know of a person amongst them, very well acquainted with the Arabic, who, a few years ago, instructed a friend of mine in that language; but he is at present no longer disposed to assist us. Some time ago I asked him for his help; when he answered, that were I to pay him fifty dollars per day, he could not put his hand to such a work. The truth is, the Jesuits have done all in their power to prejudice these people against every benevolent operation of the Protestants. Some help we may derive for our work, from the portions of the sacred Scriptures, and other biblical and theological works, found amongst these respective churches, both in manuscripts and in print. Of the Psalms there are various versions, with more or less merit. The lessons appointed to be read in the churches of the Greek Roman Catholics, contain the greater part of the New Testament*. The Copts possess the whole of the Old Testament in Arabic, the second book of the kings excepted, in MSS; but besides the difficulty of access thereunto, it can be of little or no use to us. It is a wretched imitation of the Coptic, which has been translated, with but very little accuracy, from the LXX. They have also made a translation of the Coptic New Testament into Arabic, which they use in MS. in the reading of Scripture lessons in their churches. The translation of this work is much better than that of the Old Testament, and may be of some use to us. They have also books of Homilies, Comments on the Sacred Scriptures, Catechisms, Comments on their respective Creeds, and theological dogmas, Liturgies, Evidences of Christianity, parts of the Church History, and Legends of Saints, in Arabic. I have succeeded in obtaining forty-five volumes, in print and in MS., which contain parts of the Bible, and such other works as I have just mentioned. These I have brought with me to Malta.

8. The personal assistance which I have, and have the prospect of obtaining, I may deem sufficient for the work. It is the best I was capable of securing.

Mr. Fares, my translator hitherto, has, during my absence, been offered the Arabic Professorship at Malta, by our Governor. He accepts this appointment under conditions which will leave him sufficient time for the execution of the work under consideration. Except the lectures, which he will have to give daily at the government schools, he engages to spend whatever time he has left free, for the translation of the Bible. It being impossible to find a person in these countries, with the abilities of Mr. Fares, as an Arabic translator, it will be expedient to make any reasonable sacrifice in order to secure his services. Among the first circles of Muhammedans, and by the most learned Sheikhs of Cairo, I have found his writings greatly admired; and among the Christians he passes, according to the expression of a rival scholar, for a miracle.

Now with this aid, I have reason to hope, that by the blessing of God I may be able to discharge the important duties incumbent upon me in reference to my engagement of procuring a new translation of the Bible into Arabic, in a manner suitable to its sacred and imperative demands, and creditable to your honourable Society.

9. With the beginning of the ensuing year, I intend, D.V., to begin this work. The chief reason which induces me to defer the commencement thereof till that time is, that I have but recently recovered from a severe illness, and my medical friends advise me to spend a few months solely with a view of recruiting intellectual strength. Perhaps it might have been from various causes, or only from the sad accident which befel me on the Nile: the oar of a boat having fallen from a considerable height directly upon my head, which threw me down from the upper to the lower deck, and left me there for some minutes in a state of insensibility, that I had to suffer for nearly six weeks from an inflammation of the membrane of the brain. By the skilful treatment of Dr. Pruner at Cairo, and the kind attention of faithful friends, however, under the blessing of God, I so far recovered my health, that I left Egypt in a state of convalescence. Yet I was advised not to pursue my journey to Syria, on account of the great heat of the summer season, since it might again have affected my health, which was still in a delicate state. Although at present I do not feel any particular inconvenience from my application to literary pursuits, yet I feel it to be incumbent on me, with regard to my health, as well as on account of my work, to use, for a few months, great moderation in my studies. By the commencement of the new year, I hope, I shall likewise have succeeded in engaging — in our service, so that we may then enter upon our work, under all the advantages that we are capable of securing.

* It is worthy of remark, that these lessons have been translated in very correct and elegant language; but they betray a want of a faithful adherence to the original.

10. We have not yet been favoured with the Preface to the Common Prayer Book, and should be much obliged, if you would be so kind, to forward it by the first convenient opportunity. Both our large and small founts of Arabic type have been finished during my absence, and the middle-sized one will be finished within a month's time, so that we may be able to begin printing the Common Prayer Book, with the new characters, as soon as we shall be favoured with the Preface, and any further instructions that may be deemed necessary concerning it.

Craving your kind indulgence regarding the trouble I have given you by this lengthened communication,

I remain, Rev. and dear Sir,
Your most obedient and obliged servant,
C. F. SCHLIENZ.

SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL IN FOREIGN PARTS.

This Society has recently issued a circular to the Secretaries of its several District Committees, to engage their co-operation in looking out for duly qualified men who may be recommended for Missionary appointments.

Additional Clergymen are wanted in all the Colonies: but the most pressing demand is for Travelling Missionaries in the Dioceses of Quebec and Nova Scotia; and the Society is willing to guarantee to them an adequate salary, besides a grant for outfit and passage; while the actual expenses of travelling will be defrayed from local funds.

The Society too continues to receive applications for further aid from the West Indies, especially from Trinidad and British Guiana; and is pledged to extend its operations to the Diocese of Bombay, so soon as it can meet with Clergy fitted by their character and education to engage in the arduous duties of an Indian Mission.

The meetings of the Society's friends which have been held in almost every Diocese during the past Summer and Autumn, give reason to hope that the forth-coming Report will exhibit such an augmentation of Income as may enable the Society to answer the increasing demands upon its funds. And we may confidently hope that each succeeding year will furnish the means of more effectually accomplishing the work at which it has been labouring for nearly a century and a half—the great work of propagating the Gospel of Christ throughout the Colonies and Dependencies of our Empire.

CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

From the Church Missionary Paper, No. XCII.
Christmas, 1838.

WESTERN-INDIA MISSION.—STATE OF THE MISSION.

We copy a few passages from the Rev. C. P. Farrar's Report of the Mission for 1837; showing its state and progress.

Progress of Translations.—The Rev. J. Dixon has been diligently employed, both in extensive journeys, preaching the Word, and in Translations. The progress of his Translational labours is thus related by Mr. Farrar:—

The Books of the Prophets, translated from the Original Hebrew by the Rev. J. Dixon, are being carried through the press, under the direction and at the expense of the Bible Society. Mr. Dixon has carefully revised and greatly improved his first edition of the Book of Psalms; and this improved Version is nearly ready for the press. He has also translated several of the other Books of the Hagiography, viz. Job, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, and the Song of Solomon; which are in a state of forwardness for publication.

Progress of the Ministry.—The Missionaries had been engaged in journeying extensively through the countries around Nassuck, the seat of the Mission, preaching the Word. The general course of those labours is thus stated by Mr. Farrar—

The Gospel has been preached at Nassuck, both to Hindoos and Mussulmans, by one or other of the Missionaries, almost without intermission, throughout the year. It will be sufficient, for general satisfaction and encouragement, to state, that it has always found hearers. The Missionaries have always met with larger or smaller numbers, to whom they might discourse of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come. The Readers have always obtained listeners; and Tracts and Books have been constantly demanded, with almost boisterous eagerness.

The Daily and Sunday Services in the Mission Chapel have been attended, in the week-days, by an average of one hundred and thirty.

Itinerating through the length and breadth of the land, for the purpose of preaching to the heathen, and disseminating Christian knowledge among them, is recognised by the Missionaries to be a duty of paramount importance.

NORTH-WEST AMERICAN MISSION.—STATE OF THE INDIAN SETTLEMENT.

Mr. Jones thus describes the state of the Indian Settlement on the Red River, formed by the indefatigable, toilsome, and self-denying labours of Mr. Cockran:

June 13, 1838.—Mr. Cockran came to breakfast. Afterwards, we set off together for the Indian Settlement. I was much delighted with all I saw. Though so near the Lake, their crops were equal, if not superior, to those of any other parts of the colony. Their houses were well constructed, of oak and pine, of which there is an abundance in the vicinity. Everywhere we met with smiling faces; most of whom were known to me, from having been among my Indian assemblies above, before this place was formed. Many were in active preparation, crossing their carts and oxen, in order to proceed to the buffalo-hunt. It is to be regretted that they are obliged to have recourse to this expedient, as the hunter's life has a most demoralising effect; but on account of the late failure of their crops, and other causes, they have no means of avoiding it. I was surprised at their dexterity in the use of the axe and the hoe. They have cleared an immense number of oak-stumps from their ground; and these little inclosures looked respectable, and were well fenced. They build their own houses, of which many are well jointed. In a great many instances, they make their own carts, and also, of course, what little furniture their houses contain. Here, then, is a great principle, fully, plainly, and substantially established; namely, that the Indian MAY be civilized, HAS BEEN civilized, and IS WILLING TO BE civilized. Let the Gospel, then, be made known; and let the cause be supported; other spots like this will then appear in the wilderness, with fruits as pleasing, and with aspects as cheering and refreshing. Christians in England! cherish this Vine: let it "be planted in a good soil, by great waters, that it may bring forth branches, that it may bear fruit, that it may be a goodly vine."

THE INCORPORATED SOCIETY FOR THE ENLARGEMENT, BUILDING, AND REPAIRING OF CHURCHES AND CHAPELS.

Held their second meeting for this session on Nov. 19; the Bishop of London in the chair. The members present were the Rev. Dr. Shepherd, H. H. Norris, and J. Lonsdale; J. Round, M.P., J. S. Salt, W. Davis, J. Watson, B. Harrison, and W. Cotton, Esqrs. Among other business transacted by the society, grants were voted towards building a gallery in the church at Manorbier, Pembrokeshire; re-pewing the church at Colbourne, Southampton; building a church at Tansley, Northamptonshire; increasing the accommodation in the church at Flimpton, Suffolk; building a chapel at Whiteshill, Gloucestershire, and one also at Holme, Westmoreland; increasing the accommodation in the church of St. Ann's, Manchester; enlarging the church of St. Michael's, at Thorn, Norwich; building a chapel at Pennington, Southampton; building a chapel at Uxbridge Moor, Middlesex; re-pewing and building galleries in the church of Gateshead, Durham.

MEETING OF THE IRISH PRELATES.— ADDRESS FROM THREE HUNDRED OF THE CLERGY.

During the recent meeting of the Irish archbishops and bishops in Dublin, a very important document was laid before them, signed by upwards of 300 clergymen, suggesting the utility of some regulations which would enable the clergy to preach and otherwise exercise their ministry beyond the sphere of their own parishes, and in districts where spiritual instruction might be more required.

The following is the address, with the reply of the archbishops and bishops whose names are attached:—

ADDRESS.

"To the Most Reverend and Right Reverend the Archbishops and Bishops of the Established Church of Ireland,

"We, the undersigned clergy of your lordships' different dioceses, desire to approach your lordships, and to lay before you, with all duty and respect, our sentiments and feelings on the following momentous subjects:—

"We are deeply sensible of the pressing difficulties and dangers with which our Church is encompassed on every side, and of our duty to labour in her cause.

"We are impressed with the awful state of spiritual ignorance and destitution, of error and superstition, in which the vast majority of our countrymen are sunk, and with a sense of the solemn responsibilities that are laid upon all, in every rank, from the lowest to the highest, as churchmen, and as ministers of Christ, in reference to them as our respective parishioners.

"We feel perfectly convinced, from our personal experience, and from the facts presented by the past and the present state of our Church, that the exercise of our individual ministrations in our respective parishes and spheres of duty, does not, and cannot meet the whole exigencies of the Church and our country, and we most earnestly, and respectfully, and with all dutiful affection, desire to lay these our feelings and convictions before all our bishops, as in the sight of our God.

"While we are most anxious on all these points, it is our earnest desire that all our efforts should be made, not only in strict conformity with the laws and discipline of our Church, but that they should meet the cordial and confiding approbation and paternal co-operation of our respective dioceses. We desire humbly, in all things, to 'approve ourselves as the ministers of Christ, and so as to give no offence in anything, that the ministry be not blamed.'

"Under these impressions, we willingly offer ourselves with all duty, fidelity, and affection, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ for the same and especial exigencies of our Church and country, trusting that by your lordships' wisdom and consideration, some plan of co-operative interchange of labour may be devised to enable us to meet the necessities of the case.

"We are ready and willing, not as we trust in our own strength, but in the strength of our God, with our time and talents, our hearts and lives, earnestly and devotedly to give ourselves to the work, according to our several abilities, in any sphere of labour which your lordships will suggest or desire; and in which, we trust, all our brethren in Christ whose names may not be subscribed to this, will cordially and conscientiously co-operate. If it be your lordships' pleasure to direct us to submit any plan of united labour to your consideration, we shall endeavour, humbly seeking the guidance of the Holy Spirit to obey your directions; and, offering up our prayers to Him 'without whom nothing is strong, nothing is holy,' that He will graciously so direct the judgments, consciences, and hearts of your lordships and ourselves, that we may all be enabled, in our several spheres, to discharge the solemn duties and responsibilities laid upon us, that our God will bless our labours for our Church and country, and that when we come, as we so soon must come, to render an account of our stewardship, we may all be accepted before the throne, through our blessed Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ."

ANSWER.

"At a Meeting of the Archbishops and Bishops of Ireland, convened by his Grace the Lord Primate, and held in Dublin on the 28th day of November, 1838, a Memorial signed by several clergymen having been read, it was unanimously resolved to make the following declaration:—

"The undersigned archbishops and bishops of that part of the United Church of England and Ireland established in Ireland, to their very reverend and reverend brethren who have lately laid before them their sentiments and feelings arising out of the present position of the established Church, return an affectionate greeting.

"We fully concur with you, reverend and beloved brethren, in the estimate you form of the difficulties and dangers which beset the Church, and we entertain in common with yourselves, a deep sense of our joint duty unremittingly to labour in her cause.

"Whilst we lament with you the spiritual destitution of a great majority of our countrymen, we acknowledge the solemn responsibility devolving upon us all, each in his proper sphere, as ministers of Christ.

"Again, we cannot but avow our conviction, jointly with yourselves, that the exercise of your individual ministrations in your respective parishes is not commensurate with all the exigencies of our Church and country; and we receive the expression of this conviction on your part with corresponding feelings of esteem and good-will.

"We remark with especial satisfaction and approval the expression of your earnest desire that your efforts should be made in strict conformity with the laws and discipline of the Church, convinced as we are that the offence necessarily occasioned by a different line of conduct must much more than counterbalance any possible benefit to be derived from it. From this language we would fain persuade ourselves that it is your deliberate conviction that the spiritual ministrations in every diocese are subject to the superintendence and control of its own bishop, and that without his authority no inferior minister of Christ can take part in them without offence.

"With this understanding we heartily commend your offer of self-dedication to the service and especial exigencies of the Church; but at the same time we frankly avow our opinion, that a plan of co-operative interchange of labour, such as that which you propose, would be far from meeting the exigencies of the case. For, as we apprehend it to be the principle and rule of the Church's provisions, that each of her ministers should have assigned to him a definite sphere of action, so we think that a deviation from that principle and rule, so far from producing the good effects which you anticipate, would be rather calculated to introduce evils which are doubtless not in your contemplation.

"Whilst, therefore, we cannot but commend your devotedness to the work of the gospel in any field of labour which we may point out, we cannot but declare to you our firm conviction, that the strength and ability with which it may please God to bless you will, for the most part, be best employed to His honour and the good of His Church, in the congregations respectively committed to your care and charge, according to the provisions of this Church and realm; and we cannot, therefore, but express our desire that ministrations should be chiefly limited to your own prescribed line of duty.

"On the whole, we declare it to be our opinion, that the efficiency of the Church would be best promoted by enabling the prelates to provide resident curates where they may be wanted; thus producing a fresh accession of ministerial strength which shall be stationary in the places to which the curates shall be licensed, and regulated after the manner of ordinary curates.

"For the attainment of so desirable a purpose, we are preparing a plan, which it is our intention to submit to public consideration, and in which we shall gladly receive your co-operation, reverend and beloved brethren; and with that assurance, we finally beseech the blessing of the Holy Spirit, and commit you to the keeping of Almighty God in our Lord Jesus Christ.

ROMAN CATHOLIC CHAPELS AND POPULATION.

The list of chapels so ostentatiously displayed in the extract from the (Roman) Catholic Directory in our last number, is followed up by another of their periodicals, which observes of the Roman Catholic population, "We are inclined to think, but are not quite sure, that our number is overrated when reckoned at two millions."

The Romanists seem unwilling that their church should lose its ancient character for dealing in lying wonders. They themselves have stated with the same breath, that the number of their chapels in England and Wales is 446, and in Scotland 67: and when it is well known that many of these are small private chapels with very few worshippers, and that several others have actually been abandoned, since this statement was made, for want of hearers and support; it will be admitted that five hundred is an enormous average to give to each. But this will make no more than 223,000 for England and Wales, and 33,500 in Scotland, or in the whole about 266,500. But it suits their present purpose to boast, and they are not very scrupulous.

LAW. ARCHES' COURT. DECEMBER 12.

Sir Herbert Jenner gave the judgment of the court in the case of Bucks v. Woolfrey. The judgment, which was for the defendant, is a very important one, but we are not able to give it this month for want of space. In our next we propose to give it at large.

Consecration of Trinity Church, Gray's-inn-road.—

This edifice, which has been erected as a chapel of ease to the extensive and populous parish of St. Andrew, Holborn, was consecrated on Thursday, Dec. 13, by the Bishop of London, with the usual ceremonies. The building was crowded in every part, and a very considerable collection was made after the service. The church, which is an elegant and commodious structure, is situated nearly opposite the eastern end of Guildford-street, on a portion of the ground used for burial by the parish of St. Andrew. It has been erected partly by subscriptions among the benevolent members of the establishment in the neighbourhood, and partly by a grant from the Church Building Fund. The want of a place of worship was long felt in this densely populated district, and the more so when the one in question was first projected. Since that time the chapel formerly occupied by the sect of which the notorious coalheaver, William Hunting-ton, was the leader, and which is within a few hundred yards of the new building, has been fitted up and consecrated in connexion with the national church, and the numerous congregation now assembling there is under the pastoral care of the Rev. Mr. Mortimer, formerly of St. Mark's, Clerkenwell. Another new church is in the course of erection near King's-cross, at no great distance from those above referred to.—Times.

PROVINCIAL.

A numerous and highly respectable meeting was lately held at the Town-hall, Cardiff, for the purpose of raising funds to erect a church in that town, capable of accommodating 2,000 persons. The chair was taken by Dr. Nichol, the member for the borough, and the sum of 1,800*l.* was subscribed at the meeting. The Marquis of Bute contributed the princely donation of 1,000*l.*, the Chairman 200*l.*, and the remainder was subscribed in sums of from 50*l.* to 20*l.* by gentlemen in the neighbourhood.—Bristol Mirror.

Division of the Parish of Stockport.—On the 6th of October last, an order was issued by her Majesty in Council, for the division of this extensive parish into two distinct and separate parishes, as well as for the assignment of an ecclesiastical district of St. Peter's church. This desirable act (for each clergyman will now know the field of duty he has to cultivate), has been effected by her Majesty's Commissioners for building new churches, with the sanction and approbation of Lord Vernon, the patron of the parish, and the Bishop of the Diocese, in virtue of the powers invested to them by an Act of Parliament, which received the royal sanction on the 30th of May, 1838. We have now two parishes in the town—the parish of St. Mary's, and the parish of St. Thomas's.—Stockport Paper.

St. Leonard's on Sea.—Fall of part of the Church.—In consequence of the very high state of the springs, a body of water became contained to the cliffs in rear of the fabric, rendering the superstructure of the cliff slippery as soap. On the morning of the fall an immense mass of 2,000 square yards became detached from the adjoining parts, and after a short interval came down with great force on the chancel of the church, which at once fell in with a great crash, wrenching the end walls of the building, and carrying with it the vestry, but this is the full extent of the injury. The main body of the church is uninjured, and in rebuilding it, it is the intention of the incumbent, the Rev. S. H. Widdrington, to add a considerable number of additional sittings, by increasing its size, which was required. The bishop of the diocese being at the place on the day the accident happened, immediately licensed the public rooms for divine service. The services of the church have never, therefore, been discontinued. The incumbent is taking effectual steps to prevent the possibility of the recurrence of such accident.

Bath and Wells.—National Education.—On Friday last, a public meeting of the clergy and laity of this diocese, was held at the Town Hall, Wells, the Bishop of the diocese in the chair, for the purpose of establishing "a Diocesan Association in co-operation with the Incorporated National Society, with the view of promoting the objects contemplated by the Committee of Enquiry and Correspondence, appointed by the Society." The attendance was very numerous, (the Town Hall being quite filled), and it comprised the most distinguished and influential clergy and county gentlemen of the diocese.

Maidstone.—A most influential meeting of the clergy and laity of the western division of the diocese of Canterbury was held yesterday in the Town-hall, to form a Society in union with the Diocesan Society lately established at Canterbury, for the purpose of extending the system of national education on the principles and through the medium of the Church of England.

The chair was taken at half-past 1 o'clock by Vicount Marsham. There were also present, the Hon. Colonel W. Stratford, Sir E. Filmer, Bart., M.P., Sir J. Croft, Bart., Sir B. W. Riddell, Bart.

At this meeting the Rev. Dr. Griffith said he had a letter of most vital importance to the success of all such meetings, from his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury, from which he read the following extract:—"Being fully persuaded of the vital importance of a truly religious education to all classes of the community, I regard with more than ordinary pleasure the proposed association of the clergy and laity of the eastern and western divisions of my diocese, for the accomplishment of this holy purpose; and I venture to hope that the time is not far distant, when, through the blessing of God on their pious endeavours, the diocese of Canterbury will be amply provided with schools in connection with the Church, conducted by able and diligent teachers, and maintained in efficient operation by careful and regular inspection."

FOREIGN.

State of Religion in France.—The following is part of a communication addressed to the Editor by a French Protestant Pastor. It will serve to give some idea of the present state of religion in France. The subject is worthy of the deepest attention; and though under existing circumstances it is encumbered with difficulties, it must soon receive the consideration which it deserves from the members of the Church of England. It may be necessary to observe, that the writer is entirely unconnected with any other plans or efforts which have been set on foot for similar objects. The views contained in the letter are altogether his own.

"France, after having been too long subjected to the disastrous influence of the philosophy of the 18th century, is at length beginning to arouse itself from religious apathy. Men's minds are as it were in travail. Each one perceives that what he possesses is not sufficient for him; and all would wish to find a remedy for the dreadful wounds which doubt has inflicted upon their well-being. But yet there are but few who go back to the source, and turn towards Christ as the life and peace of the soul. It might appear at first sight, that a people struck with the emptiness of human speculation, as the French people are at present, would not be very far from attaching themselves to the pursuit of the one thing needful. And I have my hopes that it is so. Nevertheless, it must not be dissembled that we shall have a hard struggle before we can arrive at that object. Here we shall not only have, as every where, to vanquish the old man of sin, but also the obstacles which have been raised by the two different forms with which Christianity itself is clothed in France: forms which, under existing circumstances, are altogether incapable of meeting the wants of society.

"Popery, with its dead letter, its semi-pagan ceremonies, and its antichristian dogmas, can do nothing for the man who is tormented in his conscience, who is convinced of his sinfulness, and feels his need of a Saviour. In vain will it advise the sinner to have recourse to nine-days' devotions, pilgrimages, almsgiving, and prayers to all the saints, male and female. He will not be the less tormented in his conscience; and he can only cry, 'This is not the religion which can calm my troubles and my anguish.'

"If such a man in his despair thinks of turning himself towards Protestantism he will be stopped at the outset. Habituated as he is to see in the priest a man set apart for the sacred office, doubts will arise in his mind as to the legality of the ministry of the Protestant pastors. But supposing that he passes by this difficulty, he will soon be stopped again by the want of life in the worship: and if, in addition to this, he happens to fall in with one of our extempore preachers, with his long diffuse sermons and his prayers without either order or connexion, he will most likely be disgusted with the attempt, and will proceed no further; except indeed he be forcibly drawn by the Holy Spirit. He will not go on to seek for that living faith which is often found beneath an exterior so little flattering to the eye and to the senses. He will stop at the threshold of the sanctuary, and will retire from it, repeating, 'This is not the place for rest and peace of mind, or for an assurance of the pardon of my sins.' Nevertheless, as it must happen that a man thus agitated will continue to seek for happiness some where, he will finish perhaps with wishing to invent a religion, and he will fall, like the St. Simonians, the Fouriéristes, and others, into some spiritual monstrosity, which will plunge him further into doubt and trouble.

"You will observe, sir, that I am not speaking of mere empty theories. What I am saying to you belongs in reality to our present history. Why is it that in spite of the thirst arising from religious convictions which has reigned for some years in France, we see so few persons become Christians, and so many minds lost in the vain or the ridiculous speculations of human reason? It is because Popery, which is of itself incapable of producing any thing beneficial, has alienated from it almost all serious men, and because our old Protestantism has not been able to lay hold of them. It is true that within the bosom of the latter a religious awakening has been produced, which has been blessed in many places; but this is peculiar to itself, and has not extended to them that are without: for truly I cannot reckon upon the few hundreds of persons who have been led to confess the name of Jesus, and have left the bosom of Rome to enter into the Protestant Church. What is that number if we compare it with the thirty millions of nominal papists who inhabit France; and of whom perhaps more than twenty-five millions neither believe in the pope nor his religion?

"But does it follow then, that because the two forms with which Christianity is now clothed in France have produced nothing in these latter times, there is therefore nothing to be done for the good of men's souls? I think it does not. On the contrary, I believe that 'a great door is opened;' but that it is only available for a Church truly Catholic; that is to say, a Church modelled upon that of the first ages, having its hierarchy and its sacred services, in which the people should take a real and active part, and in which the sermon should not be the principal thing, but rather the prayers, the singing, and, above all, the reading of God's Holy Word. Doubtless, there would be some hard struggles to be sustained by those who would strive to bring back men's minds to this ancient purity of the Church. But if they will put firmly their hand to the plough without looking back, God, I am firmly convinced, will declare himself speedily for them.

"When our Protestant Churches in France were almost ready to be extinguished, the Lord willed that faith and life should come to us from England. It was your independent who sent missionaries to cry to us, 'Awake, thou that sleepest, and Christ shall give thee light.' Now, it belongs to your episcopal Church to complete the work. Life has returned to the Protestant Church: but in order that she may communicate it to them that are without, and overthrow the Roman Colossus and elevate into its place the true Catholic Church, you must come to the aid of our young Protestant Clergy, by giving them ordination, and by enabling them to give more life to their worship; and, on the other hand, you must stretch out a helping hand to those Romanist priests (and they are more numerous than is generally thought) who desire to quit Rome, and to enter into the true Catholic Church.

"You will understand Sir, that I am here only giving your sketch of my ideas, leaving it to you to develop them as you think best."

The Hon. and Rev. G. Spencer.—At a dinner given to this gentleman by the Roman Catholics of West Bromwich, he gave the following account of his visit to France. It will serve to show what use the papist party in this country and in France make of such persons:—

"What I have witnessed in France, and am now about to state to you, has exceedingly delighted me, as calculated, I trust, to animate all the Catholics of England to hope for her conversion, and by that hope to be excited with firm persevering zeal to work for it. You remember, my friends, that it was under gloomy circumstances I had to leave you. I felt as one exiled when I was sent away to recruit my health: but I determined to acquiesce in the will of God, and it always answers well to trust ourselves in his hands. I have gained more for you, I trust, by my absence, than by all I could have done among you. I had no idea when I went to Paris, in what the two weeks of my stay there were to be employed. This was determined by the conversation which took place when, on the first evening of my arrival, I was presented to the archbishop. While I was with him the conversation turned, as might be expected, on the state of religion in England; and I said, what I always say, that the prayers of the faithful are what we mainly must depend on for success, and that it would be of immense benefit if the Catholics of France would unite in praying for us. I spoke thus, not to the archbishop himself, but to the grand vicar, and without an idea of making a distinct proposal for such an association as was afterwards established. The grand vicar, however, at once made me speak to the archbishop, who took up the suggestion with an earnestness and charity which surprised and delighted me. He was to receive, two days after, an address from sixty or eighty of the clergy of Paris. He appointed me to meet him in their presence. After the affair for which they were assembled was concluded, he presented me to them, explaining the cause of my appearance, and concluded by himself requesting that they should undertake to pray for the conversion of England, and that Thursday of every week should be the day peculiarly assigned for this object. (Cheers.) They all accepted the proposal with great alacrity. A few days after I was told by a priest whom I met, that though not present at this meeting he had heard of the archbishop's wish, and that he and twelve other priests who lived together in community in one house had all offered mass for this intention on the first Thursday which had occurred. You may conceive how this encouraged me in my proceedings. I accordingly obtained from the grand vicar a circular of introduction to the superiors of religious houses in Paris, and visited about twenty of the principal. They all undertook to make the conversion of England the special object of their prayers every Thursday (cheers), and to recommend the same practice to all their sister houses through France. The general of the order of the Lazarists, the provincial of the Jesuits, undertook to recommend it to all their brethren. (Much applause.) I met, besides, several other distinguished prelates in Paris, who all hailed with extreme joy the thought of England returning to the faith, and promised to recommend the holy work of praying for her to all their subjects. I was every where assured that I should have all France united with us. (Hear.) Do you think, said they, we can refuse our prayers for that country which once was the island of saints; and we trust will be so soon again! You would be delighted to hear me read to you the letters which I have received from several quarters, in answer to my subsequent applications. I cannot refuse myself the pleasure of giving you an extract from that written to me by the Bishop of Amiens: 'Sir,' he says, 'I associate myself with my whole heart to your holy enterprise. Bossuet used every day to implore of God that this island of saints, this highly-gifted England, might return to the faith of St. Augustine, her first apostle. So many holy martyrs as that church has produced, so many holy and noble families as have in that country kept the faith at the cost of their political existence—so many holy French priests as have there found such generous hospitality—the prayers of former days, the prayers now recently inspired by religious gratitude, all make me believe that this great and noble nation will once more find the road in which her fathers walked. I will embrace every occasion to recommend to my clergy as good a work, in which I feel myself peculiarly interested; and I thank you, sir, for having given me this good opportunity of expressing my sentiments upon it.' To show you further the interest which this object has excited in France, I have to tell you that the Archbishop of Paris, and the rest who had supported it, saw fit that 6000 copies of this discourse, which I submitted to their judgment, should be printed and distributed through France, so that every bishop and priest of the kingdom should be thus distinctly solicited to enter the association; and the work will not be confined to France. I saw enough while there to convince me that ere long all the nations of Europe will be joined in one great society of prayer for the conversion of this kingdom.' (Applause.)

On Christmas Day, at the house of his mother, in Gloucester, aged 38, the Rev. Robert Paxton Sikes, formerly one of the clerks of New College, and late curate of Claines, Worcestershire.

The most Reverend the Archbishop of Cashel, Dr. Richard Laurence, died in Merriam-street, Dublin, on Friday night, December 28th, at the close of his 79th year. On the day of his death he remained up stairs, but was not confined to his bed, and on that day, for the first time in a life nearly extended to fourscore years, he had the attendance and advice of a physician. Dr. Richard Laurence, at the age of 18, was matriculated in this university, July 14, 1778, as an exhibitor of Corpus Christi College, his brother, Dr. French Laurence, being at that time a scholar on the county of Somerset. He took the degree of B.A. April 10, 1782, and of M.A. July 9, 1785. Having left college upon taking his bachelor's degree, he married, became curate of Coleshill, and engaged in tuition. His literary labours were here extended far beyond the instruction of pupils; for he contributed articles of criticism to the Monthly Review, and with still greater distinctness of purpose and employment, undertook the historical department of the Annual Register. On the 27th of June, 1794, he took the degrees of B.A. and D.C.L. Upon his brother's appointment to the regius professorship of civil law, in 1796, he was made deputy professor, and as such permanently resided in Oxford, where, with his wonted zeal and application, he soon obtained an exact knowledge of the laws and constitution of the university, which he often evinced upon statutory questions and convocational practice. His addresses, on presenting candidates for honorary degrees, were distinguished by the strength and terseness of his Latinity. In 1814 he was made regius professor of Hebrew, and canon of Christ Church. The patronage which helped him to this notice of the crown was that of the late Lord Stowell, then Sir William Scott, to whom, in the year 1814, he dedicated his remarks "upon the Systematical Classification of the MSS. adopted by Griesbach." But though he was thus indebted to Sir William's favourable opinion, the professorship was actually given by the Earl of Liverpool. By the same careful observer of clerical qualifications for the high offices in the Church, he was recommended for the archiepiscopal chair, as Archbishop of Cashel, in 1822, upon the death of Dr. Broderick. We have now traced the course of academic and theological duties which was pursued by the late prelate, and which ultimately conducted the curate of Coleshill to the see of Cashel. A more resolute devotion to study, a more undeviating course of benevolence and integrity, a more amiable picture of social and domestic virtues, a more gentle, kind, condescending deportment, were never entered upon the records of private or public life; and if to these were added the sincerity and soundness of his Christian faith in the promises of the Gospel, of his Christian obedience to its precepts, of his humility before God and his good-will to man, there would then be formed a true representation of the life and character of the late archbishop.—From the Oxford Herald.

On Saturday, Dec. 29, at his son's house, Batchcote Rectory, Worcestershire, in his 81st year, the very Rev. Whittington Landon, D.D., rector of Croft, Herefordshire, Dean of Exeter, and Provost of Worcester College. Dr. Landon was the son of the Rev. J. Landon, of Tedstone, Herefordshire, educated at Bromsgrove, from whence he was elected to a scholarship of Worcester College, on the foundation of Sir Thomas Cookes, being matriculated a member of that society October 13th, 1775. He became B.A. June 2nd, 1779; M.A. May 2d, 1782; and having succeeded to a fellowship, was early appointed to a tutorship in the college. Here he became tutor to a member of the Bentinck family, which introduced him to the notice of the Duke of Portland, then Chancellor of the university, who, on the decease of Dr. Sheffield, nominated him to the provostship, and shortly after gave him a stall in the church of Norwich; this he afterwards resigned on being appointed to the deanery of Exeter in 1813, and in 1821 he obtained in addition a prebend in the church of Salisbury. Dr. Landon proceeded B.D. March 27, 1790; D.D. July 3, 1795. He held the office of keeper of the archives from 1796 to 1815, and was vice-chancellor from 1802 to 1806. He had been a delegate of accounts for many years, and retained that office till his death. Doctor Landon printed one sermon, on 1 Cor. iii. 11, preached at St. Paul's in 1812, at the meeting of the charity schools of London and Westminster, which, we believe, was his only publication. He leaves a widow, and three sons, all of whom were educated at Worcester College.

Aged 75, the Rev. Henry Wakeman, 48 years rector of Ingham and Timworth, Suffolk; patron, R. B. de Beauvoir, Esq.

In his 69th year, the Rev. Dawson Warren, M.A., of Trinity College, 43 years vicar of Edmonton, Middlesex; patrons, the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's. Mr. Warren was the son of James Warren, Esq., of London, and matriculated of Trinity College, Nov. 16, 1790, at the age of 19. He took his degree of B.A., June 26, 1794; M.A., Nov. 7, 1799.

A few days since, after a short illness, to the great regret of his family and friends, the Rev. Joseph Algar, M.A., of Wadham College, perpetual curate of Christ Church, Frome; patron, the Vicar of Frome; and rector of Orchardleigh, Somersetshire; patron, Sir T. S. M. Champnes, Bart. Mr. Algar was the son of Joseph Algar, Esq., of Canterbury; matriculated of Wadham College, March 26, 1806, aged 18; proceeded B.A. Nov. 23, 1809; and M.A. June 15, 1815.

At Shankling, Isle of Wight, the Rev. Dyke Molesworth Mitchell, 26 years rector of Quinton, Northamptonshire; patron, the Lord Chancellor.

At Blickling, Norfolk, the Rev. William Henry Holworthy, of Clare Hall, Cambridge, rector of Blickling with Epingham, Norfolk; patron, the Dowager Lady Suffield.

At his house, at Kidlington, Oxfordshire, aged 64, the Rev. John Hyde, M.A. of St. Alban Hall, nearly 40 years rector of St. Martin's, Oxford, one of the city Lecturers, resident curate of Witney 26 years, perpetual curate of Hailey, Oxfordshire, vicar of Hellingdon, Northamptonshire, and many years a magistrate for this county. Mr. Hyde was a native of Oxford, matriculated of Balliol College, Nov. 17th, 1791, then in his 17th year; proceeded B.A. June 5th, 1795; M.A. July 5th, 1803. In 1800 he was presented to the rectory of St. Martin's, by the Lord Chancellor; and to the perpetual curacy of Hailey, in 1810, by the then rector of Witney. In 1832 he replaced his name on the books of the University, as a member of St. Alban Hall. He died on the very day on which he completed his 64th year.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

CHAPEL PROPOSED TO BE BUILT IN THE PARISH OF HOLBEACH, LINCOLNSHIRE.

THE COMMITTEE appointed for effecting the above design, in soliciting the Public in aid of it, think that its necessity and utility will be apparent from the following statement of facts:—

The parish of Holbeach is twenty-two miles in length, and containing about four thousand inhabitants, some of whom live at the distance of twelve miles from the parish church, and many of them at an inconvenient distance from any other church or chapel belonging to the national Establishment: this circumstance, and the badness of the roads, make it often next to impossible for them to attend the public Worship of God, according to the rites of the Church of England, which has long been to them a subject of great regret. It is with joy and gratitude, therefore, that they heard of the recent munificence of their Diocesan, who has given 800*l.* towards building and endowing a chapel for their benefit, in a situation which will render it beneficial to a part also of the adjacent parishes of Fleet, "Gedney," and Whaplode, whose houses are equally remote from their respective churches and chapels. But as for the building and endowment of the chapel, a much larger sum will be required, the Committee earnestly solicit the liberal contributions of the Public, as well as of those who, from local and other causes, are more particularly interested in the spiritual and moral welfare of the above-named parishes, in confident hope that they will generously forward a design so well calculated to promote the glory of God and the best interest of men.

Contributions will be received by Messrs. Gurney and Co., Holbeach; Messrs. Barclay and Co., Lombard-street, London; and by them through any of the Country Bankers.

For the Committee,
J. MORTON, Secretary.

ADVOWSON AND NEXT PRESENTATION. VALE OF BELVOIR.

MR. J. W. BUCHANAN, Solicitor, Nuneaton, Warwickshire, will receive applications, (if by letter, post paid) for the purchase by private contract of the Advowson and next presentation of the Vicarage of Long Clawson, in the Vale of Belvoir, near Melton Mowray, in the county of Leicester, subject to the life of the present incumbent, aged 78.

The annual value is £200 arising from Glebe Land.

A GRADUATE, age 23, is anxious to reside with a Beneficed Clergyman, for a Term not less than Three Months. One who devotes the greater portion of his time to the instruction of his flock, and who would take an interest in preparing a young Man for Orders, being what is sought for. It is requested that none will apply who are in the habit of taking pupils. Terms liberal, and the highest reference given. It would be desirable but not necessary that a title could be given when duly prepared.

Address in confidence, post paid, H. B. 14, Southampton-street, Strand. The distance from London no objection, provided the situation is agreeable.

PROPOSED NEW CHURCH, IN THE PARISH OF ST. ANDREW, PLYMOUTH.

THE TOWNS of Plymouth, Devonport, and Stonehouse comprise a population of 80,000 persons, for whom, in connection with the Established Church, there is not found accommodation for more than 12,500, thereby leaving 67,500 persons wholly unprovided with sittings in the Establishment. Of this number, the Parish of St. Andrew, Plymouth, with a population of 20,000, has sittings for only 4300, and of these 800 are in the Mariners' Church and the Ilce Chapel, which, being only licensed rooms, may at any time be closed.

The Exeter Diocesan Church Building Society, in a recently published Report, advertising to the increasing want of Church Accommodation, adds, "the population of Plymouth and its neighbourhood has been for several years growing at the rate of 1000 yearly."

Under these very urgent circumstances, the Vicar of the Parish has resolved (in humble dependence upon the Lord's blessing) upon endeavouring to obtain contributions sufficient to enable him to erect, with the least possible delay, a new Church capable of seating not fewer than 1050 persons, the estimated cost of which (including 1000*l.* for an endowment) is about 5000*l.*

Donations will be thankfully received by the Rev. John Hatchard, Vicar of St. Andrew; Mr. Nettleton, Bookseller, Whimble-street; Mr. Thomas, Cornwall-street; at the Naval and Joint Stock Banks in Plymouth; by the Rev. R. H. Scott, and W. Lee, Esq., Savings' Bank, Exeter; and the Rev. Samuel Rowe, Crediton. By Messrs. Hatchard, and Son, Booksellers, Piccadilly; Messrs. Seeley, Fleet-street; and Mr. Nisbet, Berners-street, London.

The following sums have been received, and are hereby gratefully acknowledged.

TO INCUMBENTS OF LIVINGS.

THE REV. JOHN HODGSON, (Vicar of St. Peter's, in the Isle of Thanet, and Secretary of the Clergy Mutual Assurance Society), having been for some time engaged in investigating the course of mortality amongst the one particular class of society consisting of "the Clergy of the Established Church," would feel himself greatly obliged (and the profession may be very much benefited by it hereafter) if the Clergyman in every parish would assist him in the undertaking, which thus would be made easy, by procuring for him and sending to him in plain writing the following particulars sealed up.

1. The names of all and each of the Incumbents of his parish (specifying the parish and diocese), on and since the 1st of January, 1779; and, if possible, the dates, or thereabouts, of their becoming Incumbents of the same.

2. The date of their ceasing to be the Incumbents, and whether by death, or otherwise.

3. If by death, the date of their death, and their age at death; and whether the number of the years of the age specified be years completed, or to be completed next birth-day; if by removal, where removed to.

4. The authority for such age, whether from tablet, stone, register, or other source; specifying whence it is, and in what church found.

5. The account and particulars of 3 and 4, where the Incumbent of another parish may have been buried, and registered, or otherwise testified to, in his parish since the year 1778; specifying of what parish Incumbent, and in what county.

6. The account where an Incumbent was buried, if not in his own parish.

7. The date of the birth of the present Incumbent, in the year, and month, and day of it. It may appear that too much is asked under this head; but the information upon this one point alone would be very valuable in the mass; and the age of any individual would be kept strictly private.

The object of the investigation is to ascertain whether life amongst the Clergy be of more than common duration, and to find the lowest possible rates at which Clergymen may be invited to make Assurances upon Life. The Lord Bishop of London was pleased at the late visitation of his Diocese to request his Clergy to assist Mr. Hodgson in his inquiries.

If the Incumbents of Parishes throughout England and Wales will have the kindness to send in all the information which they can collect, Mr. Hodgson has no doubt that he shall be able by such means, aided through other channels, such as the University and Public School Registers, to perfect a very useful work in a most satisfactory manner. Mr. Hodgson most sincerely thanks the Clergymen who have already furnished him with the Statements required, and requests an early return from those who have not yet been able to send them. As there are many hundred letters to consult and to enter up, the very "plainest writing" is desirable.

Observe.—It is earnestly requested that statements as above, if procured, may be left, at any convenient opportunity, by means of a friend visiting London, or so as to cause no expense, for Mr. Hodgson, at Messrs. Rivingtons; or Mr. Parker's, West Strand; or at Mr. Burder's, 27, Parliament Street; or at No. 40, Parliament Street.

UPPER CANADA CLERGY SOCIETY.

IN the year 1834, the attention of a few individuals was directed to the want of religious instruction in Upper Canada, become the more urgent by the withdrawal from the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel of the Parliamentary Grant of £15,000 per Annum towards the support of the Clergy in the North American Colonies. Under the conviction that no time should be lost in the endeavour to relieve the spiritual destitution of the Colony, placed in circumstances of increasing difficulty from the yearly increase of Immigrants from the mother country; they, with the sanction of the late Bishop of Quebec, determined to send out a Clergyman under his Lordship's direction. The Rev. H. O'Neil having been selected, commenced his labours in Upper Canada as a Travelling Missionary in the month of February, 1836, and finding from the statements contained in his Journals, and also from other sources of undoubted information, that the reports received had by no means been exaggerated, they without further delay sent out the Rev. F. Oiler, who in June of the same year was located by the Bishop of Montreal as a Resident Clergyman in the Townships of Tecumseth and West Guillembury.

In the Spring of the present year, the Rev. F. A. O'Meara arrived in Canada, and is now a Travelling Missionary appointed by the Bishop to the Home District. The Rev. C. B. Hill, and the Rev. W. Morse, are on their way to the same Province; the former as a Travelling Missionary, the latter to be a resident Pastor at Paris in the Gore District; it is also highly probable that another Clergyman will join his brethren in the Spring. Thus in a brief space of time, five Missionaries have been sent out; but what are these among so many? Upper Canada is about equal in extent to England and Wales, containing a population of almost half a million at present, which is continually augmenting by new settlers arriving from various parts of the United Kingdom, with not more than Sixty Clergymen to instruct them in the knowledge of salvation. The Journals which are furnished Quarterly by the Missionaries are of a highly interesting character; and although it is lamentable to observe the deplorable state of the Province, as regards the eternal interests of men, still it is highly gratifying to perceive the anxiety of the people to hear the preaching of the Gospel, and their readiness to contribute according to their ability towards the maintenance of a Clergyman.

It is not doubted that were the Christian public in this country to be made more fully acquainted with the spiritual necessities of Upper Canada, they would come forward in the present eventful crisis of that loyal Province to contribute of the means with which God has blessed them on behalf of their less favoured brethren, not forgetting to offer up their prayers that the Lord will send more labourers into this neglected portion of his vineyard.

N.B. The Upper Canada Clergy Society was formed May 13th, 1837, under the immediate sanction of the late much lamented Bishop of Quebec, and the present Bishop of Montreal; and it has the unqualified approbation of the Lieut.-Governor, Sir George Arthur, who has been a liberal subscriber.

Subscriptions and Donations are received at Messrs. Herries, Farquhar, & Co., 16, St. James's Street; at Messrs. Ladbroke's & Co., Bank Buildings; and at the Society's Office, 13, Exeter Hall.

A CLERGYMAN holding a Benefice of the value of £260 per Annum (derived from 148 Acres of capital Land, and capable of being made £300), in a pretty part of Lincolnshire, and an excellent Neighbourhood, wishes to exchange the same for a Benefice with a convenient House, and to accept of one of £200 per Annum, thus sacrificing over and above £200 for a House. Excellent Lodgings in the Village, through which the Mail and two London Coaches pass twice in the day.

Address, post paid, Rev. A. Z., Mr. Mortlock's, Bookseller, Stamford, Lincolnshire.

NEW PERIODICAL.

On the 1st of March will be published, by JAMES BURNS, 17, PORTMAN STREET, PORTMAN SQUARE,

Part I. Price Sixpence, of

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH;

OR,

SELECTIONS FROM THE WRITINGS OF THE DIVINES, AND OTHER MEMBERS OF THE CHURCH IN ALL AGES, ON SUBJECTS RELATING TO DOCTRINE, RELIGIOUS PRACTICE, AND ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY.

PROSPECTUS.

At a period like the present, when many are standing in the ways, and asking for the old paths, where is the good way, that they may walk therein; and others are defending as ancient, systems which are really of modern invention, and not of divine but of human tradition, it is presumed that a publication will be favourably received which has for its object to present to the Public, under the cheapest form, those Treatises which have in times past issued from the pen of the great Divines who were in their day the pillars of the Church, and will be in all ages its brightest ornaments.

Such is the object of the Magazine entitled THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH. From all existing Magazines it will differ, since in it the dead only will speak; and if other Magazines have an advantage over this, by being able to supply from the pens of living authors an answer to the new objections which may be urged against old truths,—this will have the advantage over them by bringing to bear on controversies the more calm decision of those who wrote under circumstances differing from our own, and whose opinions will be entitled to greater weight since they were unbiassed by modern prejudices.

Another advantage will be, that by THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH the Public at large will become better acquainted than it at present is with the standard works of English theology, which have hitherto been chiefly confined to the libraries of professed divines, or of those more highly educated persons who regard such writings as an important branch of the literature of the country.

It is unnecessary to remark on the usefulness of such a publication to those of the clergy who, living in rural districts, are unable to avail themselves of any public library. Our Magazine will be a library in itself.

With reference to the plan of the publication, it will be divided into five sections.

Sect. I. will consist of Apophthegms, Aphorisms, and Miscellaneous Articles.

Sect. II. will contain a Treatise, Essay, or Sermon, on some point of Doctrine or Practice, from the pen of a standard author.

Sect. III. will be devoted to Biography or Church History.

Sect. IV. will contain Notices relating to the usages of the Church, and to the elucidation of the Ritual, Liturgy, or Ordinal.

Sect. V. will be composed of Selections from Devotional Writings.

Notes and Illustrations will be added, where they seem to be required for the elucidation of an author's meaning.

READER.

We may conclude with the words of Bishop Jeremy Taylor: "If these little sparks of holy fire which we shall heap together do not give life to your prepared and already kindled spirit, yet they will sometimes help to entertain a thought, to actuate a passion, to employ and hallow a fancy."

Correspondents are requested, when forwarding Treatises, &c., for publication, to send them (post-paid) to the Editor, 17, Portman Street, Portman Square.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH will appear in Monthly Parts, price SIXPENCE, closely yet distinctly printed in double columns, on a large-sized page. Part I. will be published with the Magazines on the 1st of March, 1839, and may be procured through any Bookseller. It will be stitched in a neat wrapper, which, it is presumed, will be found an eligible vehicle for advertisements. These will be received up to the 24th of February, and inserted at moderate prices.

The Publisher would be glad in the mean time to supply Prospectuses to those who may be disposed to aid the circulation of the Work; and as it is only by a very extensive sale that the expenses of so cheap a publication can be met, he would feel much obliged by the kind assistance of the Clergy in making it known in their respective neighbourhoods. Prospectuses can be had either by addressing a note (post-paid) to the Publisher; or, by order, through any Bookseller in Town or Country.

Orders for the First Part should be given to Country Booksellers by the 15th of February.

Application for Assurances or farther information, to be made to the Rev. J. HODGSON, or to JOHN BURDER, Esq., Secretaries to the Society, at the Office, 40, Parliament Street; or to any Local Agent in the Country.

•• Prospectuses and Books of Rules may be had at the Office. Attendance from eleven to four o'clock, daily.

"This Society is strictly confined to the Clergy and their families, and is distinguished from other institutions by the title of 'THE CLERGY MUTUAL ASSURANCE SOCIETY.'" Particular attention is requested in the addressing letters to "No. 40, Parliament Street."

This SOCIETY was formed for the purpose of drawing the attention of the Clergy, 1st, To the important advantages to be derived from the system of Assurance in general; 2dly, To give them an opportunity of making Assurances not offered or admitted in other public Assurance Offices; and 3dly, To keep down the Rates of Assurance at the lowest possible sum, by an inexpensive management, and a division every FIVE YEARS of the TOTAL AMOUNT of Profits (in which no Proprietors share) amongst the assured Members who may be entitled to them. Assurances may be made for a sufficient sum to be paid during sickness, infirmity, and old age, to meet the unavoidable expense of a Curate; for capital Sums or Annuities, to provide for the education of Children at School, or College, and for equipping them out in the world; for the maintenance of Orphan Children during Infancy, from the day of the Death of the Father, &c. &c. &c.

The terms, conditions, and advantages, of these Assurances, and the Tables of Rates payable for them, are fully set forth in the Prospectus. For a proof of the prosperous state of the SOCIETY, the Clergy are referred to a Report of its Proceedings, which was read at a General Meeting of Members on the 29th of June, the Lord Bishop of London in the chair; and also to a Resolution which was moved by the Lord Bishop of Winchester upon the occasion, inserted in No. I. of the Ecclesiastical Gazette. One-fourth part of the total amount of premiums paid for Life Assurances in and during the first seven years of this Institution, was returned back again as a bonus to the assured Members, and appropriated to a reduction of their future premiums, thus making the Rates of Premium which had been paid for the same during such seven years, 25 per cent. less than in the following Table. For instance, a Clergyman at the age of 50, having assured £1000 upon his Life in the year 1832, and having paid for the same up to 1836, five Annual Premiums of £43. 13s. 4d. each, received a bonus in cash of about £50 to be appropriated to the reduction of his future premium, so that in fact he paid only £33. 13s. 4d. or thereabouts, during the five first years of his assurance, or £3. 7s. 4d. for each sum of £100 assured, instead of £4. 7s. 4d. Any sum not less than £50, and not exceeding £2500, may be assured upon Life by any Clergyman, or the Father, Mother, Wife, Widow, Son, Daughter, Brother, Sister, of any Clergyman, upon terms as below, and the period appointed for the next bonus is 31st May, 1841. No charge for Stamps.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE;

OR MONTHLY

REGISTER OF

OF ITS RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES AND INSTITUTIONS.

No. 8.

LONDON, TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1839.

No. 8.

The ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE is published on the second Tuesday in every month, and may be obtained at sixpence per number, or six shillings per annum, by ordering it of any Newsmen in the Kingdom. It is also sent regularly every month, free of all charge, to the Resident Parochial Clergyman of every Parish throughout England and Wales.

WE again find it necessary to enlarge our space to twenty-four pages: and we hope to be able in the following numbers to make that the ordinary size of the ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE. We shall at least be ready to enlarge and improve it to the full extent of the encouragement afforded us. With the view of increasing its utility, two propositions have been made to us, which we are sorry to say are at present impracticable.

It has been proposed to us, first, to extend our gratuitous circulation to the Clergy in Ireland; and, again, in the same manner, to the Clergy, acting as missionaries in the Colonies and in Foreign countries. But when we inform our Correspondents, that notwithstanding the number of clergymen, who have so liberally subscribed for this GAZETTE, we have still to furnish more than nine thousand copies gratuitously every Month, they will easily see that it is impossible to comply with their requests. With regard to missionaries abroad, a clergyman of Nottingham suggests that their friends at home would do a service in sending them copies, or subscribing for them, and sets the example of doing so himself. We are happy to inform him that the ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE, being stamped, will go to all parts of the world, in the same manner as a newspaper.

Some of our Correspondents have expressed their disapprobation, strongly but very properly we admit, of an advertisement which appeared in our last number, tending to a desecration of the Sabbath. We beg to assure them, that we are entirely opposed to the system of Sunday publications, and should not have admitted the advertisement in question. It was accidentally inserted without being seen either by the Editor or the Publisher. In future no such advertisements will be admitted.

ECCLESIASTICAL NOTICES.

The Lord Bishop of Ripon has announced his intention of receiving no Candidate for Holy Orders in future who has not given six months' notice to his secretary to that effect.

The Bishop of Lincoln's next ordination will be held in the cathedral church of Lincoln, on Sunday, the 24th of February.

The Bishop of Salisbury will hold a general ordination at Salisbury, on Trinity Sunday, May 26th. Candidates for Deacons' Orders are required to be at the Palace, Salisbury, in order to a preliminary examination, on Thursday, March the 21st, having previously obtained the Bishop's approval of their respective titles for orders. It is not necessary for them at this time to bring with them any papers.—Candidates for Priests' Orders are required, as are also those for Deacons' Orders, to send their papers to the Bishop's secretary, J. Burder, Esq., 27, Parliament-street, London, at least three weeks before the day of ordination.

Correspondents are particularly requested not to mark any articles in provincial papers sent to us, as a charge of postage is incurred thereby.

In answer to many inquiries, Subscribers are respectfully informed that the easiest mode of remitting the Subscription of Six Shillings per Annum for this Work, is by sending a Post Office Order for the amount to the Publisher, Mr. CHARLES COX, 14, Southampton Street, Strand (corner of Tavistock Street).

SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE.

The Secretary stated, that a communication had been made to the Bishop of London by Colonel Campbell, British Consul in Egypt, with regard to a new church which it is in contemplation to erect in Alexandria, and that his lordship had recommended the subject to the favourable notice of the SOCIETY, with a view to a grant being made. It appeared from this statement, that the British residents at Alexandria are desirous of establishing a suitable place for Divine worship, and of providing a clergyman to minister among them; that subscriptions are being collected for this purpose; and that in addition to the contributions made by residents on the spot, some assistance will probably be obtained from persons travelling by way of Egypt to India.

The Board agreed to grant one hundred pounds towards building a church at Alexandria.

A letter was read from the Rev. R. Monro, requesting a grant of books and tracts from the SOCIETY's catalogue, for the use of Miss Holliday, who has been appointed to superintend the education of the ladies and children of the family of the Pasha of Egypt, and who is desirous of translating such of the works as appear suitable for the purposes of instruction.

The Board granted the books required.

A letter was read from the Lord Bishop of Montreal to the Secretary, of which the following are extracts:—

"Steamer St. George, River St. Lawrence, 14th Nov. 1838.

"In my letter of the 14th June last, I stated my intention of communicating with you respecting the best appropriation of the truly munificent and most acceptable grant of the SOCIETY for the spiritual wants of Upper Canada, after I should have completed my visitation in that province. Having now accomplished this duty, and being on my way down to Quebec, I beg to say that, after consultation with the two Archdeacons, and the personal opportunities which I have enjoyed of knowing the wants of the province, I have come to the conclusion of recommending to the SOCIETY the distribution of their bounty, of which a statement here follows:—

"It is calculated that 2000*l.* will produce, with the average premium upon the bill, about 2500*l.* currency, of which I would propose to allot,—

1. For engaging the services of Clergymen for a period of two or three years for some portion of the destitute settlements.....	£1000 Cur.
2. For aiding in the completion of Churches.....	500
3. For aiding in the completion of Parsonage Houses.....	500
4. For Sunday School and other Books for distribution, from the Catalogue of the SOCIETY	500

"Under No. 1, I would propose to comprehend a very small grant for assisting one or two very zealous young men of straitened means, who are preparing for the ministry, and in the mean time are acting as catechists and lay-readers.

"This arrangement supposes that the SOCIETY will place the 2000*l.* at my disposal, without any deduction.

"The details which I shall be able to render of this expenditure, if authorized, will amply satisfy the SOCIETY that the supplies of their bounty are like a refreshing source opened in a thirsty land. I am about also preparing a report for the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, which will exhibit a strong picture of spiritual destitution among the inhabitants of Upper Canada."

The Secretary informed the Meeting that the Standing Committee, at whose disposal the grant was placed by the Board in July, 1837, approved of the arrangement suggested by his lordship.

A memorial from Mr. Thomas Knox, Secretary to the Committee of subscribers to a new Scottish Episcopal Chapel at Stornoway, Island of Lewis, Ross-shire, was laid before the Meeting. By this it appeared that many of the inhabitants, not understanding the Gaelic language, in which language alone public worship is celebrated in the only place of worship in Stornoway, have resolved to build a chapel, where the service will be in English. Much benefit is expected to arise from hence, not only to the residents, but to crews of vessels which in the winter are occasionally wind-bound at this place. A subscription has been commenced, but the people are stated to be very poor, and aid is requested from the SOCIETY.

The Secretary read an application from the Rev. W. C. Maclaurin, Minister of the chapel at Elgin, in behalf of a new chapel at Forres. Mr. Maclaurin states that there is no Episcopal chapel between Elgin and Inverness, a distance of forty miles, and that at the desire of the Episcopalians at Forres, twelve miles from his residence, he has, after his own afternoon duty, frequently gone thither to afford them an evening service. At the suggestion of Bishop Low, it is now proposed to build a chapel at Forres. The Bishop has contributed handsomely, and requests a grant from the SOCIETY.

The Rev. James Walker applied for assistance towards building a new chapel at Huntly, of the Episcopal congregation of which he has had the charge for fifty-five years. After suffering many hardships and inconveniences, in consequence of the penal statutes of 1746 and 1748, and meeting for public worship in very humble places, this congregation, in 1772, built a small chapel in the form of an obscure dwelling-house,—the only form in which they could attempt it. This house is now in an extremely dilapidated state; and rather than lay out their small means upon repairs, they are anxious to build a new chapel on a moderate scale, towards which they pray a portion of the SOCIETY's bounty.

A letter was read from the Right Rev. Bishop Low, thanking the SOCIETY for its grant of 100*l.* towards the chapel at Inverness, and adding, that should the Board see fit to grant an additional sum of 100*l.* among the three chapels now contemplated in his diocese, namely, at Stornoway, Forres, and Huntly, he would take care to apportion the amount to the several necessities of the congregations. The Board agreed to place 150*l.* at the disposal of Bishop Low, for the purposes mentioned in his letter.

In every instance in which assistance has been granted by the Board in aid of the erection of new chapels in the Scottish Episcopal Church, the sanction and recommendation of the Diocesan have been obtained.

At this Meeting it was agreed to present a Bible and Common Prayer Books for the desks, and books for the communion-table, for the use of each of the three new churches at Mitton, Hurst Green, and Howgill, Yorkshire.

Two Common Prayer Books for the desks were granted for a chapel recently consecrated at Ivy Bridge, Devon.

A quarto Bible and Common Prayer Books were granted for the use of a room licensed by the Diocesan, for Divine service, at Longnor, near Leek.

Twenty-seven gratuitous grants of books were made for various purposes.

MONTHLY REPORT FOR FEBRUARY.

At the General Meeting held on Tuesday, the 5th of February, 1839, the Rev. Dr. Short in the Chair. A letter was read from Viscount Melbourne, First Lord of Her Majesty's Treasury, in reply to a communication to him from his Grace, the President of this SOCIETY. By this it appeared that Her Majesty had graciously consented to become the Patron of the SOCIETY.

This letter having been read, it was agreed unanimously,

"That this board entertains a lively sense of the distinguished honour graciously conferred by Her Majesty on the SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE; an Institution which has been actively engaged for one hundred and forty years in advancing the cause of the Christian Religion, on the principles of that pure and Apostolical branch of Christ's Church established in this kingdom; and which, encouraged by Her Majesty's patronage and favour, will steadily persevere in its pious endeavours to promote the glory of God, and the best interests of mankind."

Agreed unanimously.

"That this Board do humbly submit to Her Majesty, a copy of the SOCIETY's Annual Report for 1838, which contains an account of the proceedings of the SOCIETY during that year, both at home and abroad, especially in the colonies and dependencies of the British Empire."

Agreed unanimously.

"That his Grace the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, President of the SOCIETY, be respectfully requested to sign the above Resolutions, and to lay the same, together with the Annual Report, before Her Majesty."

The twelve under-mentioned Members of the SOCIETY were appointed by the Board to form the Committee of General Literature and Education for the year ensuing; namely, The Very Rev. the Dean of Chichester; John Leicester Adolphus, Esq.; Rev. R. W. Browne; Rev. A. M. Campbell; Rev. Thomas Dale; Rev. T. G. Hall; J. R. Hope, Esq.; J. H. Markland, Esq.; John Diston Powles, Esq.; Rev. Dr. Russell; Rev. William Short; Dr. Thomas Watson.

At this Meeting it was agreed, on the recommendation of the Standing Committee, that the Resolution of March 1, 1836, empowering the Committee to take measures for promoting the translation and circulation of the SOCIETY's publications in French should be extended to foreign languages generally.

A memorial from seventy-three clergymen in Somersetshire, of whom twenty-nine are Members of the SOCIETY, urging a further revision of the SOCIETY's Books and Tracts, was read to the Meeting.

Mr. Rochfort Clarke moved as follows:—

"That this Meeting, having taken into consideration a memorial from seventy-three Incumbents and Curates in the County of Somerset, in support of a Memorial from five Clergymen, in the County of Essex, in which certain of the SOCIETY's Tracts were reviewed, and stated, in some things, to contradict the Articles, Homilies, and Liturgy of the Church of England, do record their anxious wish, that every effort may be made to bring this SOCIETY's publications into perfect conformity with the Word of God."

This was seconded by Mr. Thomas Dornford.

The Dean of Chichester moved by way of amendment,

"That this memorial be referred to the Standing Committee."

This was seconded by the Rev. G. S. G. Stone-street, and carried.

A letter was read from the Lord Bishop of Nova Scotia, who is now in London. The following is an extract:—

"The progress of the present year reminds me of the bounty of the SOCIETY towards the church in my Diocese, and especially calls for the repetition of my gratitude for the benefit which has been derived from the valuable assistance of the SOCIETY in the education of Divinity scholars at King's College, in Nova Scotia. The good work, thus aided, is, by the blessing of God, going forward, with good ground for the best hope that the liberality of the Board will not be lost.

"Knowing that the SOCIETY is not weary in well doing, I venture to request a renewal of its gift in the present year, for the same important object, and earnestly implore a blessing upon all its labours of love."

The Board agreed to make a grant of 200*l.* towards this object for the present year.

The following letter was read from the Rev. C. J. Shreeve, of Guysborough, Nova Scotia, to the Secretary:—

"Guysborough, Dec. 22, 1838.

"Reverend Sir,

"Some time since I informed the Lord Bishop of Nova Scotia that there was a want of Bibles and Testaments in this extensive parish, and that many of the people were exceedingly poor; and was desirous to know from him whether there was any hope of my being supplied by the liberality of the SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE with about 20*l.* worth of its books. He directed me to write, and kindly offered to forward the letter to the SOCIETY. From that time to the present I delayed writing; but owing to the failure of the fisheries and crops for three several years in succession in this neighbourhood, the poverty of the people has increased, and I am now induced to call upon the SOCIETY for aid, in the hope that all those who are desirous of having a copy of the Word of God may be supplied. There are many in this parish who could not afford to pay the full value for a Bible; and unless the Scriptures are obtained for them at a low rate, they could not provide themselves with a copy. There are others, again, to whom it would be necessary to distribute copies gratuitously, or themselves and children would grow up in a measure ignorant of the Word of God. If the prospects of this parish were more favourable than they have been for these several years past, I would not be disposed to make a demand upon the kindness and liberality of the SOCIETY; but the reverse is the case.

"Upon my coming to this parish in 1832, upwards of 100*l.* were expended in repairing the church, the half of which sum remains unpaid at the present time, owing to the poverty of the people; and I really know not how we are to discharge the debt, unless we receive aid from those who, having the interest of the Church at heart, can afford to give.

"In a parish like this, where the inhabitants are scattered over a large tract of country, many individuals are prevented from attending the House of God on the Sabbath. I would rejoice, then, to feel assured, that every family, even the poorest, was supplied with the Scriptures, that, on the Lord's day, the bustle and noise of the world being forgotten, and its cares excluded, they who are kept from the House of God, might, at their own homes, read His Word, and learn His will. Hoping that the SOCIETY will kindly take into consideration the wants of this extensive parish (nearly fifty miles square), and furnish me with a supply of Bibles and Testaments for the benefit of the parishioners."

A recommendation of this object by the Bishop of Nova Scotia was also read.

The Board agreed to grant books to the amount of 30*l.*

A letter was read from Mr. C. J. La Trobe, requesting some assistance in behalf of the rising colony of Port Philip, Australia, to which he is on the point of proceeding, as Government Superintendent. He thinks there is a population of about 1500 in this township; 1100 of this amount being in its principal town of Melbourne. The Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts has expressed its willingness to aid in the appointment and maintenance of a clergyman there; and Mr. La Trobe is anxious that a church may be erected: he also wishes for a grant of books for the use of the schools.

The Board agreed to grant 100*l.* towards the erection of a church at Melbourne.

The sum of 25*l.* was granted for books.

The Rev. G. Tomlinson requested, in behalf of the Rev. H. D. Leeves, a grant of books towards forming a library at Athens, in connexion with the English Church, now erecting in that city.

Books to the amount of 20*l.* were granted for this purpose.

A letter was read from the Rev. W. F. Vance, Secretary and Chaplain to the Corporation of the Refuge for the Destitute, Hackney and Hoxton, requesting a grant of Bibles and Common Prayer Books for the use of the persons whom that Institution sends out as Apprentices, Emigrants, Servants, &c.

One hundred Bibles, and one hundred Common Prayer Books were granted.

It was agreed, on the motion of the Rev. R. Harvey, seconded by Mr. W. W. Hull,

"That there be laid on the table at the next Meeting, an account of all the grants which have ever been made by the SOCIETY towards the enlargement or erection of churches, specifying the amount of the grant, the time when the vote was made, and the place for which it was granted."

At this Meeting it was agreed to present a large Bible and Common Prayer Books for the desks, and books for the communion-table, for the use of a new church at Noss-Mayo, Revelatke, Devon, and for each of two new churches at Bolde, on the New Forest, Hants. A Bible and two Common Prayer Books for the reading desks were granted for a new chapel at Dover.

A quarto Bible and two Common Prayer Books were also granted for the use of a school-room licensed by the Lord Bishop of Ripon, for the purpose of Divine service, at Horton, Yorkshire; and for each of two chapels at Hertford Heath, Hertfordshire, and Brompton, Easeby, Yorkshire.

Nineteen gratuitous grants of books were made for various purposes.

One hundred and six new members were admitted.

SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL.

The following are extracts from a letter of the Bishop of Australia to the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, giving an account of his primary episcopal visitation of Van Diemen's Land.

"We had a favourable passage of six days to Port Philip, a settlement recently formed on the southern coast of New South Wales, which from its favourable position, and the good quality of the surrounding country, bids fair to become very speedily an opulent and important scene of business; and consequently to advance a correspondingly strong claim upon our attention to its religious interests. The town of Melbourne is established on a river named Yarra Yarra, (its native name), and contains already 600 resident inhabitants. They have no church as yet erected; but morning and evening prayers, with printed sermons, are read every Sunday in a small wooden building (used also as a schoolhouse,) by Mr. James Smith, a worthy and much respected settler. To him I must express my cordial acknowledgments for the labours which he has thus voluntarily and gratuitously undertaken for the benefit of his brethren of the Church of England, until a clergyman can be stationed among them. On Easter Sunday I officiated twice in the above-named building, and administered the Holy Sacrament of the Lord's Supper for the first time in that part of the territory. Although the weather was most unfavourable, torrents of rain falling during the day, the building was completely filled by the congregation, and the number of communicants exceeded twenty. From Captain Lonsdale, the police magistrate, I experienced great hospitality, and the readiest attention to promote the objects of my visit. An address signed by that gentleman, and by a very considerable proportion of the principal settlers, was presented to me, expressive of their confirmed and zealous attachment to the Church of England, and of their anxious desire to enjoy again the administration of its ordinances by a resident clergyman.

"In compliance with wishes thus expressed, and with the pledge which I gave them in replying to their address, it is my intention to station at Port Philip one of the clergymen, who through the exertions of the Society I have reason to hope may be even now on their passage to join me. It is, indeed, an ample and a promising field, and I cannot express the anxiety which I experience that it should be speedily occupied. Earnest and sincere as the attachment of the inhabitants in general to the Church of England is, it is exposed to a very dangerous trial by long delay in obtaining those objects of their desire, a Church and Clergyman. Hope deferred appears to subside into despair; and then, as I have daily occasion to notice, arises a disposition to argue, that rather than continue bereft of all outward ordinances of religion, it will be better to unite with some one or other of those religious bodies, who are not slow in proffering their ministrations wherever the Church is left long unoccupied by those whom the inhabitants would fain see in possession of it. During my residence at Port Philip, I concerted with the District Committee of the Societies which has been established there, the means of erecting a Church; and also consecrated a burial-ground. The subscriptions which had been already promised, and have been since increased, are of such an amount as justifies my expectation that this important object will be accomplished. I have engaged to contribute 100*l.* from the Societies' joint bounty, towards the Church and Parsonage; and I am persuaded that you will hear with satisfaction of the funds being thus appropriated to effect a gradual but firm establishment of all our most sacred ordinances and institutions along the hitherto desert shores of this great continent.

"On the 20th of April we sailed from Port Philip, and on the 23d, after a somewhat stormy passage, entered the River Derwent, and came to an anchor off Hobart Town. Five years having elapsed since I was last here, the increase and improvement of the town are very visible. I was welcomed by Mr. Archdeacon Hutchins and the Reverend Mr. Bedford, the senior chaplain, who came immediately on board; and as soon as we landed, I waited on the Lieutenant-Governor, Sir John Franklin, who gave me a cordial welcome. To his Excellency's great personal kindness I have ever since been most deeply indebted, and he has employed all the public resources at his command to enable me to visit with facility and security those parts of the island to which it was requisite my personal attention should be directed. In Hobart Town a large additional church (to be called St. George's) is just completed, and the consecration is appointed to take place on Saturday next. It has been built at the joint expense of the Government and inhabitants, and will hold about 800, exclusive of a gallery which will be erected to contain about 200 more. As the expenses have been heavy, and are not yet wholly defrayed, I shall devote a sum of money from the Society's funds to the use of the trustees.

"At Newtown, four miles from the capital, the male and female orphan schools have been completed since my previous visit, and between the two schoolhouses, a handsome church with a lofty square tower has been erected. The whole of the buildings being in a corresponding style, the effect is very pleasing and impressive.

"I have visited the schools, and examined the whole of the interior economy, and the acquirements of the children. The institution is one of the noblest monuments of the anxiety of Government for the public welfare; and especially, I am bound to add, it does honour to Sir George Arthur, under whose administration it was organized and completed, and whose personal anxiety and attention were most undeviatingly directed to the accomplishment of this object. The consecration of the Church is appointed to take place on Tuesday next, and at the same time a confirmation will be held, which I am led to expect will be attended by many of the orphan children.

"An account of the visitation from which I have just returned, and of the occurrences which took place at the various stations, may prove interesting to the Society, as illustrative of the general state of this community, and of the progress which is making in affording to the inhabitants the regular administrations of religious ordinances, with the means of education and of public worship.

"On Monday morning early I set off, and in the first instance arrived at New Norfolk. The Rev. W. Garrard is stationed here. The church is kept in a very creditable state of neatness and repair though but a plain brick building, of no architectural pretensions. It will hold a considerable congregation, and, I am happy to add, is very fully and regularly attended. The confirmation here was attended by nearly sixty young persons; and I have witnessed very few scenes which afforded me more sincere pleasure than that of such an orderly, numerous, and, I trust, devout attendance as was here presented to me. A very respectable congregation witnessed the ceremony, to which they exhibited the greatest attention, as well as to the charge which at this place (as at all others) I delivered to those who were confirmed. On the following day I proceeded through a wild country, and by a difficult road, to Hamilton, a township pleasantly situated, and much improved since my former visit, by the erection of a Church, a goodly edifice of stone, with a tower of fair proportions, and the interior well fitted up and provided. The consecration of this edifice, and of the burial-ground, took place with the usual solemnities. There was a full and respectable attendance of the inhabitants.

"From Launceston we proceeded to Longford, where I held a confirmation, which was the most numerously attended of any that had as yet occurred. This is one instance so satisfactory and which will afford so much pleasure to every friend of the Church of England, that I cannot forbear particularly referring to it. Eight years ago the Rev. R. R. Davis commenced his ministry here, being the first Clergyman ever stationed in this district. His congregation at first consisted of five, and for a time appeared stationary. A Church (still standing) was erected, which it was then thought would never be filled. But experience has so far proved the groundlessness of this persuasion, that the walls cannot contain those who are anxious to hear the word of God within them. The grain of mustard seed has literally grown into a spreading tree. The congregation has multiplied an hundred-fold, and preparations are now making for the immediate erection of a larger Church, towards which the inhabitants have contributed more than 1500*l*, and the Government grants an equal amount.

"From the preceding detail the Society will gather, that wherever Churches are provided, there is a strong and very gratifying disposition shown on the part of the inhabitants to attend them, and to partake of the holy ordinances which are there administered; nor can I doubt, that under such a dispensation of the means of grace a gradual but certain improvement of the moral and religious condition of the inhabitants is taking place. Many severe imputations are laid to the charge of the people of these colonies, proceeding, I think, too often from the information afforded by persons who look only upon the unfavourable features of our Society, or whose own habits and dispositions disqualify them from noticing or appreciating whatsoever there may be of an improving or redeeming character. My own opportunities of observation have been very numerous; and I do not hesitate to say that in either colony, surrounded, it cannot be dissembled, by much that is base and disgusting, there is nevertheless an extensive, and, in point of actual influence, a preponderating proportion of integrity and worth, from which, if suitably encouraged and supported now, there may hereafter spring forth a wise and understanding people to occupy this land. It is on behalf of these truly exemplary and deserving people that I am anxious to make every exertion, and I am happy to find that they are universally disposed to make an effort for themselves. Wheresoever I have gone the same anxiety has been manifested to possess the observances of religion, and the guidance of their proper ministers; and in every district the inhabitants are proceeding to fulfil the conditions under which, according to the existing law, the aid of Government will be afforded in erecting Churches and Parsonages, and maintaining Clergymen.

"I cannot conclude without conveying to the Society an assurance of my unabated gratitude for the services which they have rendered to me and to those under my charge; and I endeavour to acquit myself of the corresponding obligation by labouring to promote those sacred objects upon which I know the attention of the Society has been and continues to be fixed. I meet with many trials both of faith and patience; but in the persuasion that God will defend and provide for all those who with sincerity of purpose seek to advance His kingdom by the use of those means which He has appointed, I am encouraged to go forward, not doubting but that so far as is good for us and for the world, the same God who has sent us forth will crown with a prosperous result our labours in the name of His ever blessed Son. The truest gratitude I have experienced many years has been in the arrival of the additional Clergymen engaged by the Society. We all, I am happy to state, continue to labour together in harmony and goodwill; and if they who are applied for shall be found to combine in the same spirit, my consolation and encouragement will be great indeed. I shall esteem it as a sign that God is with us of a truth.

"I annex a copy of the result of a religious census of the free population of this colony, as the document is important, and should be made as public as possible in England, in order to undeceive the public as to the real strength of parties here. The following is the summary:—

CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

INDIA—OBITUARY OF MOHESH CHUNDER GHOSE, A CONVERTED HINDOO, LATE A SUPERINTENDANT IN THE SCHOOLS OF THE CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY IN CALCUTTA.

Mohesh Chunder Ghose was a young Hindoo, of great respectability, in station as well as character; and for some time before his death superintended the schools of the Church Missionary Society, near Calcutta, with the view of eventually entering into the service of the SOCIETY, as an ordained missionary. On occasion of his death, a funeral sermon was preached by the Rev. Krishna Mohana Banerjee, at the Old Church, Calcutta, on the evening of Thursday, Oct. 12, 1837, from Revelation xiv. 13. The course through which, under the providence and grace of God, the preacher himself had been led, are so remarkable, that we prefix a brief notice of the circumstances.

The author of the sermon from which the following account is taken, was first a student at the Hindoo College, where he became acquainted with the English language and literature. Renouncing the folly of his Hindoo superstitions, he became an infidel; but, subsequently attending the lectures of the Rev. Dr. Duff, the able missionary of the Scotch church, under the Divine blessing he became a decided Christian. Upon its being submitted to him, through the liberality of Dr. Duff, to which body of Christians in India he would choose to attach himself, after much consideration he expressed his decided wish to become a member of the Church of England. He then became connected with the Church Missionary Society, and for some time superintended the Mission School on their premises at Mirzapore, near Calcutta. He was subsequently ordained as a clergyman of the Church of England, by the Bishop of Calcutta. It is an interesting fact, that Krishna Mohana was the editor of an English newspaper, at Calcutta, called "The Enquirer;" which he conducted, first on Infidel, and afterward on Christian principles. The fact of his having been thus occupied will account for the knowledge of the English language which this sermon evinces.

WEST-AFRICA MISSION.

The large number of labourers who were added to this mission in 1837, arrived in the colony, December 4th, of that year. Some of them had previously laboured there; others were commencing their missionary course: their company consisted of three ordained missionaries, two of them with their wives, and four catechists. Arrangements were made, at an early meeting of the local committee, to distribute their augmented numbers among the different stations.

Extracts from the journal of their proceedings are given in the Church Missionary Record, ending with the following statistical details:—

CHURCH PASTORAL-AID SOCIETY.

The Committee, in sending out their fifth occasional paper, feel they have every reason to be thankful for the measure of prosperity which God is giving to the SOCIETY. They desire to praise Him for the additional amount of aid which they have been enabled to grant, the satisfactory results which their correspondents continually bring before them, and the growing interest which the friends of our beloved Church are taking in the SOCIETY's operations. Since July last, 35 new associations have been formed in different parts of the country, from which, with additional and increased subscriptions and donations to the Parent Society, a considerable augmentation to the general fund may confidently be anticipated. At present, however, the increase in the SOCIETY's finances is not in proportion to the urgent appeals which are weekly presented to the Committee.

The SOCIETY's Grants now pledge them to an annual expenditure of 14,000*l*; they are made to 165 incumbents, for 160 additional curates, and 26 lay assistants, in a population of 1,324,155, for which, before the aid of this SOCIETY, there were only 184 clergymen; each incumbent having an average charge of 8,000 souls, and an average income of 160*l*; 80 without parsonage houses. While, therefore, the Committee call upon the friends of the Church to join them in heartfelt thankfulness to Almighty God for past and present blessings, they would earnestly press upon all, both the duty and privilege of assisting, by self-denying exertions, in the enlargement of the SOCIETY's operations. Let those who love the Lord, and are looking for the accomplishment of that for which they daily pray, "thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven," subscribe more largely to the SOCIETY's funds, collect for it in their parishes and neighbourhoods, make known among their friends the unspeakable blessings which such an institution is calculated to bestow on our Church and nation; and, in earnest prayer, call upon the Lord of the harvest to raise up amongst us faithful men for the work of the ministry.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND METROPOLITAN COMMERCIAL SCHOOLS.

ON Monday, Jan. 28, the first of a series of institutions now in course of formation throughout the metropolis, (the design of which is to provide for the children of tradesmen, mechanics, and others, in the metropolis and its suburbs, a sound and comprehensive education, of which an essential part shall be religious instruction, in conformity with the doctrines of the Church of England,) situate in Rose-street, Soho-square, was publicly opened by the Bishop of London, who presided. The Right Rev. Prelate having opened the business of the day with an impressive prayer,

The Dean of Chichester addressed the meeting. He proceeded to show that knowledge and education, divested of religion, was fruitless, as without it there was no security for the formation of virtuous habits. Though the Church of England, with fostering and parental care, had, from its Universities down to the National Society, provided education in the doctrines and duties of Christianity, yet they had now felt that there was still a very large and important class of persons for whom no similar provision had yet been made, who required an education superior to that which is given to the children of the poor, yet somewhat different from the course of instruction pursued in King's College and the Proprietary Schools in union with it. The Dean of Chichester then describes this class and the objects of the institution thus:

"In my descending scale, I am now arrived at a class, important from its numbers,—important from its social influence,—important from its growing intelligence and eagerness in quest of knowledge; a class below the highest and above the lowest; consisting, in the country, principally of farmers,—in towns, of traders, clerks, and the superior order of mechanics. And, if I say that I must for a moment pass by this class, I am sure the very occasion of our meeting will convince you that the silence is intended to be only temporary; and, in order that I may return to this, the especial subject of my discourse, without encountering any future interruption. But my design of bringing before your attention what has been done by our Church for the religious instruction of the youth of the country, would be indeed defective, if I omitted to mention the poor, the most appropriate field for her charitable care. Now to this task she has addressed herself earnestly, zealously, and, I must add, most successfully. For them she has, through her National Society, organised a regular system of instruction,—she has trained masters and mistresses,—she has built school-houses,—she has given encouragement and assistance to every local effort; and, while it appears that she has now about 600,000 children under her immediate tuition, she may add at least 400,000 more belonging to schools, which, if not formally and technically united with the National Society, adopt its principles and pursue its system; thus making the total number of children who receive a Church of England education to amount to 1,000,000. But even this is not the most important view of the case. The Church is far from denying that she must keep pace with the advancing knowledge and intelligence of the community; and, feeling that some extension and improvement of her system of instruction for the poor is needed, she is at this moment diligently employed in arranging plans, by which, while the religious character of her schools for those classes is preserved, they shall be extended and improved. She wishes to create a good Normal School; to train up a set of masters and mistresses better qualified for the office of teaching; to establish a complete system of visitation for the schools now in action; and, by means of Boards of Education formed in every diocese, and connected with the cathedral clergy of the respective cities, to arrange her measures in such a way, that the fault shall not lie with her, if a single poor child within the kingdom be excluded from the advantages of a sound religious education.

"I now revert to the immediate and direct subject, which has given occasion to the present meeting. If it has been made to appear that religion should be intimately blended with all education, and that, in point of fact, a higher tone of religious instruction now prevails throughout almost all orders of society in this country, it would be a matter seriously to be lamented, that there should be an exception in the case of any one single class. Now, without entering into details, which would be neither proper nor desirable, I may say there is reason to suppose that the class to which I before alluded but slightly, and which I described as below the highest and above the lowest, is not furnished so adequately as might be desired with schools, where suitable instruction is given, still less where there is any safeguard on the great point of religious instruction. I do not enter into any consideration of the circumstances which have led the way to this deficiency. Indeed, I purposely abstain from that subject. It is enough to state the fact, a fact as unfortunate to themselves, as it is injurious to the general interests of the community. It is enough to say that the friends of religion, anxious that no one class of our countrymen should be without the advantages of sound Christian education, have now turned their attention to this point; and are desirous that, in every considerable place throughout our land, there should be one school;—in every place of great population and opulence, there should be more than one,—which, call them middle, call them commercial, call them by what name you will,—shall offer to the tradesmen and artisans of that locality, an opportunity for their children to receive such secular instruction as is suitable to their wants; and, at the same time, there shall be a security,—a security derived from the character of the master, and from the declared object of the institutions,—that the immortal interests of religion shall not be disregarded. This addition was alone wanting to round and complete the circle of religious education now provided by our church for the entire mass of our people. The design is a noble one; and I feel it no slight distinction and happiness to be the organ to pronounce that this day such a School is opened for the benefit of the inhabitants of this part of our metropolis. If it be not absolutely the first on this plan that has been instituted within the kingdom, it is the first upon any fixed and systematic plan; and it is hoped that it will be followed by many others, not only among ourselves, but in every other diocese in our land. It does not pretend to deny, on the contrary, it bears upon the very head and front the declaration, that it is a Church of England School. With the Primate of all England for its patron,—with the Bishops of London and of the adjoining diocese of Winchester for its Presidents,—with many laymen eminent for their attachment to our ecclesiastical system, and many of the principal clergy of the metropolis, for its committee,—it would be impossible to suppose that it should be conducted otherwise than on strictly Church principles. At the same time, having stated what the School professes to be and to do, I wish to add a few words of explanation on certain points respecting it, on which it is possible that some unfounded apprehensions, perhaps some false expectations, may exist.

"In the very first place, let it be well understood that we have no intention or wish to place ourselves in a state of hostility to schools for the middle orders now in existence. Our sole object is to establish in such schools a good system of religious instruction. To those, who are already mindful of their duty in this important respect, we cordially, and at once, hold out the right hand of fellowship. If any, where a different system has hitherto prevailed, shall now be induced to raise and amend the tone of their teaching, we shall consider our purpose to be gained, and gained by a process much more satisfactory, than if they had been supplanted or silenced by us. Our language is that of conciliation, not of rivalry. We wish to encourage such institutions as are good, to amend such as are faulty; and by our advice and influence, by our support and assistance, if needed, to bring them all into a state of harmonious co-operation, if not of direct and positive union, with ourselves.

"In the next place, we wish it to be observed that our School does not attempt to narrow or circumscribe the customary range of secular instruction. You have only to look to the paper which explains the designs and purposes of the School to perceive that, in addition to reading and writing, to grammatical instruction in English, to arithmetic, geometry and mensuration, it professes to teach history, geography, the elements of natural history and philosophy, vocal music, linear drawing, and even French and the rudiments of Latin. By this sketch you will at once perceive that this School fully reaches, perhaps exceeds, the standard of instruction usually given in like schools now in existence: with the satisfactory assurance that all these things will be taught by masters carefully selected for their office, and well qualified to fill it with credit to themselves and benefit to the pupils. Certainly, we have a good omen of our future success and reputation in the circumstance, that our first master has given one strong proof of his sufficiency to teach others, by having recently obtained an honourable distinction for himself at his university.

"In the next place, it does not pretend to be a charitable institution,—to impose any burden of pecuniary obligation on those parents, who choose to avail themselves of its advantages. They pay for the instruction of their children, as at any other school. They subject themselves in no respect to the committee,—whose whole care is restricted to the single point of satisfying themselves that the School is conducted on the principles of sound religion.

"Neither in the very matter of religion, would I wish it to be supposed that the School pretends to do more than lies within its proper sphere of action. None can be more thoroughly convinced than ourselves that religion is not a thing to be taught by a series of set lessons. Its seat is in the heart. It consists in submitting every act, word, and thought, to the will of God. It is called into operation at every passing moment of our lives. These are things, which can be directly taught, neither in this School, nor in any other, in all the ascending series from the humblest dame's school to the brightest university that adorns our land. Still, much that is at least instrumental towards forming the religious principle, is a matter of direct tuition. It is something to learn the contents of the Sacred Volume, and to know various subjects historically connected with our holy faith. It is something to have its precepts and its doctrines properly expounded. It is something to be made acquainted with the evidences on which it rests. It is something to understand its connexion with various secular arts and accomplishments. It is something to hear it treated habitually with reverence, and to acquire the habit of beginning and ending every lesson with prayer to God. It is something to be instructed in the principles and tenets of our excellent Church, and to know what are her claims to the respect and the filial obedience of all her children;—while there can be no doubt that the School, both in the intercourse of the master with the scholars, and of the scholars among themselves, will afford many occasions, when the theory of religion may be reduced to practice,—when its precepts may be brought into action. Still, it remains unquestionably true that this, as every other school, ought to be subsidiary and auxiliary to domestic education. All subjects of positive information and science will generally fall within its exclusive province:—all that constitutes more the technical part of religious instruction may also be considered to belong principally to its charge. But all, in which the formation of the principles and the improvement of the heart is concerned, is the business, not less of home, than of the school; and, unless the two systems conspire harmoniously together, it is very seldom that a favourable result will ensue:—and to this observation, I would claim your especial attention; because we may justly attribute much of the want of success, and of the consequent disappointment of our hopes, that has attended some, even of our best conducted systems of scholastic education, to the disregard of this very obvious truth.

"I have now laid before you what appear to be the advantages likely to result from the establishment of this School. I trust that I have stated them fairly and without exaggeration,—explaining what the School professes to do, and in what respects it must depend upon the co-operation and support of others. I would wish it to be borne in mind that the Church has stepped forward on this occasion with the kindest and most parental feeling,—with a wish that, in her general plan for providing a religious education for the community at large, there should remain no one class less adequately provided with the means for enjoying this inestimable advantage. In this enterprise she has not had to follow slowly in the track of others, who have entered on the same career before her: she has taken the lead, and is the first to establish a systematic plan for preparing schools, on sound religious principles, for the children of the tradesman, the artisan, and, in general terms, of the middle orders of society. As I said at the commencement of this discourse, the present School is but the first,—the first, we hope, in a long series of similar establishments, which will overspread, not only this vast metropolis, but every considerable town within the kingdom. A greater blessing, I sincerely believe, cannot be conferred on our country. And, knowing that neither this, nor any other work, can prosper unless the blessing of Almighty God be upon it, let us pray to Him that, as it has been begun in a humble desire to promote the glory of His name on earth, so He will vouchsafe to visit it with His countenance, and to bless it with His favour, that it may flourish and abound unto righteousness; through the merits of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ."

These extracts are made from the speech as since published. The whole of it will be found well worthy of attention.

DIOCESAN EDUCATION.

IMPORTANT MEETING AT LICHFIELD.

In conformity with a requisition addressed to the Lord Bishop of Lichfield, and signed by a great number of the nobility, clergy, gentry, and others of the diocese, favourable to the extension and improvement of education in connexion with the Established Church, his lordship convened a public meeting, which was held in the Guildhall, Lichfield, on Thursday last. Independent of those who signed the requisition, to which were appended not less than 200 names, a number of other noblemen and gentlemen favourable to the object of the meeting, were in attendance. We recognised Lord Dartmouth, Lord Harrowby, Lord Sandon, Lord Ingestrie, the Hon.

R. Curzon, the Hon. F. Greville Howard, the Right Hon. Sir Robert Peel, Bart., the Hon. and very Rev. the Dean of Lichfield, Archdeacon Hodson (Stafford), Archdeacon Bather (Salop), Archdeacon Hodgson (Derby), Rev. H. R. Woolley, Shenstone; Rev. A. Kenney; Rev. F. Smith, Hammerwich; Edward Grove, Esq., Shenstone park; S. Smith, Esq., Elmhurst; John Haworth, Esq., Lichfield; Mr. C. S. Forster, Captain Majendie, Mr. S. P. Shawe, Mr. Ackland, Mr. Richard Hinckley, Mr. John Mott, Mr. William Leigh, Little Aston; the Hon. and Rev. A. C. Talbot, Mr. J. N. Lane, Rev. Thomas Levett, Mr. John Bott, Mr. J. C. S. Kynnersley, Rev. E. C. S. Kynnersley, of Draycott; Rev. — Inge, Rev. C. S. Royds, of Haughton; the Rev. W. E. Coldwell, rector of Stafford; the Rev. Wm. Dalton, of Wolverhampton; the Rev. S. Majendie, of Longdon; Rev. John Boyle, Wolverhampton; Rev. G. Fisk, Walsall; Rev. Wm. Webb, Tixall; Rev. Edward Whieldon, of Woodhouse; Rev. J. Edwardes, of Trentham; Rev. W. Parsons, Longton; Rev. T. Arden, Yoxall; Rev. R. B. Baker, Hilderstone; Rev. Joseph Salt, Penkridge; Rev. T. D. Atkinson, Rugeley; and many other clergymen of the diocese.

There were also present many elegantly dressed ladies, who appeared to take a warm interest in the proceedings of the day.

About one o'clock the Dean of Lichfield proposed, and Lord Sandon seconded the motion, that Earl Dartmouth do preside on the present occasion. The motion was unanimously agreed to; and, on taking the chair,

His LORDSHIP said, that he was highly honoured by being called upon to preside at such a meeting as that he now saw before him; but he had sincerely to regret that he owed that honour to the inability of the Lord Bishop of the diocese, of the Lord Lieutenant of the county, and of the Earl of Harrowby, to attend in consequence of ill health.

The meeting was addressed by Lord Sandon, Lord Ingestrie, Sir Robert Peel, Hon. R. Curzon, the Dean of Lichfield, Archdeacon Bather, Archdeacon Hodgson, Hon. F. G. Howard, Rev. Mr. Woolby, Rev. Mr. Groves, and the Earl of Harrowby, who came in during the proceedings.

We think it right to give the following extracts from the speech of SIR ROBERT PEEL:—

My lord, the question of education, based on religious principles, has been so fully entered into by my noble friend (Lord Sandon) as to render all further observation unnecessary. But I may be permitted to say, that I think it a great defect in our institutions, that they have no connection with religious instruction, in conformity with the principles and formularies of the Church of England. If this deficiency had been at an earlier period remedied, the obstacles of which we now have to complain would not have arisen. The question to be considered is, how are those difficulties to be removed? By the voluntary and combined exertions of the clergy and laity of the Church of England. (Cheers.) I believe it would be most advantageous if we could accomplish our object by voluntary exertions, rather than by soliciting the aid of authority; for it is vain to lament that we have not laws, which, if we had, would not pay for the education of the people. It is in vain to expect the aid of Government, but depend upon it if the clergy and laity of the Church of England will unite, and resolve to use their voluntary energetic efforts, they will assume a position, which they have the power to do, of establishing a system of Christian education independent of any Government, and of defying any attempt that may be made to proscribe any institution in connection with the Church. (Cheers.) They have the power, and it is better to avow their object, and to determine not to shrink from the principle they mean to abide by, namely, that they will require, as a condition of seeking education in their institutions, not that it will be a religious education merely, but that it must be in conformity with the doctrines and discipline of the Church of England. (Cheers.) This avowal is better; the demand of this condition is better for the interests of all, than by compromise or sacrifice of any kind to attempt a system that must end in failure and disappointment. I consider the example of Ireland is not a rule to be followed in reference to this country, nor does the comparison at all apply. The position of the two countries is directly the reverse. Here the great majority of the people are professors of the principles of the Established Church. In Ireland the great majority of the people are of the Roman Catholic religion, and the minority are members of the Church of England. Therefore no precedent can be drawn from that country for England. Hence, then, it is necessary to avow a determination to maintain the integrity of the Established Church; and, as we have a right to do, to put it as a condition upon all who enter our institutions, that they will acknowledge the tenets of the Church of England. The authority of the Church of England is under-rated; for is it not the fact that the power to execute the laws of the country requires a proof of attachment to the Church? and if the landed gentry in connexion with the Church, would but feel the force of the obligations that are imposed on them, in consequence of the property they possess; if the clergy would feel more the necessity of exerting themselves—if both would resolutely unite, schools in abundance would soon be established, that would be well conducted and efficiently supported. There would, in a short time, be an ample supply of scholars, seeking for education based on the principles of your resolution, and these would not be confined to the children of the Church of England. I certainly approve of your project, and in conclusion, pray "May God prosper your handy work." The right hon. baronet resumed his seat amidst much cheering.

AN ACT TO ABRIDGE THE HOLDING OF BENEFICES IN PLURALITY, AND TO MAKE BETTER PROVISION FOR THE RESIDENCE OF THE CLERGY.

LXXXVIII. And be it enacted, that if any incumbent of two benefices, residing bonâ fide in different proportions of every year on one or other of such benefices the full period specified by this Act, shall employ a curate to perform ecclesiastical duty interchangeably from time to time upon such of the benefices from which he shall be absent during his own actual residence upon the other thereof, it shall be lawful for the bishop to assign to such curate any stipend not exceeding such stipend as would be allowed under this Act for the larger of such benefices, nor less than would be allowed for the smaller, as to the bishop shall under all the circumstances appear just and reasonable: provided always, that if any such incumbent shall employ a curate or curates for the whole year upon each of such benefices, such incumbent so residing bonâ fide as aforesaid, in such case it shall be lawful for the bishop to assign to either or each of such curates any such stipend less than the amount specified in this Act as he shall think fit.

LXXXIX. And be it enacted, that in every case where the bishop shall find it necessary or expedient for obtaining the proper performance of ecclesiastical duties, to license any spiritual person holding any benefice to serve as curate of any adjoining or other parish or place, it shall be lawful for such bishop, if he shall think fit, to assign to such person so licensed a stipend less by a sum not exceeding thirty pounds per annum than the stipend which in the several cases in this Act specified the bishop is required to assign; and in every case where the bishop shall find it necessary or expedient to license the same person to serve as curate for two parishes or places, it shall be lawful for such bishop, if he shall think fit, to direct that during such time as such curate shall serve the churches or chapels of such two parishes or places, the stipend to be received by him for serving each of the said churches or chapels shall be less by a sum not exceeding thirty pounds per annum, than the stipend which in the several cases hereinbefore specified the bishop is required by this act to assign.

XC. And be it enacted, that all agreements made or to be made between persons holding benefices and their curates, in fraud or derogation of the provisions of this Act, and all agreements whereby any curate shall undertake or in any manner bind himself to accept or be content with any stipend less than that which shall be assigned by his licence, shall be void to all intents and purposes, and shall not be pleaded or given in evidence in any court of law or equity; and, notwithstanding the payment and acceptance, in pursuance of any such agreement, of any sum less than that assigned by the licence, or any receipt, discharge, or acquittance that may be given for the same, the curate and his personal representatives shall be and remain entitled to the full amount of the stipend assigned by his licence; and the payment of so much thereof as shall be proved to the satisfaction of the bishop to remain unpaid shall, together with full costs of recovering the same as between proctor and client, be enforced by monition, and by sequestration of the profits of the benefice, to be issued by the bishop for that purpose on application made by the curate or his representatives; provided that such application shall in every such case be made to the bishop within twelve months after such curate shall have quitted his curacy, or have died.

XCII. And be it enacted, that in every case in which the bishop shall assign to any curate a stipend equal to the whole annual value of the benefice in which he is licensed to serve, such stipend shall be subject to deduction in respect to all such charges and outgoings as may legally affect the value of such benefice, and to any loss or diminution which may lessen such value, without the wilful default or neglect of the spiritual person holding the benefice.

XCIII. And be it enacted, that in every such case as last aforesaid it shall be lawful for the bishop, upon the application of the spiritual person holding the benefice, to allow such spiritual person to retain in each year so much money, not exceeding in any case one fourth part of the annual value, as shall have been actually expended during the year in the repair of the chancel and of the house of residence and premises and appurtenances thereto belonging, in respect of which such spiritual person, or his executors or administrators, would be liable for dilapidations to the successor; and it shall also be lawful for the bishop in like manner to allow any spiritual person holding any benefice, the annual value whereof shall not exceed one hundred and fifty pounds, to deduct from the stipend assigned to the curate in each year so much money as shall have been actually expended in such repairs above the amount of the surplus remaining of such value after payment of such stipend; provided that the sum so deducted, after laying out such surplus, shall not in any year exceed one fourth part of such stipend.

XCIII. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the bishop who shall have granted any licence to any curate to serve in any benefice the incumbent whereof is not resident for four months in each year, and who shall have required such curate to reside in the house of residence belonging to the benefice, to assign to such curate such house of residence, together with the offices, stables, gardens, and appurtenances thereto belonging, or any part or parts thereof, without payment of any rent, and also to assign any portion of glebe land adjacent to the house, and not exceeding four statute acres, at such rent as shall be fixed by the archdeacon of the archdeaconry, or by the rural dean, if any, of the deanery or district within which the benefice is situate, and one neighbouring incumbent, and approved of by the bishop, during the time of such curate's serving the cure, or during the non-residence of the incumbent of such benefice; and it shall be lawful for the bishop making any such assignment to any curate to sequester the profits of the benefice in any case in which possession of the premises so assigned shall not be given up to the curate, and until such possession shall be given, and to direct the application of the profits arising from such sequestration as is hereinbefore directed in the case of sequestration for non-residence, or to remit the same or any part thereof, as the bishop shall in his discretion think fit.

XCIV. And be it enacted, that in every case where the bishop shall assign to the curate licensed to serve in any benefice a stipend not less than the whole value of the same, and shall in addition to such stipend direct that such curate shall reside in the house of residence belonging to such benefice, such curate shall be liable during the time of his serving such cure to the same taxes and parochial rates and assessments, in respect of such house, premises, and appurtenances thereto belonging, as if he had been incumbent of the benefice: provided always, that in every other case in which the curate shall so reside by direction of the bishop it shall be lawful for such bishop, if he shall think fit, to order that the incumbent shall pay to the curate all or any part of such sums as he may have been required to pay and shall have actually paid within one year ending at Michaelmas day next preceding the date of such order for any such taxes, parochial rates, or assessments as shall become due at any time after the passing of this Act, and the bishop may, if necessary, enforce payment thereof by monition, and sequestration of the profits of such benefice.

XCIV. And be it enacted, that every curate shall quit and give up the cure of any benefice which shall become vacant upon having six weeks' notice from the spiritual person admitted, collated, instituted, or licensed to such benefice, provided such notice shall be given within six months from the time of such admission, collation, institution, or licence; and that in all other cases it shall be lawful for the incumbent of any benefice, whether resident or non-resident thereon, having first obtained the permission of the bishop of the diocese, to be signified by writing under his hand, to require any one or more of his curates, who after the passing of this Act shall be licensed to any curacy, to quit and give up his curacy upon six months' notice thereof given to the curate, who shall thereupon quit the same according to such notice: provided always, that any incumbent resident on his benefice, or not resident but desiring to reside on his benefice, may, within one month after refusal of such permission as aforesaid by the bishop, appeal to the archbishop of the province, who shall either confirm such refusal or grant such permission as to him may seem just and proper.

XCVI. And be it enacted, that every curate who shall reside in the house of residence of any benefice which shall become vacant shall peaceably deliver up possession thereof, with the appurtenances, upon having six weeks' notice from the spiritual person admitted, collated, instituted, or licensed to such benefice, provided such notice be given within six months from the time of such admission, collation, institution, or licence; and that in all other cases it shall be lawful for the incumbent of any benefice, with the permission signified in writing under the hand of the bishop of the diocese, or for such bishop, at any time, upon six months' notice in writing, to direct any curate to deliver up the house of residence, and the offices, stables, gardens, and appurtenances thereto belonging, and such portion of the glebe land as shall have been assigned to such curate, and such curate shall thereupon peaceably deliver up the possession of the premises pursuant to such notice; and if any curate shall refuse to deliver up such premises in any or either of the cases aforesaid he shall pay to the spiritual person holding the benefice the sum of forty shillings for every day of wrongful possession after the service of such notice.

XCVII. And be it enacted, that no curate shall quit any curacy to which he shall be licensed until after three months' notice of his intention given to the incumbent of the benefice and to the bishop, unless with the consent of the bishop, to be signified in writing under his hand, upon pain of paying to the incumbent a sum not exceeding the amount of his stipend for six months, at the discretion of the bishop, such sum to be specified in writing under the hand of the bishop, which sum may in such case be retained out of the stipend if the same or any part thereof shall remain unpaid, or, if the same cannot be retained out of the stipend, may be recovered by the spiritual person holding the benefice by action of debt.

XCVIII. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the bishop to license any curate who is or shall be actually employed by any non-resident incumbent of any benefice within his diocese, although no express nomination of such curate shall have been made to such bishop by the incumbent; and that the bishop shall have power, after having given to the curate sufficient opportunity of showing reason to the contrary, to revoke, summarily and without further process, any licence granted to any curate, and to remove such curate, for any cause which shall appear to such bishop to be good and reasonable: provided always, that any such curate may, within one month after service upon him of such revocation, appeal to the archbishop of the province, who shall confirm or annul such revocation as to him shall appear just and proper.

XCIX. And be it enacted, that in every case in which a benefice shall be under sequestration, except for the purpose of providing a house of residence as aforesaid, it shall be lawful to the bishop and he is hereby required, if the incumbent shall not perform the duties of the said benefice, to appoint and license a curate or curates thereto, and to assign to him or them a stipend or stipends, not exceeding, in the case of any one such curate, the highest rate of stipend allowed by this Act, nor, where more than one curate is appointed, a stipend exceeding one hundred pounds to more than one such curate, such stipend or stipends to be paid by the sequestrator of such benefice out of the profits thereof: provided always, that not more than one curate shall be appointed to any such benefice in any case in which there is not more than one church, or the population does not exceed two thousand persons.

C. And be it enacted, that upon the avoidance of any benefice, by death, resignation, or otherwise, the sequestrator appointed by the bishop shall, out of the profits thereof, which shall come to his hands, pay to the curate or curates appointed by such bishop to perform the ecclesiastical duties of such benefice during the vacancy thereof, such stipend or stipends as shall be ordered to be paid to him or them by such bishop, not exceeding the respective stipends allowed by this Act, and in proportion only to the time of such vacancy.

CI. Provided always, and be it enacted, that if the profits of such benefice which shall have come to the hands of such sequestrator during the vacancy thereof shall not be sufficient to pay such stipend, the same, or so much thereof as shall remain unpaid, shall be paid to such curate by the succeeding incumbent of such benefice out of the profits thereof; and such bishop is hereby empowered and required, if necessary, to enforce payment of the same by monition, and by sequestration of the profits of such benefice.

CII. And be it enacted, that every bishop who shall grant or revoke any licence to any curate under this Act, shall cause a copy of such licence or revocation to be entered in the registry of the diocese; and an alphabetical list of such licences and revocations shall be made out by the registrar of each diocese, and entered in a book, and kept for the inspection of all persons, upon payment of three shillings, and no more; and a copy of every such licence and revocation shall be transmitted by the said registrar to the churchwardens or chapelwardens of the parish, township, or place to which the same relates, within one month after the grant of such licence or revocation thereof, to be by them deposited in the parish chest: provided always, that every such registrar shall for every such copy transmitted to such churchwardens or chapelwardens as aforesaid be entitled to demand and receive from the incumbent of such benefice a fee of three shillings, and no more: provided also, that in case the archbishop shall, on appeal to him, annul the revocation of any such licence, the bishop by whom such revocation shall have been made shall, immediately on receiving notice from the archbishop that he had annulled the same, make such or the like order as is hereinbefore directed to be made on the revocation of a licence for non-residence being annulled, which order shall be binding on the registrar and churchwardens respectively to whom the same shall be addressed.

CIII. And whereas in many benefices in Wales and in the counties adjacent thereunto, many of the inhabitants are imperfectly or not at all instructed in the English language, and it is expedient that persons to be hereafter instituted or licensed to such benefices should possess an adequate knowledge of the Welsh language: and whereas in and by an Act passed in the session of parliament holden in the sixth and seventh years of his late Majesty's reign, intitled "An Act for carrying into effect the Reports of the Commissioners appointed to consider the state of the Established Church in England and Wales, with reference to ecclesiastical duties and revenues, so far as they relate to episcopal dioceses, revenues, and patronage," the said Commissioners were directed to prepare and lay before his then Majesty in Council a scheme for preventing the appointment of any clergyman not fully conversant with the Welsh language to certain benefices with cure of souls in Wales: and whereas it is expedient to repeal such enactment, and instead thereof to enact other provisions of more general and extensive application; be it therefore enacted, that the said enactment shall be and the same is hereby repealed.

CIV. And be it enacted, that within the several dioceses of Saint Asaph, Bangor, Llandaff, and Saint David's, it shall and may be lawful for the bishop, if he shall think fit, to refuse institution or licence to any spiritual person who after due examination and inquiry shall be found unable to preach, administer the Sacraments, perform other pastoral duties, and converse in the Welsh language: provided always, that any such spiritual person may, within one month after such refusal, appeal to the Archbishop of Canterbury, who shall either confirm such refusal or direct the bishop to grant institution or licence, as shall seem to the said Archbishop just and proper: provided also, that nothing hereinbefore contained shall be construed to affect or abridge any rights which the inhabitants of any benefice within the said four Welsh dioceses may at present by law possess of entering a caveat against or objecting in due course of law to the institution, collation, or licence of any spiritual person, or of proceeding to procure the deprivation of any such person.

CV. And be it enacted, that all the provisions and powers of this Act relating to the appointment of curates where the ecclesiastical duties are inadequately performed, shall within the several dioceses of Saint Asaph, Bangor, Llandaff, and Saint David's, extend and apply to cases wherein the bishop shall see reason to believe that the ecclesiastical duties of any benefice are not satisfactorily performed by reason of the insufficient instruction in the Welsh language of the spiritual person serving such benefice.

CVI. And be it enacted, that no spiritual person shall serve more than two benefices in one day unless in case of unforeseen and pressing emergency, in which case the spiritual person who shall so have served more than two benefices shall forthwith report the circumstance to the bishop of the diocese.

CVII. And be it enacted, that all the powers, authorities, provisions, regulations, matters, and things in this Act contained, in relation to bishops in their dioceses, shall extend and be construed to extend to the archbishops in the respective dioceses of which they are bishops, and also in their own peculiar jurisdictions, as fully and effectually as if the archbishops were named with the bishops in every such case.

CVIII. And be it enacted, that every archbishop and bishop, within the limits of whose province or diocese respectively any benefice, exempt or peculiar, shall be locally situate, shall, except as herein otherwise provided, have, use, and exercise all the powers and authorities necessary for the due execution by them respectively of the provisions and purposes of this Act, and for enforcing the same with regard thereto respectively, as such archbishop and bishop respectively would have used and exercised if the same were not exempt or peculiar, but were subject in all respects to the jurisdiction of such archbishop or bishop; and where any benefice, exempt or peculiar, shall be locally situate within the limits of more than one province or diocese, or where the same or any of them shall be locally situate between the limits of the two provinces, or between the limits of any two or more dioceses, the archbishop or bishop of the cathedral church to whose province or diocese the parish church of the same respectively shall be nearest in local situation shall have, use, and exercise all the powers and authorities which are necessary for the due execution of the provisions of this Act, and enforcing the same, with regard thereto respectively, as such archbishop or bishop could have used if the same were not exempt or peculiar, but were subject in all respects to the jurisdiction of such archbishop or bishop respectively, and the same for all the purposes of this Act shall be deemed and taken to be within the limits of the province or diocese of such archbishop or bishop; provided that the peculiars belonging to any archbishop or bishop, though locally situate in another diocese, shall continue subject to the archbishop or bishop to whom they belong, as well for the purposes of this Act as for all other purposes of ecclesiastical jurisdiction.

CIX. And be it enacted, that in every case in which jurisdiction is given to the bishop of the diocese or to any archbishop, under the provisions of this Act, and for the purposes thereof, and the enforcing the due execution of the provisions thereof, all other and concurrent jurisdiction in respect thereof shall, except as herein otherwise provided, wholly cease, and no other jurisdiction in relation to the provisions of this Act shall be used, exercised, or enforced, save and except such jurisdiction of the bishop and archbishop under this Act; any thing in any Act or Acts of parliament, or law or laws, or usage or custom, to the contrary notwithstanding.

CX. And be it enacted, that every sequestration issued under the provisions of this Act shall have priority, and the sums to be thereby recovered shall be paid and satisfied in preference to all other sequestrations, and the sums to be thereby recovered, except such sequestrations as shall be founded on judgments duly docketed before the passing of this Act, and also except such sequestrations as shall have been issued before any sequestration under this Act under the provisions of an Act passed in the seventeenth year of the reign of King George the Third, for promoting the residence of the parochial clergy, and the monies to be recovered by such excepted sequestrations respectively.

CXI. And be it enacted, that all appeals under the provisions of this Act to any archbishop shall be in writing signed by the party appealing; and that in order to discourage frivolous appeals, no proceeding shall be had in any such appeal until the appellant shall, if required, have given security in such form and to such amount as the archbishop shall direct, of payment to the bishop of such costs as shall be awarded by the archbishop if he shall decide against the appellant; and that after such security, if required, shall have been given, the said archbishop shall forthwith, either by himself or by some commissioner or commissioners appointed under his hand from among the other bishops of his province, make or cause to be made inquiry into the matter complained of, and shall after such inquiry, and in the latter case after a report in writing from his said commissioner or commissioners, give his decision in such appeal in writing under his hand; and when he shall decide the merits of the appeal against the appellant he shall also award and direct whether any and what amount of costs shall be paid by the appellant to the bishop respondent; and in like manner when he shall decide in favour of the appellant he shall also award and direct whether any and what amount of costs shall be paid by the bishop respondent to the appellant.

CXII. And be it enacted, that in all cases in which proceedings under this Act are directed to be by monition and sequestration, such monition shall issue under the hand and seal of the bishop, and such monition, and any other instrument or notice issued in pursuance of the provisions of this Act, and not otherwise specially provided for, shall be served personally upon the spiritual person therein named or to whom it shall be directed, by showing the original to him, and leaving with him a true copy thereof, or, in case such spiritual person cannot be found, by leaving a true copy thereof at his usual or last known place of residence, and by affixing another copy thereof upon the church door of the parish in which such place of residence shall be situate, and also, in the case of such monition, by leaving another copy thereof with the officiating minister or one of the churchwardens of the said parish, and also by affixing another copy thereof on the church door of the parish in which the benefice of such spiritual person shall be situate; and such monition or other instrument, or notice as aforesaid, shall, immediately after the service thereof, be returned into the consistorial court of such bishop, and be there filed, together with an affidavit of the time and manner in which the same shall have been served; and thereupon, in case of such monition, it shall be competent to the party monished to show cause, by affidavit or otherwise, as the case may require, why a sequestration should not issue according to the tenor of such monition; and if such spiritual person shall not, within the time assigned by such monition, show sufficient cause to the contrary, such sequestration shall issue under the seal of the consistorial court of such bishop, and shall be served and returned into the registry of such court in like manner as is hereinbefore directed with respect to monitions issued under the provisions of this Act.

CXIII. Provided always, and be it enacted, that in any case of non-residence in which a monition shall have been served upon any spiritual person under the provisions of this Act, requiring such spiritual person to reside on his benefice, no sequestration shall issue until an order requiring such spiritual person to proceed and reside upon such benefice within thirty days, as hereinbefore enacted, shall have been served upon him in the same manner as is hereinbefore directed as to the service of monitions.

CXIV. And be it enacted, that all penalties and forfeitures which shall be incurred under this Act by any spiritual person holding a benefice, shall and may be sued for and recovered in the court of the bishop of the diocese in which such benefice is situate, and by some person duly authorized for that purpose by such bishop by writing under his hand and seal, and in no other court, and by or at the instance of no other person whatever; and that the payment of every such penalty or forfeiture, together with the reasonable expense incurred in recovering the same, shall and may be enforced by monition and sequestration; and that it shall and may be lawful for such bishop, by any order made for that purpose in writing under his hand, and to be registered in the registry of the diocese, which the registrar is hereby required to do, to direct that every such penalty or forfeiture so recovered as aforesaid, and which shall not have been remitted in whole or in part, or so much thereof as shall not have been remitted, shall be applied towards the augmentation or improvement of such benefice or of the house of residence thereof, or of any of the buildings or appurtenances thereof.

CXV. And be it enacted, that all fees, charges, costs, and expenses incurred or directed to be paid by any spiritual person holding any benefice under the provisions of this Act, which shall remain unpaid for the period of twenty-one days after demand thereof in writing delivered to or left at the usual or last place of abode of such spiritual person, may be recovered by monition and sequestration: provided always, that it shall be lawful for the person or persons of whom any such fees, costs, charges, and expenses shall be so demanded to apply to the bishop of the diocese to order the taxation thereof, and such bishop shall thereupon order some proper person to tax and settle the same; and the certificate of allowance, by the person so to be appointed, of such fees, costs, charges, and expenses so to be taxed, shall be final.

CXVI. And be it enacted, that if the registrar of any diocese shall refuse or neglect to make any entry, or to do any other matter or thing prescribed by this Act, he shall forfeit for every such refusal or neglect the sum of five pounds.

CXVII. And be it enacted, that all penalties and forfeitures under this Act incurred by persons not spiritual, or by spiritual persons not holding benefices, shall be sued for and recovered by any person who will sue for the same by action of debt in any of Her Majesty's courts of record at Westminster.

CXVIII. And be it enacted, that no penalty shall be recovered against any spiritual person under the provisions of this Act, other or further than those which such spiritual person may have incurred subsequent to the first day of January in the year immediately preceding the year in which such proceedings shall be commenced.

CXIX. And be it enacted, that all penalties recovered under the provisions of this Act, the application of which is not specially directed thereby, shall be paid over to the treasurer of the governors of the bounty of Queen Anne, to be applied to the purposes of the said bounty.

CXX. And be it enacted, that for all the purposes of this Act, except as herein otherwise provided, the year shall be deemed to commence on the first day of January, and be reckoned therefrom to the thirty-first day of December, both inclusive.

CXXI. And be it enacted, that for all the purposes of this Act the months therein named shall be taken to be calendar months, except in any case in which any month or months are to be made up of different periods less than a month, and in every such case thirty days shall be deemed a month.

CXXII. And be it enacted, that in every case where by the provisions of this Act the copy of any licence is required to be filed or entered in the registry of the diocese, a copy thereof, certified by the registrar, shall be admissible as evidence in all courts and places whatever.

CXXIII. And be it enacted, that when authority is given by this Act to any archbishop or bishop to require any statement or facts to be verified by evidence, or to inquire or to cause inquiry to be made into any facts, such archbishop or bishop may require any such statement or any of such facts to be verified in such manner as the said archbishop or bishop shall see fit; and that when any oath, affidavit, or affirmation or solemn declaration is or may be by or in pursuance of the provisions of this Act required to be made, such oath, affidavit, or affirmation or solemn declaration shall and may be made either before such archbishop or bishop, or the commissioner or commissioners, or one of them, of such archbishop or bishop respectively, or before some ecclesiastical judge or his surrogate, or before a justice of the peace, or before a master or master extraordinary in Chancery, who are hereby authorized and empowered in all and every of the cases aforesaid to administer such oath, affidavit, and affirmation, or to take such declaration, as the case may be.

•• In answer to a Correspondent who seeks for information respecting the Stipends of Curates, we can only state, that this Act does not alter the minimum. By the Clergy Residence Act, no Stipend of any Curate of a non-resident Incumbent instituted since 1813, ought to be less than eighty pounds, if the annual value of the benefice amounts to that sum; and the law still remains the same in this Act. It will be the safest way to refer the cases alluded to, to the Bishop of the Diocese. Certainly it would be very unwise to think of resigning, without first consulting the Diocesan.

OXFORD MEMORIAL OF CRANMER, RIDLEY, AND LATIMER.

OUR readers will be happy to learn, that on Jan. 31st, it was decided by a Public Meeting held at Oxford, in deference to the wishes of the Bishop of the Diocese, of the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, and the Bishop of London, that the proposed Memorial be a Church characterised chiefly by external decorations. Of course a large sum of money will be wanted to effect this object, as it will be impossible to erect an edifice as a National Memorial, which should be inferior to New College and Magdalen Chapels in the same city, founded by the munificence of individuals. The Archbishops of Canterbury and York, and the Bishops of London and Clogher, have subscribed 50*l.* each, the Marquis of Hertford 100*l.*, Earl of Eldon 100*l.*, and in the general list of contributors we see the names of the Archdeacons of Berks and Oxford, Archdeacon Watson, Rev. H. H. Norris, Rev. G. S. Faber, Rev. T. Fowler Short, Lord Dartmouth, Lord Bexley, Lord Churchill, Rev. H. Mc Neile, Rev. Mr. Close, of Cheltenham, Rev. Mr. Bickersteth, the Vice-Chancellor, and the great majority of the leading Members of the University of Oxford, Rev. Dr. Wordsworth, Rev. Professor Lee, Rev. Professor Whewell, and other distinguished Members of the University of Cambridge, and a considerable number of other eminent persons, whether among the Clergy or Laity.

PARLIAMENTARY INTELLIGENCE.

HOUSE OF LORDS, TUESDAY, FEB. 5.

HER MAJESTY this day opened the Session of Parliament in person; and made her speech from the throne. We extract from it the only paragraph relating to Ecclesiastical matters, which is as follows:—

"It is also urgent that you should apply yourselves to the prosecution and completion of those measures which have been recommended by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners of England, for the purpose of increasing the efficiency of the Established Church, and of confirming its hold upon the affections and respect of my people."

LAW.

ARCHES' COURT.

DECEMBER 12.

THE OFFICE OF THE JUDGE PROMOTED BY BREEKS AGAINST WOOLFREY.

SIR H. JENNER gave sentence in this case, which was argued on the 19th of November.

The learned Judge began by observing, that it was due to the arguments which had been addressed to the Court by the learned counsel who had argued the case on either side, that he should have taken time to consider of his judgment, and also to look into the authorities which had been cited; he had been ready to give his judgment on the by-day of the term, but the counsel having been engaged before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, and it being unusual to deliver the judgment of the Court in such cases in the absence of counsel, he had fixed this as an additional court-day for the purpose. It unfortunately happened, however, that counsel were absent from the same cause this day likewise; but it would be inconvenient to the parties to postpone his judgment longer. It was a cause of office promoted by the Rev. George Breeks, vicar of the parish of Carisbrooke, in the diocese of Winchester, against Mary Woolfrey, of the same parish, widow, citing her to answer to certain articles addressed to her "for her soul's health, and for the lawful correction of her manners and excesses," which is the usual language of citations, and more especially for having unduly and illegally erected, or caused to be erected, a certain tombstone in the churchyard of the said parish to the memory of Joseph Woolfrey, late of the parish, deceased, with a certain inscription thereon, contrary to the articles, canons, and constitutions, or to the doctrine and discipline of the Church of England. The cause was brought by letters of request from the diocese of Winchester (this Court having no original jurisdiction), the Chancellor of that diocese having consented to refer the matter to this Court, which he had a right to do; this Court, therefore, had no alternative but to accept the letters of request; for it was not contended—nay, it was admitted, that if the inscription was of the character attributed to it in the citation, no person had a right to erect a tombstone with an inscription impugning the doctrines and discipline of the Church of England, and that a person so offending was liable to be punished, and the tombstone to be removed. The question then was, whether the inscription had been properly described in the citation, and the additional offence laid in the articles, that it was erected without leave of the incumbent, did not appear on the face of the citation. The question, therefore, was confined to the legality of the inscription. The inscription set forth in the articles was "Pray for the soul of Joseph Woolfrey," and "It is a holy and wholesome thought to pray for the dead." 2 Maccab. xii. 46. Now, from the nature of the case, which was a criminal proceeding, the burden of proof was on the party setting up the illegality of the inscription. The minister of the parish was the proper party to proceed, if the inscription was of the character described, for he was bound to remove what was a scandal to the parishioners resorting to the parish church and contrary to the rites and ceremonies of the Church of England as by law established. To the incumbent belonged the superintendence of the Church and churchyard, and it was his duty to take care that no inscriptions should be placed there which could be made the means of disseminating doctrines inconsistent with those of the established religion. The articles purported to state the law, and the facts to which the law was to be applied. The first article alleged that, by the 22d article of the Church of England, it was declared that the Romish doctrine concerning purgatory, pardon, and other things therein mentioned, is "a fond thing, vainly invented, and grounded upon no warranty of Scripture, but rather repugnant to the word of God." It then went on to state, that the defendant, notwithstanding, did erect a tomb or headstone in the churchyard of Carisbrooke, to the memory of her husband, on which were the beforementioned inscriptions, both of which it is alleged, are contrary to the doctrine and discipline of the Church of England, and to the articles, canons, and constitutions thereof; that notice had been given to Mrs. Woolfrey to remove the stone, and that she had refused, or neglected to do so, and that the same still remains; and the last article concludes with praying that she may be peremptorily monished to remove the stone, and be canonically corrected and punished, and condemned in the costs. The law then principally relied on is the 22d article of 1562; for although there is a general reference to the other articles, canons, and constitutions of the Church, the canon principally relied on is the 22d. In the argument in support of the articles against the defendant it was urged that the 22d article, in declaring the Romish doctrine of purgatory to be repugnant to the word of God, did in effect declare, that the offering of prayers for the dead was also opposed to the word of God, as constituting part of the doctrine of purgatory; for that the two were so intimately blended together, that it was impossible to separate the one from the other; consequently an inscription inviting passers-by to pray for the soul of Joseph Woolfrey, and containing the passage from the Maccabees, was an illegal inscription. It appeared to him that the point upon which the whole question turned was, whether praying for the dead was so necessarily connected with the Romish doctrine of purgatory as to form a part of it. It was no doubt true, that the doctrine of purgatory included the practice of praying for the dead, but it did not necessarily follow that the converse of the proposition was true—that is, that prayers for the dead necessarily constituted a part of the doctrine of purgatory as held by the Romish church. If that fact could be made out, there would be an end of the case. Many authorities had been cited in support of the different views of the counsel in the cause, and to some of them it would be necessary for the Court to advert. The counsel had very properly abstained from the theological part of the question; and it would not be proper for the Court to take upon itself the duty of inquiring whether the doctrine of purgatory, as received by the Romish church, was or was not supported by any warranty of Scripture. The law, that is, the 22d canon, had expressly stated, that it was "grounded upon no warranty of Scripture, but rather repugnant to the word of God;" and by this law he was bound to govern himself. The question, then, shortly was this—is praying for the dead involved in the doctrine of purgatory? and with a view to deciding that question, the first thing to determine was, what is the doctrine of purgatory as received in the Romish church? As far as he had been able to learn, it did not appear that there had been any declaration of the doctrine of purgatory by any general council, till that of Florence, in 1438, which contained the first allusion to the doctrine. This was afterwards followed up by the Council of Trent in 1563. It would appear, according to the best authorities to which the Court had access, that the notion of purgatory was first introduced about the fifth or sixth century. Bishop Tomline, in vol. ii. of his "Elements of Christian Theology," states that "the practice of praying for the dead began in the third century; but it was not till long afterwards that purgatory was even mentioned among Christians. It was at first doubtfully received, and was not fully established until the papacy of Gregory the Great, in the beginning of the seventh century." The doctrine then introduced, and which is declared by the 22d article of our church to be repugnant to the word of God, is described in the catechism of Trent:—"Purgatory is a fire, in which the souls of the pious are purged by torment for a definite period, that an entrance may be opened for them to an eternal home, into which nothing polluted can enter." It was also a part of the doctrine that the pains of purgatory may be alleviated or shortened by the prayers of the living, by masses, and by thanksgivings. This doctrine being declared by the Church of England to be without warranty of Scripture, the question was, whether prayer for the dead fell under the same condemnation. Now, the first argument that suggested itself against this supposition is, that prayer for the dead is a practice of a much earlier date than the introduction of the doctrine of purgatory, for it clearly appears that the doctrine of prayer for the dead prevailed amongst the early, if not the earliest, Christians, who had no notion of the doctrine of purgatory at that day. The object of prayers for the departed, offered by those who profess the Romish religion, is to relieve them from the pains of purgatory; but the object of the primitive Christians in their prayers for the dead was, that they might have rest and quiet in the interval between death and the resurrection, and that at the last day they might receive the perfect consummation of bliss. The learned Judge here cited the following passage from Bishop Taylor's "Dissuasive from Popery," vol. x. :—"There are two great causes of their mistaken pretensions in this article from antiquity. The first is, that the ancient churches in their officers, and the fathers in their writings, did teach and practise respectively prayers for the dead. Now because the church of Rome does so too, and more than so—relates her prayers to the doctrine of purgatory, and for the souls there detained—her doctors vainly suppose that whenever the holy fathers speak of prayer for the dead, they conclude for purgatory; which vain conjecture is as false as it is unreasonable; for it is true that the fathers did pray for the dead—but how? 'That God should show them mercy, and hasten the resurrection, and give a blessed sentence in the great day.' But then it is also to be remembered, that they made prayers and offered for those who, by the confession of all sides, never were in purgatory, even for the patriarchs and prophets, for the apostles and evangelists, for martyrs and confessors, and especially for the blessed Virgin Mary. And he cites authorities, Epiphanius, St. Cyril, and others. 'Upon what account,' he adds, 'the Fathers did pray for the saints departed, and indeed generally for all, it is not now seasonable to discourse; but to say this only, that such general prayers for the dead as those above-mentioned the Church of England never did condemn by any express article, but left it in the middle. But (he adds) she expressly condemns the doctrine of purgatory, and consequently all prayers for the dead relating to it.' And in the 11th vol. (p. 58) he shows, that though the ancient Fathers of the Church did sanction prayers for the dead, they did not even know the Romish doctrine of purgatory. Again, Archbishop Ussher says, 'our Romanists do commonly take it for granted that purgatory and prayer for the dead be so closely linked together, that the one doth necessarily follow the other; but in so doing they greatly mistake the matter, for howsoever they may deal with their own devices as they please, and link their prayers with their purgatory as closely as they list, yet shall they never be able to show that the commemoration and prayers for the dead used by the ancient Church had any relation with their purgatory.' Without reference to any other authorities, which were numerous on this point, it was clear that long before there was any notion of the doctrine of purgatory prayers for the dead were offered by the primitive Church. But it had been said, that whatever might be the case in the early ages, the Church of England had taken a different view of the subject; and with reference to what had taken place in the earliest times of the Reformation, and subsequently, that though prayers for the dead were not considered in the first instance contrary to the principles of the Christian religion in later ages, they had been considered as opposed to the principles and doctrines of the Church, which had been shown by the alterations made at different times in its liturgy. The learned judge then referred to the alterations made in the Book of Common Prayer in the reign of Edward VI. It was true that the Prayer-book compiled for the public use of the Church was prepared by persons of great eminence and learning, called together by the King to consider the alterations necessary to be made in the public service of the Church, in consequence of the progress of the reformation of the established religion. It was not immaterial to see the manner in which the first Prayer-book had been compiled, and he could refer to no authority more satisfactory than the act of Parliament by which the book was established—namely, the 2d and 3d of Edward VI. cap. 1, which was entitled “An Act for the Uniformity of Service and Administration of Sacraments throughout the Realm.” The recital set forth that to the intent a uniform, quiet, and Godly order should be had, his highness, with the advice of his council, had appointed the Archbishop of Canterbury, and certain of the most learned and discreet bishops, and other learned men of this realm, “to consider and ponder as well the premises, and thereupon, having eye and respect to the most sincere and pure Christian religion taught by the Scripture, as well as to the usages in the primitive Church, should draw and make one convenient order, rite, and fashion of common and open prayer and administration of the sacraments to be had and used in His Majesty’s realm of England and Wales.” These, then, were the views with which this book of prayer was directed to be drawn up, “having as well respect to the most sincere and pure Christian religion taught by Scripture, as to the usages in the primitive Church,” and they drew up the first Prayer-book of Edward VI. with reference to these principles. Now, in this Prayer-book prayers for the dead were still ordered to be used, (though they were in some degree altered from those in the Primer of Henry VIII.) and, therefore, it must be presumed that the compilers of that Prayer-book did not consider that such prayers were necessarily connected with the doctrine of purgatory. This first Prayer-book of Edward VI. was afterwards revised, and some parts of it with reference to the communion service and the burial service were omitted, and amongst the passages omitted were those which related to prayers for the dead; and it had been argued from this omission, that the persons who were employed to revise the first Prayer-book of Edward VI. did not consider these prayers as consistent with the doctrines of the Church of England as then established; and that, therefore, if there is no express prohibition of prayers for the dead, by necessary implication the Church of England had decided that they were inconsistent with its doctrines. But what was the principle on which these prayers had been omitted? Various authorities had been referred to in support of the proposition that it was in consequence of a belief that the prayers were inconsistent with the doctrines of the Church of England, and several writers did take that view of the subject. But all agreed that there had been no express prohibition of prayers for the dead; it must therefore be taken to be by necessary implication that they were prohibited. It appeared, however, from writers and historians, that these alterations in the liturgy in the second Prayer-book of Edward VI. were principally acceded to at the instance of Calvin and Bucer, though he (the learned judge) had not been able to find the precise grounds on which the omissions were made in the writers he had referred to. But he thought that there was one authority at least to show that the surrender of this part of the first Prayer-book was not, that in the opinion of the majority of the persons employed in its revision, they were inconsistent with the doctrines of the Church of England. The act of Parliament by which the second Prayer-book of Edward VI. was established, the 5th and 6th Edward VI. c. 1, also entitled “An Act for the Uniformity of Service and Administration of Sacraments throughout the realm,” in its recital, which must be taken to express the sentiments of the majority of the Legislature, stated—“Where (whereas) there hath been a very godly order set forth by the authority of Parliament for common prayer and administration of the sacraments, to be used in the mother tongue within the Church of England, agreeable to the word of God and the primitive Church,” adopting the words of the former act, which enjoined “a regard to the religion taught by Scripture, and to the usages in the primitive Church;” “very comfortable to all good people desiring to live in Christian conversation, and most profitable to the estates of the realm, upon the which the mercy, favour, and blessing of Almighty God are in nowise so readily and plentifully poured as by common prayers, due using of the sacraments, and preaching of the Gospel with the devotion of the hearers.” And it goes on to state, that “yet notwithstanding a great number of people do wilfully abstain and refuse to come to their parish churches, and other places, where common prayer, the administration of the sacraments, and preaching of the word of God is used;” and in the fifth section it sets forth, “and because there hath arisen in the use and exercise of the aforesaid common service in the Church heretofore set forth, divers doubts for the fashion and manner of the ministration of the same, rather by the curiosity of the ministers and mistakers than of any other worthy cause; therefore, as well for the more plain and manifest explanation thereof, as for the more perfection of the said order of common service, in some places where it is necessary to make the same prayers and fashion of service more earnest and fit to stir Christian people to the true honouring of Almighty God;” and it goes on to set forth that the King and Parliament had caused the Book of Common Prayer “to be faithfully and godly perused, explained, and made fully perfect.” This act had been repealed by the 1st of Mary, which was itself repealed by the 1st of Elizabeth, c. 2, which restored the 5th and 6th of Edward VI. Now, up to this period of time, it seemed that at least there was not any express prohibition of prayers for the dead, nor any notion that they implied a necessary belief in the doctrine of purgatory, though, in consequence of professors of the Romish religion taking advantage of the practice as an argument to support their own doctrine of purgatory, it was thought proper that the form of prayer should be altered, and those prayers omitted in the public service of the Church, as not being enjoined (which is admitted) or sanctioned by any warranty of Scripture. It seemed to him that all the authorities went no further than this—to show that the Church discouraged prayers for the dead, but did not prohibit them; and that the 22d article is not violated by the use of such prayers. The ground on which the Church consented to the omission of these prayers could not, perhaps, be better stated than by Mr. Palmer in his “Origines Liturgicæ,” to this effect—“When the custom of praying for the dead began in the Christian Church has never been ascertained. We find traces of the practice in the second century, and either then, or shortly after, it appears to have been customary in all parts of the Church. The first person who objected to such prayer was Aërius, who lived in the fourth century; but his arguments were answered by various writers, and did not produce any effect in altering the immemorial practice of praying for those that rest. Accordingly, from that time, all the liturgies in the world contain such prayers. Some persons will perhaps say that this sort of prayer is unscriptural; that it infers either the Romish doctrine of purgatory, or something else, which is contrary to the will of God, or the nature of things. But when we reflect that the great divines of the English Church have not taken this ground, and that the Church of England herself has never formally condemned prayers for the dead, but only omitted them in her liturgy, we may perhaps think that there are some other reasons to justify that omission.” And then this learned writer proceeded to state the probable reason of the omission of these prayers in the liturgy of the English church—namely, that they might be abused to the prejudice of the uneducated classes, to the support of the Roman Catholic doctrine of purgatory. He (the learned Judge) was therefore of opinion that in this case there had been no violation of the 22d article of the church, so as to call for punishment by ecclesiastical censure. The 22d article did not prohibit prayers for the dead, unless so far as they necessarily involved the doctrine of purgatory, and he considered the inscription had not been shown to be a violation of that article. But it was said that other articles of the church had been violated, and reference had been made to the 35th article, which was to this effect:—“That the second book of homilies contained ‘a godly and wholesome doctrine, and necessary for these times, as doth the former book of homilies, which were set forth in the time of Edward VI., and therefore we judge them to be read in churches by the ministers diligently and distinctly, that they may be understood of the people.’” And it had been said that in the 7th homily, on prayer, the practice of praying for the dead was declared to be an erroneous doctrine, and therefore as the homilies were directed to be read in churches for the edification of the people, it must be necessarily inferred that they were forbidden and prohibited by the Church of England. Now, if this were clearly so, it would seem somewhat extraordinary that many divines of the Church should, in the face of these articles, and of the homilies, have fallen into the error of believing that the Church of England had not prohibited prayers for the dead, but merely discouraged them; but it was still more extraordinary, that considering the violent disputes which had occurred with respect to this point, there had been no express prohibition of the practice in the canons of 1562. If it had been the intention of the Church to have forbidden the practice, surely there would have been an express and distinct prohibition of it. In looking to the homily it must be considered what was the purpose for which it was composed—namely, to discourage the practice of praying for the dead as connected with the doctrine of purgatory; but in no part of the homily was it declared that the practice of praying for the dead is unlawful—merely that it is useless—that prayers for the dead could have no effect in altering the condition of the dead, and that in the word of God we have no commandment so to do; and referring to St. Chrysostom and St. Cyprian, it is said, “Let these and such other places be sufficient to take away the gross error of purgatory out of our heads, neither let us dream any more that the souls of the dead are anything at all holpen by our prayers.” It seemed clearly to have been the intention of the composer of the homily to discourage the practice of praying for the dead; but it did not appear that in any part of the homily he declares the practice to be an unlawful one. But supposing he had been of opinion that such prayers were unlawful, it is not to be necessarily inferred that the Church of England adopted every part of the doctrines contained in the homilies. If it had been the opinion of the framers of the articles and canons of the Church that prayers for the dead were opposed to the Scriptures, they would have expressly declared their illegality, as condemned by the Scriptures, and opposed to the doctrines of pure religion. On this part of the case, then, he was of opinion that there had been no violation of any of the articles of the Church. No other articles had been referred to specifically to make out the proposition that the Church considered prayers for the dead as an illegal practice. But it had been urged in this case, that the person by whom the tombstone had been erected being a Roman Catholic, it must be supposed that the invitation contained in the inscription, to pray for the dead, had a necessary reference to the doctrine of purgatory as received by the Church of which she is a member; and that the inscription must be taken in a Roman Catholic sense, because the quotation from the Maccabees was taken from the Roman Catholic version of the Bible, and not from that authorized by the Church of England. Now he thought this argument not sufficient to authorize him to put any other construction on the inscription than the words would bear, according to their plain meaning. It was true that the version did not agree with the English translation (in fact, in our translation, there was not a 46th verse in the 12th chapter of Maccabees); but the question was not whether the version was correct or not, but whether the meaning was or was not inconsistent with that contained in the English version. Now, it was impossible to read the English version and not see that the sense of the quotation was the same in both; and that the reconciliation spoken of by Judas meant a reconciliation of the dead with a view to the resurrection. Whether the doctrine was taken from the text according to the Romish or English version, the question was whether it was a violation of the articles, canons, and constitutions of our Church? Was it contrary to Scripture? That was the view he must take of the case, sitting there as an ecclesiastical judge. If anything arose from the circumstance of the party being a Roman Catholic, or from the sense in which the words of the inscription were understood by the Romish Church, it should have been specifically pleaded; for the Court had no judicial information of the existence of a Roman Catholic Bible. He should conclude this part of the case with one observation—what had been the practice of eminent divines of the Church of England? It was correctly stated in the argument, that an inscription was placed on the tombstone of Bishop Barrow, in the cathedral of St. Asaph in 1680, to this effect—“O vos, transeuntes in domum Domini, in domum orationis, orate pro conservo vestro, ut inveniat misericordiam in die Domini.” It was not possible to conceive that Bishop Barrow would have suffered such an inscription to be placed upon his tomb if he had believed that it was contrary to the doctrine and discipline of the Church to which he had belonged. He was then of opinion, on the whole of the case, that the offence imputed by the articles had not been sustained; that no authority or canon had been pointed out by which the practice had been expressly prohibited; and he was accordingly of opinion, that, if the articles were proved, the facts would not subject the party to ecclesiastical censure, as far as regarded the illegality of the inscription on the tombstone. That part of the articles must therefore be rejected. The other branch of the case was subject to different considerations—namely, the erection of the stone without the consent of the incumbent, which was an ecclesiastical offence. It had been suggested in the argument, that the proceeding on this branch of the case should have been in a civil form, by monition; but it seemed to him that this was the proper form of proceeding; he was not aware of any case in which a different form had been followed. But this offence had not been specified in the decree or citation served on the party. The only ground of illegality on the face of the citation consisted in the inscription; the erecting, or causing to be erected, a monument, without leave of the incumbent, was a distinct and separate offence, which should have been set forth in the citation, in order that the party cited might know what she was called upon to answer. He was clearly of opinion, that according to the law and practice of the Court, the citation was insufficient to raise the question whether the consent of the incumbent had been obtained or not; and on this part of the case, likewise, he was of opinion that the articles were inadmissible. The Court, therefore, on this view of the case, was bound to reject the articles altogether, and to dismiss the party.

Dr. BLAKE, on the part of the defendant, applied for the costs.

Sir H. JENNER said, if the costs were pressed, he was not aware that the Court had any discretion.

Dr. BLAKE was instructed to press for costs, and Sir H. JENNER directed that the party should be dismissed with costs.

The QUEEN'S ADVOCATE wished to guard himself against misapprehension. He had not stated that the defendant was a Roman Catholic, or implied that there should be one law for one, and another for another.

Sir H. JENNER.—No; I only understood you to argue, that as the party was a Roman Catholic, the inscription must be taken in a Roman Catholic sense.—Times.

* * A correspondent requests us to insert the Bishop of London's animadversions on this judgment of Sir Herbert Jenner. We are authorized to state, that the Bishop of London never made any such animadversions. If the judgment is as erroneous as our correspondent supposes it to be, it cannot stand. At all events, the remedy, or rather the prevention of the evils, to which it might otherwise have given rise, is in the hands of every incumbent. No tombstone can legally be erected without his permission.

TOMBSTONES AND EPITAPHS.

To the Editor of the Standard.

Sir,—It has been inferred in some of the public prints, since the judgment respecting the Papistical inscription, that the freehold of a churchyard is vested only in the rector. Considering this to be a question in which all incumbents who are not rectors are deeply concerned, I have taken the opinion of an eminent counsel, and I subjoin the questions, with the answer of Sir Frederick Pollock, for the information of my clerical brethren.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

J. B. ATKINSON,

Perpetual Curate of Cowes, and Rector of Kingstone.

Jan. 19, 1839.

QUESTIONS.

1st. In whom, by the law of England, is the freehold of the churchyard vested in those parishes where the incumbent minister is vicar or perpetual curate?

2d. Has any person the right to erect a headstone in the churchyard without the consent of the incumbent minister, whether rector, vicar, or perpetual curate; and is there any difference in this respect between a parish having a lay impropriator (who is owner of the great tithes, or a part of them) and a vicar who is the incumbent minister, as in Carisbrooke, and a parish where the incumbent minister is also the rector?

ANSWERS.

1st. I am of opinion that “the soil and freehold of the church and churchyard belong to the parson.” 2 Cro. 367; Com. Dig., title “Eglise” (George I.); and I think the parson is the rector, vicar, or perpetual curate, according as the cure of souls belongs to one or other of these ecclesiastical persons.

2d. Whether in some places there may be a custom, or, as to some families or persons, a prescription to erect a headstone, monument, or memorial, I cannot undertake to say; but, generally, I am of opinion that any person has not a right to erect such memorial as he may think proper (or I think any memorial) without the consent of the parson, whether rector, vicar, or perpetual curate, and for this purpose I think there is no difference between the case of a rector and vicar, (the great tithes, or part of them, being in a lay impropriator,) or a perpetual curate.

CONSISTORY COURT.

FRIDAY, JAN. 18.

SPRY v. THE DIRECTORS AND GUARDIANS OF THE POOR OF ST. MARYLEBONE.

Dr. LUSHINGTON gave judgment in this case, which was argued last term. It was a suit by the Rev. Dr. Spry, rector of the parish of St. Marylebone, against the directors and guardians of the poor for burial fees on the interment of paupers in the new cemetery of the parish. The first question was, what jurisdiction had the Ecclesiastical Court over the subject? Some jurisdiction these courts had been permitted to exercise, because the courts of common law, where prohibitions issued, granted them on special grounds, which admitted the existence of the jurisdiction. The limitations affixed to this jurisdiction restricted it to fees due to the clergyman for spiritual duties, such fees being due by custom, and the duties being actually performed. Customary burial fees might, therefore, be sued for here; at least until the custom was denied. The subject, however, was not without difficulty; for no such suit had been brought for a century past; nor did it appear who were liable for those fees. The libel in the present case alleged that a customary fee of 1s. 6d. had been paid out of the poor-rate on the interment of paupers for a century prior to the local act of 51st George III., which fees were confirmed in 1703 by the chancellor of the diocese, and were paid by the churchwardens and overseers, till the appointment of the directors and guardians, who continued to pay them till June, 1838; that a new burial-ground had been made by virtue of a local act, and that the directors had power to settle a rate of fees for burial there, which they had not yet done. Now even suppose these fees had been for the ancient burial-ground, received for about a century, would they be customary fees? He apprehended not; for they were not alleged to be immemorial fees, and they had been paid out of the poor-rate, which disproved their ancient origin; nor could the chancellor of the diocese, of his own authority, create a new fee for common burial. It had been said, however, that the demand rested specially on the acts of Parliament. The statute which governed the case was the 51st George III. c. 151, which directed that a minister should be appointed for the burial of the dead in the new ground, and that the vestrymen were to settle the rates and fees. Now, it was expressly pleaded that the vestrymen had never exercised the power of settling the rates and fees. This appeared to dispose of the whole question. The act of Parliament did not say that, on the non-exercise of this power by the vestrymen, the same fees were to be taken in the new burial-ground as in the old. The ground, the fees, and all belonging to it, were the creation of the act, and did not depend on the common law. The act had provided a proper mode of proceeding; and if the vestrymen had neglected to comply therewith, he (the learned Judge) could not say that there were any fees legally existing at all. The case was not without a remedy, for the vestrymen might be compelled by mandamus to fix the rates and fees. But the case did not rest here. The act did not give this Court any jurisdiction, or even say how payment was to be enforced. This Court had jurisdiction only over ancient and customary fees. There was another point: The suit was against the directors and guardians of the poor, who appeared by their clerk, as their nominee. But they were not a corporation entitled to sue and be sued by their clerk, though the vestrymen might be; but the vestrymen were not the directors and guardians. Suppose the fees were legal, and the Court had jurisdiction, how could it enforce its decree against such a defendant? Could the Court pronounce this gentleman in contempt for non-payment of the fees, and cause a significavit to issue for his confinement? For these reasons, the learned Judge felt bound to reject the libel and dismiss the party, but he gave no costs.

IMPORTANT TO THE CLERGY.

TITHE COMMUTATION.

BAIL COURT, COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

(Before Mr. Justice Patteson.)

THE QUEEN v. THE TITHE COMMISSIONERS.

Sir W. FOLLETT applied to the Court for a mandamus commanding them to cause evidence to be heard as to the value of the Tithes in a parish called Tarrant Gunville, in the county of Dorset, (which Living is in the gift of the Master and Fellows of University College, Oxford). The application was made on the part of the rector, the Rev. John Watts, who stated that he had entered with the principal land-holder of the parish, James John Farquharson, Esq., into a composition of a peculiar kind. According to this agreement, the land-owner, besides the money to be paid under the composition, was bound to furnish and deliver at the parsonage-house, four good loads of wheat straw, and was also bound to bring a certain quantity of coals from the town of Poole, and to do other things, which very much increased the value of the composition beyond the mere amount of the rent-charge agreed to in exchange for the tithes. The act of Parliament had directed that the Commissioners should settle the value of the tithes at the average of the seven years preceding 1835, and directed that where there existed a composition, that should be taken as the average annual value; provided that where notice should be given to the Commissioners of any circumstance which had the effect of preventing the composition from being a correct representation of the average value, it should, in that case, be in the power of the Commissioners to increase the amount of the composition by a sum not exceeding one-fifth of the amount. The statute also provided that a report presented to Parliament by the original Tithe Commissioners should have the same force and validity as if it had been enacted in Parliament; and that report had recommended that whenever the Assistant Commissioners were under any difficulty about ascertaining the value in any parish, they should receive evidence of compositions and voluntary commutations in neighbouring parishes, similar in quality and position, to assist them in ascertaining the value of the parish in question. All the circumstances which have been mentioned existed in the present case; but the Assistant Commissioner refused to take into consideration any reference to compositions and voluntary commutations in adjoining parishes.

Mr. Justice Patteson considered that the refusal of the Commissioner to act on the recommendation of the report, was, in substance, a refusal to obey an act of Parliament. His Lordship, therefore, granted the rule.

WHAT ARE OUR UNIVERSITIES DOING?

It remains that we make some calculation of the amount of influence thus exercised by the University of Oxford, that we may see clearly what is to be expected in a political point of view from her continued and unintermittent exertions. Now the number of men who annually take Degrees at Oxford may be reckoned at about 300, and considering their age and circumstances we may fairly assume that they will live, from the time they leave the University, on an average, thirty-three years. Thus the number of persons at any one time in the country who have taken their bias immediately from Oxford is probably about 10,000. The adult male population, however, of the whole United Kingdom cannot be computed much to exceed six millions; and so there is a monitor furnished by this University alone to every six hundred men throughout the country; and as, even under our present representative system, not a sixth of these possess the elective franchise, to every one hundred electors Oxford supplies a guide and an instructor. It is not, however, in number that our strength consists—it is in rank, in station, in talent, and in character. They whom we send forth are the sons of our nobility, of our gentry, of our clergy, of our great merchants, of our men of letters. Among them, especially, are a large proportion of those who, at the various schools and seminaries throughout the realm have given indications of unusual ability. Hence, almost every individual forms, in after life, the centre of a circle, wider or narrower in its compass of persons, who listen to him with respect, and are prepared to take their opinions from him. They move, too, as I observed in the outset, in every phase of society, in every rank and grade of life. The Bar is crowded with them, the senate teems with them, the literature of the country is one-half of it the work of their hands. But chiefly are they powerful as teachers in our holy church; scattered over the entire country in that capacity, influential by their learning, by their zeal, by their holy lives, and, above all, by the natural weight of the principles which they advocate, and by their sacred office, the opinions and feelings of their flocks are in a great measure dependent on the doctrines they inculcate. Nor is there any necessity for studiously introducing political subjects to their hearers—they cannot, if they would, avoid them. Political subjects are inextricably intertwined with all the principles of human conduct; and every precept of Christianity is plainly, or by implication, a prohibition of democratic feeling. It is their duty, however, at all times to dwell most frequently and most forcibly on those commands which most evidently forbid that conduct and that frame of mind to which they know their hearers are most prone: and on this principle, in times like the present, they will ever earnestly inculcate the duties of submission to authorities, of resignation, and of contentment. Here it is that Oxford is working in secret; she is combatting the malady directly in the seat of the disease—she is fighting the enemy in his stronghold—she is quieting, pacifying, and purifying the lower orders—she is making them better Christians, and, by a necessary consequence, more loyal subjects. And it is to this humble quarter that we must chiefly look for the effects of her magnificent system: it is also from this quarter, humble though it be, that our political regeneration must commence. The tyranny of the mob, the triumph of physical force over right, and justice, and order, and authority, is the evil we have most to dread. In vain do we educate, in vain do we Christianize the high-born and the opulent few, if we leave the poor and lowly many in ignorance and irreligion.—The Iris, a new Quarterly Magazine.

MISCELLANEOUS INTELLIGENCE.

CHURCH EXTENSION.

As some aids towards calculating the progress which church building has already made in various parts of the kingdom, the following facts may be stated with reference to four dioceses:—

London.—The Bishop of London has consecrated in this diocese, since 1828, 60 new churches. His lordship, as Bishop of Chester, to which diocese he was appointed in 1824, had consecrated 27; in all 87 churches. He has also consecrated 39 burial-grounds in the diocese of London.

Winchester.—The number of churches consecrated in this diocese within the last ten years is 59, and between 200 and 300 more have been enlarged or improved.

Chester.—The number of churches consecrated in this diocese by the present bishop during ten years is 103; churches now building in the diocese, 35; chapels not consecrated, but having their own ministers, 20.

Gloucester and Bristol.—The bishop has consecrated 8 new churches since 1830, and 6 others are in the course of building.

The executors of the late Rev. W. Richardson, of the city of Chester, have this week paid to the treasurer of the Incorporated Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, a bequest of 2000*l.*, free of duty.

DISSENTING RETURNS.

To the Editor of the Oxford Herald.

Sir,—May I beg a corner to beseech my brethren of the Parochial Clergy to lose no time in examining the educational returns lately transmitted to the Home Secretary? In my own parish I find a sex-tuple multiplication has been effected.

The number of children receiving a Dissenting (Wesleyan) education being a little under 40. The number returned as receiving the education being 229!!!

The first process in this improved Dissenting arithmetic is to count each child twice over—once as a daily scholar; a second time as a Sunday scholar. This, of course, just doubles the whole. The next process is to return the remaining 89 children (supposing such children to exist) as belonging to this one parish, whereas they are really gathered out of the four or five adjoining ones, in which parishes, I doubt not, they are again reckoned. Within a mile of the site of this pious fraud, a Church school is by the returns given wholesale to the Dissenters. The form of return recognizes but two classes of schools;—those in connection with the National Society, and those not in connection, or Dissenting schools. The school in question, though strictly a Church school, is not in connection with the National Society, and is, therefore, returned as belonging to Dissenters! A few authenticated facts of this nature placed in the hands of Members of Parliament, would enable them to expose this infamous collusion between the Ministry and the Dissenters.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant, C.
* * I subjoin my name and residence, for your private satisfaction.

THE DISSENTERS.

The Protestant Society for the Protection of Religious Liberty, have recently put forth a statement of their objects, with regard to the present Session of Parliament, which we publish, in the hope that it may serve to open the eyes of some of the members of our Church, who still continue to make common cause with Dissenters upon matters of religion. They complain of "most cruel and outrageous persecutions and riots (!) instigated by Tories and churchmen, by clergymen, magistrates, and persons of yet higher rank;" which "have proved that even in these days toleration is but imperfectly enjoyed, and that established superstition and selfishness pant to re-assume an harsh and extortionate dominion throughout the land." Where these dreadful proceedings took place, it is difficult to conjecture; for though they affect to name some of the counties in which they happened, they carefully abstain from naming one single place. Their objects however, are stated clearly enough: they are as follow:—

"4. That the approaching Session of Parliament will demand from this Committee, and from all who are not heedless of the best interests of their country and mankind, prompt, combined, and energetic exertions for—

"The Abolition of Church Rates,
"The Religious Education of the People on just and liberal Principles,

"The Protection of pious and Dissenting Poor in Workhouses,

"The Exemption of Dissenters from the oppressions of the Ecclesiastical Courts, and for the prevention—

"Of a New Establishment of Chaplains in Union Poor-houses,

"Of a Church extension in Scotland from the public Revenue,

"Of Grants for New Churches in England,

"Of the Misappropriation to Episcopalians in Canada of the National Lands,

"And of New Episcopalian Sees in our Colonial Possessions,

"As well as for the complete and final removal of the wrongs and grievances so often enumerated, and by which Dissenters are prejudiced and debased, and of which they have, long unavailingly, but most justly complained,

"And, 5. That to express the opinions of this Committee to their fellow-countrymen and the legislature, these resolutions be printed and advertised, and petitions be presented to both Houses of Parliament; and that to accelerate the accomplishment of wishes founded on truth and experience, they exhort all Dissenting congregations throughout the empire to forward petitions for these objects, so noble and urgent, without any delay; and to exert their legitimate influence over the members for their counties and towns, to induce them to give these matters their serious attention, and to afford to all efforts made for their attainment their strenuous and much-needed support.

King's College, London.—Death of the Rev. H. J. Rose.—The subjoined is a copy of a minute of the council of this institution, in reference to the decease of the late principal of the college:—"The council, having been informed of the death of the Rev. Hugh James Rose, late principal of the college, which event took place at Florence on the 22d of December last, are desirous of expressing the deep concern with which they have received this intelligence, and of recording their grateful sense of the conscientious and efficient manner in which their late lamented principal discharged the duties of his office, while bearing up against the pressure of an enfeebled constitution and failing health. Valuable as were the services for which this institution was indebted to him, the council are well aware that they formed but a part of those which his great talents, his varied learning, his ardent piety, and his unwearied energy, enabled him to render to the Church at large, to the interests of sound learning, and to the cause of religious education."

An injunction has been issued by the Right Rev. Dr. Griffiths, the Roman Catholic bishop of the London district, prohibiting the "faithful" under his particular tutelage from allowing all Protestant or Dissenting persons in their employ the use of flesh meat on those days which the Catholic church, in her wisdom, has fixed upon as days of abstinence and fasting. This injunction is said to be confined to the London district.—Evening Paper.

New Charity Schools of St. George's, Southwark.—On Monday, Jan. 14, the National and Charity School-house of the parish of St. George-the-Martyr, Southwark, recently erected in the Borough-road, was formally opened for the reception of the scholars. The building, which is a neat Gothic erection, forms a striking ornament to that much-improved suburban district, and comprises a school-room capable of receiving and accommodating 300 boys, a second school-room for 150 girls, together with convenient apartments for the master and mistress.

Abolition of Church Rates.—At an interview which a deputation from the Committee of the Church-rate Abolition Society had, a few days ago, with the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the right honourable gentleman stated it to be the intention of ministers to move, at an early period of the next session of Parliament, for the re-appointment of the Committee on Church Leases, for the purpose of their completing the evidence, and agreeing upon a report to the house. He further gave the deputation an assurance, expressed in general but distinct terms, that it was the intention of Government to persevere in their endeavours to effect the abolition of Church-rates.—Ministerial Paper.

PROVINCIAL.

Leeds District Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge.—We have much pleasure in drawing attention to the great success which has attended the operations of this venerable and truly excellent Society during the past year. Our readers will remember that, about twelve months ago, a plan was brought forward for dividing the town into districts, each to be under the care of the Clergyman and the Board of Visitors appointed by him, whose business it should be to canvass the district in order to provide all who might be in want of them with bibles, prayer-books, &c. This plan, we are happy to state, has fully succeeded; meetings to establish sub-committees in no less than 10 districts have been held, and such a degree of interest in the concerns of the Society has been excited as we have seldom witnessed. The exertions of the visitors have been beyond all praise: they have gone from door to door throughout their districts with the most patient assiduity, and truly Christian zeal, collecting the weekly payments of the poor, oftentimes in sums as low as 1d.: and when the amount sufficient for a bible or prayer-book has been raised, have displayed nearly as much gratification in carrying home to them the long wished for treasure as the joyful owners have felt in viewing it. At a meeting, for St. George's district, which took place at the close of the year, a beautiful copy of the holy Scriptures, with the book of common-prayer, was presented by the visitors and the clergy, under whom they were acting, to Henry Skelton, Jun., Esq., the devoted and indefatigable treasurer of the Leeds District Society, in testimony of their due appreciation of his most valuable services, and more particularly for his unwearied kindness and attention to the various district committees. The presentation was confided to the Rev. Doctor Hook, who, in doing it, passed a very warm eulogium upon Mr. Skelton. We trust that all concerned in this truly excellent Society, will renew their efforts with redoubled zeal, and we have no doubt, from its operations and the working of that most valuable institution, "the Church of England Library," which has been recently established, much, very much, will be done towards raising the religious and moral feelings of our dense population.—Leeds Intelligencer.

St. Mark's District Parish.—On Monday evening, pursuant to adjournment, the anniversary meeting of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, for the Woodhouse District, was held in the school-room at Feather-hill, and was numerously attended by persons of both sexes. The Rev. James Fawcett, incumbent of St. Mark's, ably presided, and opened the meeting with prayer, a statement of what had been done in the past year, and an exhortation to greater exertion in the present year. It appears that the books of the Society, consisting of bibles, testaments, prayer-books, and psalters, to the value of 40*l.*, have been taken, chiefly by the poor. This, said Mr. Fawcett, was far short of the wants of the district, yet it was an important and cheering beginning. But he begged to remind his hearers that as there were no surplus funds to remit to the parent institution, the Society had lost at least, in a money sense, ten pounds by what had been done; therefore he hoped that the wealthier inhabitants of the district would think of this and act upon it. Mr. Fawcett also stated that more collectors or visitors were needed, and he called for additional aid in this respect. Resolutions were then moved and seconded by the Rev. A. Craufurd, curate of St. Mark's, the Rev. G. S. Bull, of Bradford, R. Bramley, Esq., W. Skelton, Esq. (churchwarden), Henry Skelton, Esq., Mr. Perring, Mr. Frohisher, &c. Mr. Bull delivered two powerful and affecting speeches, and excited a deep feeling in behalf of the cause. The resolutions were all unanimously adopted; and the collection at the door was liberal. We are glad to see that a genuine Church feeling is rapidly extending itself in the Woodhouse District, as well as in all others where this excellent Society has been fairly brought into operation. But much remains to be done; and we call upon the friends of the Church not to relax in their efforts for the promotion of a cause which has for its object the glory of God, and the present and everlasting welfare of man. At the close of the meeting a most affectionate resolution of approbation of the devoted labours of the Rev. Chairman was moved by Mr. Perring, seconded by Mr. Bull, and cordially sanctioned by the meeting. The proceedings occupied upwards of two hours.—Leeds Intelligencer.

A meeting of the subscribers to the Oxford memorial was holden on the 31st of January in the Town-hall, to determine whether a new church should be erected in combination with the memorial of Cranmer, Ridley, and Latimer. Dr. Macbride, Principal of Magdalen-hall, was called to the chair, and was supported by the Vice-Chancellor and the Warden of New College. Several heads of colleges were present, and the meeting was numerously attended by members of the University and inhabitants. After several able speeches were made, discussing the subject, it was resolved by a great majority that a church should be combined with the memorial, and therefore the sums subscribed for each will be consolidated.

Very recently we had the pleasing duty of recording a princely donation by the Rev. Dr. Warneford in aid of the Gloucester Diocesan Church Building Society. We have now to state other instances of splendid liberality lately performed by the same much-respected gentleman. He has, we understand, given 4,000*l.* to the Radcliffe Lunatic Asylum at Oxford, 2,000*l.* to the Eye Institution in Cork-street, and 2,000*l.* to the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts. The mere announcement of this discriminating and benevolent munificence is in itself the best eulogium such conduct can receive, and renders comment superfluous. By dispensing his bounty during his life, Dr. Warneford has the satisfaction of feeling that no part of it is lost in the shape of legacy duty by the objects he wishes to benefit.—Gloucester Journal.

The Rev. J. W. Minton, the esteemed and much-respected minister of Darlington, and his brother, have given the very magnificent sum of 2,000*l.* towards the endowment of the church at present in course of erection at that place.

Bungay Church Rates.—On Thursday, Jan. 31, the complaint of the churchwardens against Mr. Charles Childs, for refusing to pay church-rates, came on for decision, having been adjourned from Thursday, the 3d inst. The defendant had proved by the evidence of Mr. Mann, the churchwarden, that property in the parish had not been assessed to the rate, and therefore contended that the rate was, upon the face of it, invalid, and the complaint must be dismissed. On this point the magistrates, Mr. J. L. Bedingfield and Mr. E. P. Montague, adjourned the case for consideration at the first hearing; and on Thursday Mr. Montague stated, they had decided that the property in question ought to have been assessed, and they should consequently give no judgment in the matter. If the churchwardens liked to carry the matter further, they could go to the Ecclesiastical Court. Accordingly the summons was discharged, with nine others which had been issued.—Essex Herald.

Registration Act.—At the Shropshire sessions, on Wednesday, Mr. E. Edmonds, the coroner for the Oswestry division of the county of Salop, was indicted for not complying with the Registration of Births and Deaths Act, in not sending to the district registrars certificates of those deaths on which he had held inquests as coroners, and for having refused to give such certificates when demanded of him. The case was proved against the defendant, and the honourable chairman in summing up said, that however vexatious the clauses of an act of Parliament might be, yet the subject was bound to obey them to the letter, as long as they remained the law of the land. The jury reluctantly found Mr. Edmonds "guilty," and the Court ordered him to enter into his own recognizances to appear to receive judgment, if called upon so to do.—Salopian Journal.

Consecration of the New Church at Cheadle.—The new parish church of Cheadle has been consecrated by the Lord Bishop of Hereford. It is a very splendid edifice in the Gothic style, containing nave, side aisles, chancel, and tower, at the west end, and will seat 1,500 persons. It is built by subscription.—Staffordshire Gazette.

The Duke of Somerset has given a piece of ground for the site of a new church at Holbeach, Devon.

Mr. Thomas Pemberton, M.P. for Ripon, has, we understand, sent 300*l.* to the Lord Bishop of Ripon for the Diocesan Church Building Society, and Earl Fitzwilliam 100*l.*, for the same laudable purpose.—Leeds Intelligence.

On Thursday evening, Jan. 3d, 1839, an address was presented from the parishioners of Saint Mary, Longfleet, to the Rev. W. B. Clarke, A.M., on quitting the scene of his recent labours for an ecclesiastical appointment in New South Wales.

On Tuesday, Dec. 11th, the new chapel of St. Clement's, Hastings, was consecrated by the Lord Bishop of Chichester, in the presence of a numerous assembly of clergy, resident gentry and visitors. This chapel is built on the barrack-ground, and is chiefly intended for the numerous and destitute population of that neighbourhood. It owes its erection chiefly to the munificent liberality of Mrs. Milward, assisted by the cordial co-operation of the Rev. J. G. Foyster, rector of the parish. The former has contributed 1000*l.* towards the endowment, 100*l.* towards the building, the ground on which it stands, and the stone used in its erection. The latter by himself and friends, upwards of 300*l.* towards the building, and the communion plate. The chapel is capable of containing 542 sittings, of which 362 are free and unappropriated for ever. It was opened for Divine service on Sunday, Dec. 16th, and filled in the afternoon with an overflowing congregation from the surrounding neighbourhood.

The essays are to be given to the Provost, or to the Regius Professor of Divinity, on or before the first day of October, 1839. The value of 40*l.* in books will be given to the best essay.—Dublin Christian Examiner.

Board of Education.—Meeting of the Roman Catholic Bishops.—The Irish Roman Catholic Bishops are at present assembled at their "annual conference" in Dublin. I have learned that the question of education was yesterday the subject of debate. After a very protracted discussion, a motion of confidence in the National Board, and of approval of the system generally, was carried, in opposition to an amendment of Dr. M'Hale. The numbers on the division were—

For the vote of confidence..... 17

For Dr. M'Hale's amendment..... 9

The supporters of Dr. M'Hale were confined to his own suffragans and a few of the southern bishops

COLONIAL.

Jamaica.—Circular of the Bishop of Jamaica, accompanying the Report of the National Schools in that island:—

"Dearly beloved in the Lord,—The following statement is a satisfactory account of the progress making, under the blessing of God, in the National System of Education. Let me earnestly entreat your co-operation and support in a measure, in which the temporal and eternal interests of all are so vitally concerned:—A measure, in the furtherance of which, the liberality of Parliament, the contributions of Religious Societies in England, and the bounty of Individual Proprietors, have so harmoniously conspired in aid of your own exertions.

"No arguments will be required from me to convince you all, under the altered circumstances of the Colony, of the absolute necessity of these institutions, to form the habits and raise the character of our labouring population; nay, to prepare them for duly benefitting by the ministrations of the Clergy, and rightly understanding the inimitable services of our Scriptural Liturgy.

"The peaceable demeanour of the objects of our instruction, and their generally acknowledged good behaviour, are the natural fruits of being made better acquainted with the saving truths of the Gospel; and no stronger proof of their desire to obtain this knowledge can be given, than the fact, that their choice is often influenced, in fixing their settlements, by the opportunities afforded for their acquiring moral and religious instruction for themselves and their children.

"As the subjects then of a Gracious Sovereign, herself most anxious to promote this 'Labour of love,' and to sanctify the boon of freedom with the blessings of the Gospel, let me again exhort you all, in your several stations of life, to unite together in the promotion of this good work. Let your loyal attachment to the Throne be based on the practical Religion of Christ—your correct submission to the laws of man on your higher obedience to the laws of God—and strive to 'adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour in all things.'

"I am, dearly beloved,

"Your faithful friend and brother,

"Bishop's Lodge,

"C. JAMAICA."

"November 15th, 1838."

The total number of Schools in November last was 45; of Scholars, 5,113. The number of additional Schools proposed was 13.

Her Majesty, Queen Dowager, has announced her intention of erecting, at her own expense, a church capable of containing 1000 persons for the use of the English in Malta. An appropriate site has been granted by the local government; and the sacred edifice, which is to be dedicated to St. Paul, is to be commenced immediately.

FOREIGN.

France.—Chamber of Deputies.—Sitting of Jan. 18. The Minister of Justice, replying to M. Isambert's observations on the establishment of a bishopric at Algiers, explained, that as the Government was placed under the necessity of either abandoning its possessions in Africa to the congregations, or of appointing a bishop, the latter alternative had been adopted. He then proved the right, and laid down the limit of the intervention of the Government in the relations of the clergy with the population. He next censured the conduct of the bishop and clergy of Clermont in refusing the rite of Catholic burial to the remains of Count Montlosier. He maintained that the Government had restrained within suitable limits the tendency of the clergy to interfere in public instruction, and he reminded the Chamber that the (Jesuit) establishment of Saint Acheul, and others of a similar nature, had been closed. The Government confined its protection of the clergy within the limits of the laws, and impressed upon the attention of that body the necessity of tolerance in the interest of religion itself.

M. Hennequin repelled the accusations directed by M. Isambert against the clergy. The refusal of the rite of Catholic burial, he thought, was not a case demanding the interference of the Government, but confined wholly within the province of the spiritual power. He concluded by dwelling on the necessity of seconding religious influence, which could alone ensure the happiness of society.—French Paper.

The Church of Rome is once more building great hopes upon the religious orders. Every where we see them re-organizing themselves with new eclat. They say that all this is with the object of bringing back Christians of the different Protestant communions, to Roman Catholicism. For our own part, it appears to us, that the Pope might employ them much better in bringing back the unity of the Faith to his own divided Church. For example, the divisions between the Archbishop of Cologne and the followers of Hermes; between M. Bautin and his bishop; between the Ultramanes and the liberals of Switzerland and Germany: to say nothing of the schisms which are caused in France by the Abbé de la Mennais, the Abbé Chatel, and many others.—Predicateur Evangélique.

The Augsburg Gazette states, under date Posen, 13th inst., that the aspect of the quarrel between the Prussian Government and the Catholic clergy was becoming hourly more and more serious.

A new chapel, to enable the British residents at Constantinople to assist in performing Divine service, has been erected, and was opened at Pera, on Christmas-day. The chaplain of the British Embassy, the Rev. Mr. Bennet, preached a sermon on the occasion. This pious and laudable achievement is, we understand, chiefly to be ascribed to the efforts of the Bishop of London.—Morning Herald.

Jamaica.—Kingston.—Annual Meeting of the National Schools.—On Wednesday morning, 12th inst., at the usual hour of service, the church on the parade was filled with the children of the national schools, and visitors who attended on the interesting occasion of their annual examination. His Excellency the Governor, the Lord Bishop, the Chief Justice, the Archdeacon, and a large number of clergy; Mrs. Edwards, Mrs. Deleon, Mrs. Menzies, and a large party of ladies; Dr. Deleon, Mr. Davies, Mr. Scott, Mr. Williams, Mr. Bernard, Mr. Broughton, Mr. Titley, Mr. Wiltshire, and other gentlemen, were present. Before service, the anthem, "I will arise, and go to my father," was sung by the children, who also chanted the "Venite," "Te Deum," and "Jubilate," with an effect perfectly astonishing, when we consider that there was no accompaniment of instrumental music, and that a few days only had been occupied in preparation, under the zealous and able instruction of Mr. Burns, of the Church Missionary Society. Bishop Heber's beautiful hymn, "The Heathen," with the hymn on page 67 of the bishop's selection, were admirably sung.

From the church the children proceeded to the East Branch School, whilst the Asylum attached to the Central School was inspected by his Excellency the Governor, the Bishop, and the Chief Justice, patrons of the institution. The crowd at the East Branch was great, both inside and outside the capacious school-rooms. The first and second classes of boys passed a very creditable examination. In geography, scripture history, and parsing, the first class specially distinguished itself; and the monitors of the Central School obtained great credit for their Euclid; Jackson, W. Stevenson, and R. Robins, each demonstrating a proposition: Stevenson satisfactorily showing that he had passed the "pons Asinorum."

The report was read, after which his lordship the bishop rose, and in the name of himself, the clergy, and others interested in the National Schools, begged to return his most sincere thanks to his Excellency the Governor for his attendance that day, and the countenance he afforded the institution. His lordship then alluded to that part of the report which spoke of the difficulty of obtaining efficient masters, and stated that the object was to show the country at large the utility of the system; and he trusted, that the particulars in which defects now existed, would urge all its supporters, both lay and clergy, to increased zeal and activity, and that shortly the establishment would be matured, and work with the full vigour of which it was pre-eminently capable.

His Excellency the Governor said, that as the chief officer of the island, he begged to return his most sincere thanks to the bishop and clergy for the pleasing sight which he had that day witnessed. "I have never," said his Excellency, "had a more gratifying day than the present since I have been in the country, and I trust that all in the colony will join in support of an institution which will be of such lasting benefit to the community."

The children then sang their dismissal, and the meeting broke up amid the cheers of the children in response to the expressions of universal gratification on the part of the visitors.—Kingston Morning Journal.

DEATHS.

Dec. 20.—Of apoplexy, aged 62, the Rev. Thomas Hayes, of Alabaly Hall.

Dec. 22.—At Edinburgh, the Rev. Delabere Pritchett, M.A. late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, Rector of Chaddle, Staffordshire; patrons, the Master and Fellows of Trinity College. He took his Degree of B.A. in 1796.

Rev. HUGH JAMES ROSE.—The Rev. H. J. Rose, Principal of King's College, London, and late chaplain to the Archbishop of Canterbury, died on the 22nd of December, at Florence, on his way to Rome, where it was hoped the mildness of an Italian winter might amend the very exhausted and enfeebled condition of his bodily health. Although prepared in some degree for the probability of this serious event, yet will the announcement of it cause a deep affliction to the hearts of a numerous class of society, by whom his learning, his various endowments, and his kind nature, had made him respected and beloved. As a scholar and divine, though his life had been short (for we believe Mr. Rose was only in his 43rd year), yet has his fame been well extended by his great intellectual activity and energy in maintaining his principles and views of religious doctrine, discipline, and duties. In his heartfelt and ardent zeal in the cause of the church his bodily strength had long been consuming; and he may be considered a martyr to his love of, and upholding, high-minded opinions, and noble views and generous feelings, which he saw with heavy sorrow were neglected and destroyed in the government of the Church and State. As a scholar, he was of Trinity College, Cambridge, and the senior medalist of his year (1817). He soon afterwards engaged himself in and published his Inscriptiones Vetustissimæ, a very learned work, and one much wanted in our literature. He then delivered (1825) a series of discourses before the University "On the state of the Protestant religion in Germany," a volume which contains the vastest research and argument, and which will remain as the great and important picture of that controversy. In 1829 Mr. Rose held the office of Christian Advocate at Cambridge, and the publications it drew from his pen were superior, in the opinion of Bishop Jebb, to anything in modern divinity; indeed, his sermons delivered at this period, and for some years after, as select preacher, obtained for him the palm of pre-eminence at St. Mary's, and his powerful and pathetic eloquence, and his Christian appeals there to the youth and the seniors of the University, will be remembered, we are sure, in admiration and gratitude by thousands. These thoughtful and beautiful compositions were published in octavo, in 1830. In 1831 he preached and published at Cambridge, a course of sermons, "On the Commission and Consequent Duties of the Clergy." In 1832 he projected the British Magazine. To these various publications might be added many smaller tracts on divinity; and in other ways he gave his help to religion by new editing Parkhurst's Lexicon, &c. spreading by his pen, through various channels, Christian knowledge and instruction. This zealous, amiable, and learned servant of his Divine Master has now finished his career, and duties with us, and is possessing, we trust, that blessedness, and repose, and spirituality, and wisdom, after which his soul thirsted, and which his labours and discipline, his piety and conduct here, so fully prepared him to enjoy. To the Church of England he was an honour; to his friends, who were all the eminent of the age, he was a blessing and a delight. Mr. Rose was the eldest son of the Rev. W. Rose, now of Glynde, near Lewes. He was born at Uckfield, and educated at his father's school at that place. His first preferment was the Vicarage of Mersham, where his parochial administration is yet remembered by his parishioners with affectionate respect and gratitude. Sussex may place him, therefore, among her honourable children. He exchanged the living of Mersham for Hadleigh, in Suffolk; but illness obliged him to relinquish that also; and on the appointment of Dr. Otter to the See of Chichester, Mr. Rose succeeded him as the principal of King's College.—Brighton Gazette.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

NEW CHURCH, CARDIFF, GLAMORGANSHIRE.

THE TOWN OF CARDIFF, consisting of the two Parishes of St. John and St. Mary, comprises a population of 10,000 souls, of whom there is not at present church accommodation for more than 1200. The population of Cardiff has been trebled since 1821. Under such circumstances, an effort is now making to obtain sufficient contributions to erect a New Church in the Parish of St. Mary, capable of containing 2000 persons, the cost of which cannot be estimated at less than 7000*l*.

The amount of Subscriptions already obtained is 2391*l*. 17*s*.; and the contributions of the Public are respectfully solicited in furtherance of the object.

Subscriptions will be thankfully received by C. C. Williams, Esq., Treasurer, the Revs. Thomas Stacey and H. L. Blossie, Secretaries; and at the Monmouthshire and Glamorganshire Bank, the National Provincial Bank of England, and the West of England and South Wales Bank, in Cardiff.

PRAYER-BOOK AND HOMILY SOCIETY.

AT A MEETING of the COMMITTEE held at Exeter Hall, Dec. 20, 1838, the Rev. T. P. Wright in the Chair; after much useful discussion, it was resolved—

"That an especial fund be raised for the printing of all works set forth by authority, according to the Society's engagements, both in Tracts and in Volumes, and that contributions be forthwith received."

The following contributions were immediately announced:—

Rev. T. P. Wright	£10
S. B. Brooke, Esq.	5
J. Stow, Esq.	5
Rev. F. Dollman	2
T. Hartley, Esq.	1

It is felt to be most important in the present day to republish the works that have been set forth by authority for the spiritual instruction of the people, that the public may read and understand what great pains were taken by our Reformers, the Restorers, under the Divine blessing, of the pure scriptural doctrines of the ancient British Church, to direct the minds of the people of this nation into the truth. The Christian Public are therefore earnestly and respectfully invited to join the Committee in so interesting a work, and to aid them by their prompt and liberal contributions.

Contributions to this particular fund will be thankfully received at the Society's Office, No. 1, Exeter Hall, Strand; at the following Bankers:—Messrs. Hoare, Fleet-street; Williams, Deacon, and Co., Birchin-lane; Drummond and Co., Charing-cross; Hammersley & Co., Pall Mall; also at Messrs. Sooley, 160, Fleet-street; Hatchard and Son, Piccadilly; Nisbet and Co., Berners-street; and at the Office of the Record, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street.

WESTERN ANNUITY SOCIETY.

As a provision for Wife, Children, and other Relatives. Enrolled under stat. 10 Geo. IV. c. 56, as amended by 4 and 5 Will. IV. c. 40. Established at Exeter, 1831.

Scale of Annual Premium to Insure an Annuity not exceeding 40*l*. per annum—

Age under 25	£2 0 0	Age under 45	£4 0 0
30	2 10 0	50	4 10 0
40	3 10 0	60	5 10 0

This Society forcibly addresses itself to the Clergy, Professional, Official, and Commercial Classes, and to all whose incomes terminate with their lives (particularly those of limited income), enabling them to provide for their wives, children, and other relatives, upon the most economical system consistent with safety, offering unusual advantages as detailed in the Prospectus.

W. D. MOORE, Esq., Secretary,
High-street, Exeter.

Agent for London, Mr. G. H. WACDALE,
20, Broad-street-hill.

RUPTURE SOCIETY.

THIS SOCIETY has relieved upwards of 28,000 poor persons afflicted with Rupture, of whom many hundreds have been perfectly cured. It is estimated (though the fact is not generally known) that at least one person in fifteen is ruptured; but among those classes of the community which are engaged in bodily labour, the average has been fixed at one in eight or nine. This complaint is not confined to any particular age, or sex; nor is it the consequence of immoral behaviour. Its tendency, however, is so alarming, that, without timely aid, it frequently terminates by a painful and rapid dissolution; though its fatal consequences may generally be prevented by the careful application of a Truss. The Society relieve Patients all over England; but not being able to look to any particular Parish for support, in the way of Parochial assistance, they feel this gives them an additional reason for appealing to the Public. Every Contributor of £1. 1*s*. annually, or £10. 10*s*. at once, including Parishes and Public Institutions, may recommend three Patients each year, to be supplied in any part of the kingdom, with single or double Trusses of the best quality, each of which would cost from one to three guineas at common Truss-makers.

Donations and Subscriptions will be most gratefully received by John Poynder, Jun., Secretary, Bridewell Hospital, New Bridge Street.

OXFORD MEMORIAL.—At a Meeting holden on Thursday at two o'clock, pursuant to public advertisement, the Principal of Magdalen Hall in the chair, the following resolutions were proposed and unanimously carried:—

1. By the Rev. the Vice-Chancellor, and seconded by the Rev. Vaughan Thomas,

That the Memorial of Cranmer, Ridley, and Latimer, be a Church near the spot, which shall be commemorative, chiefly by external decorations, of the three martyred Prelates.

2. By the Warden of New College, and seconded by the Rev. Dr. Buckland, Canon of Christ Church,

That the Committee, of whom five shall be a quorum, shall be authorised to obtain an eligible site, to advertise for plans, and to adopt such other measures as shall be necessary for carrying into effect the previous resolution.

3. By the Rev. Dr. Faussett, Lady Margaret's Professor of Divinity, and seconded by the Rev. J. Hill, Vice-Principal of St. Edmund Hall,

That the Committee be authorised to select out of the plans sent in three, to be submitted for a final choice of a public meeting of subscribers.

4. By the Rev. C. P. Gollightly, of Oriel College, and seconded by W. Thorp, Esq.,

That the Subscriptions be invested from time to time, as received, in the Government Securities.

5. By the Principal of New Inn Hall, and seconded by the Master of University College,

That the cordial thanks of the meeting be offered to the Bishop of the Diocese, for his Lordship's kind acceptance of the office of Patron of this undertaking.

6. By the Warden of Wadham, and seconded by the President of Corpus Christi College,

That the thanks of the Meeting be offered to the Right Worshipful the Mayor, for the use of the Town Hall.

J. D. MACBRIDE, Chairman.
By the Junior Proctor, and seconded by the Rev. T. Short, of Trinity College,

That the thanks of the Meeting be given to Dr. Macbride, for his judicious and conciliating conduct in the chair.

The erection of a Church having been resolved upon unanimously, and having also received the sanction of the two Archbishops, and of the Bishop of the Diocese, it is now recommended by the Committee to the more extended support and enlarged subscriptions of the public, as a much greater expense must necessarily be incurred in order to carry into effect this design. Should any Subscriber to the Monument, exclusively, be disposed to withdraw his subscription, it is requested that such intention may be notified to the Committee, within two months from this time.

N.B.—Subscriptions will be received at all the Oxford Banks; and by Jones, Loyd, and Co.; Willis and Co.; Hammersley; Dorrien and Co.; and Masterman and Co., London.

A MARRIED CLERGYMAN, in full Orders, is willing to undertake the duty of a small Parish during the ensuing summer, in Devonshire, Dorsetshire, or the lower part of Somerset, and will consider the use of the Parsonage House, &c., a sufficient remuneration. Address M. A., Post Office, Wimborne, Dorset.

EXCHANGE OF LIVINGS.

THE INCUMBENT of a Living worth £160 per Annum, in a very healthy situation, with good society in the neighbourhood, within 4 miles of a large market town, and about 55 miles from the metropolis, is desirous of exchanging it for one of equal value in any part of England not exceeding 100 miles from London. The duty of the Church being single, it is probable that the Curacy of a small adjoining parish may be held with the above.

EXCHANGE OF LIVINGS.

A CLERGYMAN holding a most desirable Benefice about 55 miles from town, the Tithes of which have been commuted, and with the Glebe yield an income of £600 per annum, is desirous of exchanging for some preferment either in London or its vicinity.

Address, if by letter post paid, F. J., care of Mr. Robinson, No. 11 A, Hart Street, Bloomsbury Square.

Clerical and School Agency Office, 450 A, West Strand. All letters to be paid.

EPISCOPAL CHAPEL.

MR. VALPY has the honour of offering for Sale one of the best conditioned CHAPELS in the City of London. Terms may be known on application, if by letter post paid, to Mr. R. Valpy, Clerical and School Agency Office, 450 A, West Strand, London.

A BENEFICED CLERGYMAN, a Graduate of Oxford, residing in a healthy and picturesque part of North Wales, bordering on the sea coast, is desirous of dedicating a portion of the time not demanded in the discharge of his parochial duties, to the improvement of Two or Three Gentlemen who may wish to receive instruction in the WELSH LANGUAGE, preparatory either to their taking Holy Orders, or to their entering upon other pursuits in which a competent knowledge of that language may be essential.

Address (post paid) to the Reverend A. B., Post Office, Dolgellau, Merionethshire, North Wales.

CHAPEL PROPOSED TO BE BUILT IN THE PARISH OF HOLBEACH, LINCOLNSHIRE.

THE COMMITTEE appointed for effecting the above design, in soliciting the Public in aid of it, think that its necessity and utility will be apparent from the following statement of facts:—

The parish of Holbeach is twenty-two miles in length, and containing about four thousand inhabitants, some of whom live at the distance of twelve miles from the parish church, and many of them at an inconvenient distance from any other church or chapel belonging to the national Establishment: this circumstance, and the badness of the roads, make it often next to impossible for them to attend the public Worship of God, according to the rites of the Church of England, which has long been to them a subject of great regret. It is with joy and gratitude, therefore, that they have heard of the recent munificence of their Diocesan, who has given 800*l.* towards building and endowing a chapel for their benefit, in a situation which will render it beneficial to a part also of the adjacent parishes of Fleet, "Gedney," and Whaplode, whose houses are equally remote from their respective churches and chapels. But as for the building and endowment of the chapel, a much larger sum will be required, the Committee earnestly solicit the liberal contributions of the Public, as well as of those who, from local and other causes, are more particularly interested in the spiritual and moral welfare of the above-named parishes, in confident hope that they will generously forward a design so well calculated to promote the glory of God and the best interest of men.

Contributions will be received by Messrs. Gurney and Co., Holbeach; Messrs. Barclay and Co., Lombard-street, London; and by them through any of the Country Bankers.

For the Committee,
J. MORTON, Secretary.

FREE GRAMMAR SCHOOL OF QUEEN MARY, AT WALSALL, IN THE COUNTY OF STAFFORD.

AS the Headmastership of this School will shortly become vacant, by reason of the promotion of the present Head Master, the Rev. C. F. Child, to the office of Principal of the Church Missionary Institution, the Governors invite Gentlemen to become Candidates.

The Act of Parliament requires that the Master should be a Clergyman of the Church of England in Priest's Orders, and educated at the University of Oxford, Cambridge, or Dublin. He is, by virtue of his appointment of Head Master, Minister of St. Paul's Chapel, but may not hold any office which shall require him to perform parochial duty. He will be expected to instruct the boys under his care in the Classics and general Literature, and to superintend the schools on the foundation. In addition to a liberal salary as Head Master, a stipend as Minister of St. Paul's, and a good house, garden, and outbuildings, he will be allowed to take Boarders.

Periodical examinations of the boys will be held, and reports made upon the state of the schools. Gentlemen disposed to become candidates for this appointment, will be pleased to transmit their applications and testimonials before the 1st day of March next, to Mr. C. F. Darwall, the Secretary, who will communicate particulars.

It is earnestly requested that gentlemen will refrain from making any personal applications to the Governors.

WORKS BY THE REV. S. T. BLOOMFIELD, D.D., F.S.A.

I.

(Dedicated to his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury.)

THIRD EDITION, greatly enlarged and very considerably improved, with a new Map of Palestine and Syria, of

THE GREEK TESTAMENT,

With copious ENGLISH NOTES, Critical, Philological, and Explanatory; in two very large and closely-printed volumes, 8vo, 2l. handsomely bound in cloth lettered.

"Much as had been done in the two preceding impressions, the THIRD edition is yet further enlarged, and very materially improved. In addition to his own researches, Dr. Bloomfield has availed himself of various suggestions for the improvement of his work, which in its present state exhibits the result of the labours of all preceding critical editors of the New Testament, as well as of his own researches for more than thirty years. Upon the whole, without depreciating the merit of the labours of preceding editors, this third edition may justly be regarded as the most valuable for biblical students, that has yet been issued from the press in this country."—Rev. T. Hartwell Horne's Introduction to the Critical Study of the Scriptures. 8th edition. 1839.

"Dr. Bloomfield's edition of the Greek Testament will be invaluable to all those whose profession requires, or whose leisure admits of, a critical study of the Sacred Writings. Dr. Bloomfield has deserved well both of the Church and of the Christian world, and has fairly earned the highest remuneration which the dispensers of ecclesiastical patronage have to bestow."—Eclectic Review.

II.

COLLEGE AND SCHOOL GREEK TESTAMENT,

With ENGLISH NOTES. Second Edition, with Additions, and a new Map of Palestine, adapted to the Gospel History. 1 thick volume, 12mo, 10s. 6d. cloth, gilt lettered.

"This edition of the Greek Testament supplies a desideratum in scholastic literature. The notes (which are strictly grammatical, scholastic, and elementary) furnish to the juvenile student every requisite aid for the correct interpretation of the New Testament."—Christian Remembrancer.

"It is impossible to say how far the public are indebted to Dr. Bloomfield for these labours of his industrious pen: they will carry down his name with the highest honour to posterity. Our prayer is, that his invaluable life may long be spared, and that he may be permitted to reap the full reward of his self-sacrificing devotion to the imperishable interests of Biblical science."—Evangelical Magazine.

III.

THE HISTORY OF THE PELOPONNESIAN WAR, BY THUCYDIDES.

Newly Translated into ENGLISH, and accompanied with very copious NOTES, Philological and Explanatory, Historical and Geographical; with Maps and Plates. 3 vols. 8vo, 2l. 5s.

"In the Notes by this Translator, numerous interesting points of Classical Antiquities are ably discussed, and many thousands of invaluable illustrations of the obscure passages of the Author are adduced from the best Greek writers of every age. As to the Version, considering the all but insuperable difficulties with which the Translator has had to contend, in a writer said by some great scholars to be untranslatable, we can with truth say, that he has executed his task with fidelity, taste, and judgment. Upon the whole, we can pronounce the work to be quite indispensable to all who would hope to understand the text of the greatest of historians, but most obscure of writers."—Gentleman's Magazine.

IV.

THUCYDIDES.

New Recension of the Text, with copious ENGLISH NOTES, Critical, Philological, and Explanatory; Examination Questions, &c., for the use of Colleges and the Public Schools. 3 vols. post 8vo, 27s. bds.

"We feel confident that no reader of Thucydides will fail to purchase an edition where, be their scholarship what it may, they cannot rise from its perusal without having learnt much that they did not know before, and which they cannot obtain elsewhere. . . . We will not do the tutors of colleges, and masters of public schools the injustice to believe, that they are so regardless of their own reputation and their pupils' improvement, as not to adopt the only edition of Thucydides, which this or any other country has produced, really suited for the instruction of young persons."—Gentleman's Magazine.

"Thucydides Historia Græcæ, a doctissimo Britanno ternis voluminibus elegantissime edita."—Prof. Poppo of Frankfurt, in the Preface to his noble Variorum Edition of Thucydides; ten vols. 8vo.

V.

ROBINSON'S GREEK AND ENGLISH LEXICON OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

Edited, with careful Revision, Corrections, occasional Additions, and a Preface, by the Rev. S. T. BLOOMFIELD, D.D. 1 volume, 8vo, 28s. cloth.

"Dr. Robinson's Lexicon, as edited by Dr. Bloomfield, hardly requires our warm and sincere praise. It must prove of great value to every student who is wise enough to procure it."—British Critic and Quarterly Theological Review.

"We consider this the best Lexicon of the Greek Testament that is extant. Dr. Bloomfield has proved himself a most indefatigable scholar, and his present edition deserves unbounded success."—Church of England Quarterly Review.

A NEW SYSTEM of LOGIC, and Development of the Principles of Truth and Reasoning; applicable to Moral Subjects and the Conduct of Human Life.

By S. R. BOSANQUET, A.M., of the Inner Temple.

This Work is intended to break one link in that chain by which the human mind has been bound, during a period of two thousand years, namely, the Grecian Philosophy and Literature. This attempt is not made without an endeavour, at the same time, to supply a new link of less skillful workmanship, but of a purer and more perfect material. Should any prospect of success be afforded, in the attainment of the proposed object at this period, further endeavours of the same kind will, perhaps, be made at future opportunities.

PREFACE.—The attempt to revive the ancient custom of chanting portions of the Church Service is becoming so universal, that no apology need be made for the appearance of this little Work, the object of which is, by a process purely mechanical, to enable any person who has a taste and ear for music, to take a part in this devotional exercise; the several hymns being here so printed as that they may be sung to any chant whatever, by attention to the Rules here given.

Application for Assurances or farther information, to be made to the Rev. J. Hodgson, or to JOHN BURDER, Esq., Secretaries to the Society, at the Office, 40, Parliament Street; or to any Local Agent in the Country.

. Prospectuses and Books of Rules may be had at the Office. Attendance from eleven to four o'clock, daily.

"This Society is strictly confined to the Clergy and their families, and is distinguished from other institutions by the title of 'THE CLERGY MUTUAL ASSURANCE SOCIETY.'" Particular attention is requested in the addressing letters to "No. 40, Parliament Street."

This SOCIETY was formed for the purpose of drawing the attention of the Clergy, 1st, To the important advantages to be derived from the system of Assurance in general; 2dly, To give them an opportunity of making Assurances not offered or admitted in other public Assurance Offices; and 3dly, To keep down the Rates of Assurance at the lowest possible sum, by an inexpensive management, and a division every FIVE YEARS of the TOTAL AMOUNT of Profits (in which no Proprietors share) amongst the assured Members who may be entitled to them. Assurances may be made for a sufficient sum to be paid during sickness, infirmity, and old age, to meet the unavoidable expense of a Curate; for capital Sums or Annuities, to provide for the education of Children at School, or College, and for equipping them out in the world; for the maintenance of Orphan Children during Infancy, from the day of the Death of the Father, &c. &c. &c.

The terms, conditions, and advantages, of these Assurances, and the Tables of Rates payable for them, are fully set forth in the Prospectus. For a proof of the prosperous state of the SOCIETY, the Clergy are referred to a Report of its Proceedings, which was read at a General Meeting of Members on the 29th of June, the Lord Bishop of London in the chair; and also to a Resolution which was moved by the Lord Bishop of Winchester upon the occasion, inserted in No. I. of the Ecclesiastical Gazette. One-fourth part of the total amount of premiums paid for Life Assurances in and during the first seven years of this Institution, was returned back again as a bonus to the assured Members, and appropriated to a reduction of their future premiums, thus making the Rates of Premium which had been paid for the same during such seven years, 25 per cent. less than in the following Table. For instance, a Clergyman at the age of 50, having assured £1000 upon his Life in the year 1832, and having paid for the same up to 1836, five Annual Premiums of £43. 13s. 4d. each, received a bonus in cash of about £50 to be appropriated to the reduction of his future premium, so that in fact he paid only £33. 13s. 4d. or thereabouts, during the five first years of his assurance, or £3. 7s. 4d. for each sum of £100 assured, instead of £4. 7s. 4d. Any sum not less than £50, and not exceeding £2500, may be assured upon Life by any Clergyman, or the Father, Mother, Wife, Widow, Son, Daughter, Brother, Sister, of any Clergyman, upon terms as below, and the period appointed for the next bonus is 31st May, 1841. No charge for Stamps.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE;

OR MONTHLY

REGISTER OF

THE AFFAIRS OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND, AND

OF ITS RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES AND INSTITUTIONS.

No. 9.

LONDON, TUESDAY, MARCH 12, 1839.

No. 9.

The ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE is published on the second Tuesday in every month, and may be obtained at sixpence per number, or six shillings per annum, by ordering it of any Newsmen in the Kingdom.

It is also sent regularly every month, free of all charge, to the Resident Parochial Clergyman of every Parish throughout England and Wales.

ADDITIONAL SUBSCRIBERS FOR THE ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE.

HIS GRACE THE LORD ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY.

HIS GRACE THE LORD ARCHBISHOP OF YORK.

We have been induced to devote a considerable portion of our present number to the insertion of the Ecclesiastical Duties and Revenues' Bill, in order that so important a measure may receive the full consideration of our readers, more especially the Clergy, before it is finally settled in Parliament. We have been obliged to omit the fifty-seven heads under which the recommendations of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners are recited; but we have omitted nothing in the enactments except the repetition of the technical words: so that the document as it stands in our pages may be safely used for all purposes of reference.

To render the information upon this subject more complete, we give under the head of Parliamentary Intelligence, abstracts of the principal speeches made upon the introduction of the Bill into the House of Commons.

The Parliamentary paper on Education, and the measures requisite for the preservation and extension of the Church in the Colonies, are also subjects which at the present moment demand great attention.

We have this month the honour and the satisfaction of placing at the head of our list of new Clerical Subscribers, the names of the Archbishops of Canterbury and York.

We have again to put forth a request to such of the Clergy as may happen to have duplicate or spare copies of Nos. 2, 3, and 4, of the Ecclesiastical Gazette, that they will favour us by returning them by post to the Publisher, in order that we may supply them to some of our new subscribers, by whom they are very much wanted.

THE LORD BISHOP OF NOVA SCOTIA in the Chair.

THE Secretaries reported, that they had been directed by the Standing Committee to write the following to the Rev. Charles Deedes, who had forwarded the Memorial from seventy-three Clergymen in Somersetshire.

"Lincoln's Inn Fields, March 4, 1839.

"Reverend Sir,—In compliance with your request, the Address which you transmitted to this SOCIETY, from seventy-three Clergymen of the county of Somerset, twenty-nine only of whom are members of the SOCIETY, was laid before the Board at the last General Meeting; when after considerable discussion it was agreed, that the Address should be referred to the consideration of the Standing Committee.

"We are directed by the Standing Committee to state, that though they are perfectly ready at all times to take into consideration any representations which may be made to them respecting the publications of the SOCIETY, yet they feel themselves obliged to observe, that this Address could be received only as proceeding from those who are members of the SOCIETY.

"The Standing Committee feel much satisfaction in observing the deep interest expressed in this Address for the welfare of the SOCIETY. They have reason to believe that this is a growing feeling, both among the Clergy and the Laity of the Church of England; and they trust that this desire for the well-being of the SOCIETY, will have the effect of leading its individual members to acquiesce in such measures as may be deemed best calculated, upon the whole, to promote its stability, usefulness, and peace.

"The Standing Committee beg to observe, that the objection alluded to in this Address, as arising from the rules of the National Society, no longer exists. That Society having now changed its terms of union, no Clergyman will hereafter be confined to the use of the Tracts of the SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE in the education of children in the National Schools."

"The Standing Committee by no means undertake to defend every opinion contained in the SOCIETY'S Tracts, but they do not admit the general and indiscriminate charges brought against some of the publications of the SOCIETY in the Memorial to which this Address refers.

"The Standing Committee are convinced from experience, and from the failure of all former attempts, that no revision of the Tracts could possibly be accomplished, which would afford satisfaction to the members of the SOCIETY at large. They therefore feel it their duty to decline recommending the Board to attempt a revision. And they venture to hope that all the members of the SOCIETY will perceive the disadvantages which may arise to its best interests from the further agitation of such questions.

(Signed) "WILLIAM PARKER,
GEORGE TOMLINSON, Secretaries."

The following letter was read from the Right Rev. Bishop Low, dated Priory Pittenween, 18th February, 1839:—

"The kind interest which the SOCIETY takes in Scottish affairs has been of the most essential benefit; and I think it right to state, for the information of the Committee, that I continue to receive the most gratifying accounts of the newly-formed Episcopal Congregations in the islands of Bute, Skye, and Lewis, to the two chapels in which last-mentioned places the SOCIETY has been so liberal.

"Our minister in Stornaway, in a late letter, expresses great satisfaction with the commodiousness, and even beauty, of the new chapel; and adds, 'Your Reverence will be glad to know that all the respectable members of the town are coming gradually into the Church.' The case seems to be pretty much the same in Rothsay, Isle of Bute; and the accession to the Church of some of families of the first distinction in the Isle of Skye, is likely to produce the happiest results.

"The Clergyman there writes to me the 9th of this month: 'The regularity with which my scattered congregation attend Divine worship is beyond all praise; and I hope God will give me His grace to guide them aright. I have been successful in organising a school in connexion with the chapel here, at which I hope soon to see 50 to 60 children, at least, receiving such an education as, by the grace of God, will make them more successful candidates for happiness, both in this life and that which is to come. This school may be properly termed a seminary for the extirpation of Gaelic,—the great barrier to the civilization of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland. No Gaelic is taught in it; what the children read in English, they are taught to translate into Gaelic. The teacher speaks English to them in all cases where he can be understood, and encourages the use of it in their communications with each other.'"

The following Report from the Standing Committee was read to the Meeting:—

"The Standing Committee beg to report to the Board, that, having been requested by the Subcommittee for Finance to consider the propriety of making some statement which shall remove the difficulty which now exists with regard to the sale of the SOCIETY'S Books by the members, they have taken the subject into their consideration, and deem it expedient that members should be allowed to sell the Books and Tracts at members' prices, whenever by so doing they can promote the objects of the SOCIETY."

The SOCIETY'S 23rd rule having been read, and some discussion having taken place on this subject, it was moved by the Rev. J. E. Tyler, seconded by the Rev. A. M. Campbell, and agreed.

"That this be referred to the Standing Committee, for their further consideration, with a request that they will bring the matter forward at the General Meeting in June, with a suitable variation in the terms of the Rule."

The following members of the SOCIETY were appointed the Committee of Auditors for examining the Treasurers' Accounts. Rev. Dr. Russell; Rev. Dr. Short; Rev. A. M. Campbell; Newell Connop, jun., Esq.; J. Delafield, Esq.; J. H. Markland, Esq.

A letter was read from the Rev. J. Heavyside, Chaplain at Graham's Town, Cape of Good Hope, and President and Secretary of the Albany District Committee, stating the great necessity which is felt by the Church there for aid from its friends at home, and from the Colonial Government. He encloses an extract from the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Committee, and a Memorial, praying for assistance towards the erection of a Church at Fort Beaufort, one of the principal garrison towns on the frontier, the head-quarters of a regiment, and a market-town, containing at present 379 soldiers, and a large population, which is continually increasing. This Memorial is signed by the five provisional Trustees of the building, and by the Secretary. It is estimated that a Church might be built at a cost of 1800*l.*; one-third of which the inhabitants purpose to raise among themselves. They have also memorialized Her Majesty's Colonial Government, and the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts.

The attention of the Meeting having been thus called to the subject of the spiritual wants of the Church in the Colonies and dependencies of the British Empire; and the Right Reverend Chairmen having expressed his sense of the state of destitution in which the Colonial Church is at present placed, and of the absolute necessity of making additional efforts in its behalf; it was agreed unanimously, on the motion of the Rev. W. Dodsworth, seconded by the Rev. J. Shergold Boone,

"That his Grace the President be requested to summon a Special General Meeting, on the earliest day convenient to his Grace, and that the Standing Committee be requested to prepare, in the mean time, a Petition to both houses of Parliament, on behalf of the Colonial Church, to be submitted to the Special Meeting."

The Rev. Sanderson Robins gave the following notice of motion for the next General Meeting:—

"That a humble address be presented to Her Majesty, praying that no system of National Education may be adopted, which does not include the free use of the Bible, or which would take the education of the people out of the hands of the Parochial Clergy."

The Board agreed to present to the Right Rev. Dr. Hopkins, Bishop of Vermont, who is now in London, a set of the SOCIETY'S Books and Tracts, towards adding to a Library which he is forming at the Seminary, attached to the Episcopal Institute, at Burlington, in his diocese.

A Letter was read from the Rev. R. Meade, Boulogne, at whose disposal the Board lately made a grant of Books, for the use of the British residents in that town. The following are extracts from Mr. Meade's letter:—

"The venerable SOCIETY never made a gift which has been more truly appreciated. The British poor in this town have never before had such an opportunity offered them; they have bought up the stock of larger Bibles rapidly, and there only remains on hand a few of the smallest size and print, which it will be well to reserve for the use of the 'British Free and Sunday Schools.' You will see that I have given very few away, without requiring a small payment; which I have long experienced to be the best method of distribution. If the SOCIETY require a more detailed account than that on the other side, which shall give the name of every individual to whom each book was given, I will be happy to give such. You will perceive that there is a trifling balance due to the SOCIETY; will the Committee permit me (on forwarding that sum) to lay it out in more Bibles? for their donation has only excited an appetite for the Word of Life and Peace, and I have several applicants for a share in the next packet whenever it may arrive."

The Board granted an additional supply of Books, amounting to 20*l.*

The Board granted 50 New Testaments and 50 Common Prayer Books, in Spanish, for distribution in South America, on the application of the Rev. George Tomlinson.

A Letter of acknowledgment from the Lord Bishop of Nova Scotia was laid before the Meeting.

Several other Letters of acknowledgment were reported.

At this Meeting it was agreed to present a large Bible and Common Prayer Books for the Desks, and Books for the Communion Table, for the use of each of the following new Churches:—Leeming, Yorkshire; Parr Chapel, St. Helen's, Lancashire; St. Thomas's, Milnthorpe, Westmoreland; Wellington, Shropshire; St. Mary's, Portsmouth.

A Bible, two Common Prayer Books, and a Book for the Communion Table, were granted for the use of a new Church at Foxt, Ipstone, near Leek.

A Quarto Bible and two Common Prayer Books were granted for the use of a Chapel at Studley, near Alcester.

A Quarto Bible and Common Prayer Book, and a Book for the Communion Table, were granted for a Chapel at Harrow Weald; a Quarto Bible and Common Prayer Book for a Chapel on Bow Common, Middlesex; and similar Books for a School-room, licensed for Divine service, in the parish of St. John, Westminster.

Several gratuitous grants of the SOCIETY'S Books and Tracts were made.

The following Donations were announced:—

* The following are the terms of a Resolution of the National Society, transmitted to the Diocesan Boards, and District Societies, by the Rev. J. C. Wigram, Secretary.

"That the Secretary be directed to state, that although the exclusive use of the Religious Tracts on the Catalogue of the SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE, be no longer required as a condition of union, the General Committee will continue to supply with their Annual Report a list of the Educational Works upon such Catalogue; and the SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE will continue to afford to Schools in union the accustomed facilities for obtaining them."

Eighty-seven new Members were admitted at this Meeting.

•• The General Meeting of the SOCIETY will not take place on the first Tuesday in April, which is Easter Tuesday, but on Tuesday the 9th.

•• A Special Meeting will be held on Tuesday, March 19, to consider of a Petition to Parliament on behalf of the Colonial Church.

SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL.

Sydney, New South Wales, Aug. 18, 1838.

Reverend Sir,—By the present opportunity I hoped to have been able to forward to you, for the information of the incorporated SOCIETY, copies of the Report of our Diocesan Committee's proceedings for the past year; but a longer delay than was anticipated having occurred in the printing, I am compelled to postpone sending that document until the sailing of the next vessel for London. I last addressed you from Hobart Town, during my visitation of Van Diemen's Land, which I completed early in June, and arrived here in safety on the 16th of that month, by Her Majesty's ship Conway. To Captain Bethune and his officers, and to every individual on board, I felt myself under great obligations for the uniform attention, care, and kindness experienced during the entire interval of my being associated with them.

In Van Diemen's Land the SOCIETY is, I have no doubt, aware the same system has been adopted, as to religious establishments, as was introduced by Sir Richard Bourke into this colony. Some of the details slightly differ; but the main principle is upheld, of making the expressed desire of a certain number of the inhabitants (accompanied by a fixed amount of contribution) the only condition upon which aid is granted by Government towards the erection of a church, or clergyman's residence, and the maintenance of the clergyman himself. The system has been during too short a time in operation to admit of my offering an opinion derived from experience as to its working and its practical effect upon the religious character of the people. My impression is, unfeignedly, that as the support of Government is afforded to different forms of religion according to the election of the people, encouragement is thereby given to the lax and dangerous opinion, that there is in religion nothing that is either certain or true.

In connexion with this mention of clergymen designed for these Colonies, I beg to lay before the SOCIETY my recommendation that they should, as far as practicable, be provided with passages singly on board the numerous ships conveying emigrants, which are now almost constantly proceeding on their voyage. In consequence of two, or sometimes even three, clergymen being passengers by one ship, there are many ships which bring over several hundred passengers without any means whatever of religious instruction during the voyage; or they engage, as I have known to happen, a teacher of some dissenting denomination, when they would thankfully have preferred the services of a clergyman, had they known how they were to be obtained, or where to apply for them. I beg to state that the emigrant ships taken up on account of Government are under the direction of the Agent General for Emigration, with whom a communication might easily be opened through the Colonial-office; and the principal private ships are chartered by Mr. John Marshall, of Birchin Lane, who, I am persuaded, would afford every facility for the accommodation of a clergyman, recommended by the SOCIETY, on board of each of them; and the reports made to me by such of the clergy as have come by his ships have been uniformly favourable as to the provision made for their comfort.

I have received with unfeigned gratitude the information communicated in the latest letter from the SOCIETY, of their having determined on extending the allowance of £50 per annum to fifteen clergymen for this colony, and five for Van Diemen's Land. The most favourable impression has been made upon the minds of all well-disposed and reflecting persons by this example of the SOCIETY's great liberality, and of their anxious attention to the spiritual wants prevailing over so wide an extension of country as is committed to my superintendence. In Van Diemen's Land the same sentiment will, I am sure, be excited, as the same deplorable want prevails there as here. My able and most worthy coadjutor, Archdeacon Hutchins, is incessantly occupied in endeavouring to lighten, by his own exertions, the evil arising from so insufficient a supply of pastors to so scattered a flock. With indefatigable activity he endeavours, and with great success, to extend his own powers of usefulness, by preaching, as opportunity is afforded him, at many distant points the glad tidings of redemption; which, but for his activity and earnestness, could never penetrate thither. But this wide extension of labour casts upon him, I could not fail to observe, a very disproportionate burden of fatigue, anxiety, and expense, which he supports with the quiet determination of one whose views are fixed upon one high object, and who finds in its attainment the only reward he seeks. I have, therefore, learned with increased satisfaction, since my return to this colony, that so many additional clergymen would be provided for the archdeaconry, as it will relieve Mr. Hutchins from some of those labours which, being added to the proper duties of his office, have accumulated too much upon him. The inhabitants of that colony are (sixteen out of every twenty-three) members of the Church of England, and are, with some exceptions to which I have alluded, warmly attached to it. They are proceeding very generally in the erection of churches in the various parts; and more are in contemplation; to all of which I shall most readily extend such aid as may be in my power from the amount of the SOCIETY's grants still remaining at my disposal; though that aid will not be so extensive in amount as I should gladly have made it if my resources had been more ample.

I have omitted previously to mention that during my residence within the archdeaconry, I was gratified by witnessing the establishment, in Hobart Town, of a district committee of the Societies for Propagating the Gospel and Promoting Christian Knowledge. The meeting was well attended; his excellency, Sir John Franklin, the Lieutenant-Governor, having honoured it by taking the chair; and, together with Lady Franklin, becoming a subscriber to the funds of the committee. In closing herewith my account of proceedings in Van Diemen's Land, I must now direct the attention of the SOCIETY to a very distant point in an opposite direction; and it may give some impression as to the extent of this diocese to state, that Port Essington, the point to which I now refer, is situated 2000 miles in a direct line from Hobart Town, of which I have recently been speaking. It may be perhaps known to the SOCIETY that in August, 1824, a settlement was formed on the north coast of New Holland, at Melville Island, under the direction and command of Captain Bremer (now Sir J. Gordon Bremer), of Her Majesty's ship Tamar. In June, 1827, the establishment was transferred to Raffles Bay, in the same region; but in the year 1829, in consequence of the attendant expense and supposed unfavourable prospects, it was abandoned. Subsequent events, however, have induced Her Majesty's Government to regard once more the formation of a settlement on that coast as a desirable object; and an expedition, consisting of Her Majesty's ships Alligator and Britomart, accompanied by the Orontes, merchant-ship, is on the point of sailing from Sydney to establish a colony at Port Essington a secure and capacious harbour within a few miles of Raffles Bay, before spoken of; the whole being under the command of Sir Gordon Bremer, who conducted the first establishment fourteen years ago. As the settlement will, from the very outset, contain a great number of persons, including the officers and crews of the ships of war, and, if the expectations under which it is undertaken be realized, will shortly be a place of great resort, I learned with sincere regret that no provision whatever had been made for the appointment of any clergyman to accompany the expedition; but that it was intended to proceed with as little attention to secure the administration of any offices of religion as if the settlement had been undertaken by a heathen, and not by a Christian nation. Conversing upon this subject with the commander of the expedition, I was gratified to find that his wishes were not only in accordance with, but had anticipated mine; and that he would even thankfully second any effort which I could make to provide the blessing of a Christian establishment in the outset of this undertaking. My anxiety to accomplish this object was, if possible, heightened by a communication made to me, at the instance of Sir Gordon Bremer, of a manuscript translation by Mr. Earl, interpreter attached to the expedition, of a narrative of a voyage among the islands to the north of Timor, by Mr. Kolf, an officer in the Dutch service. The journal in question communicates intelligence of the existence, in those islands, of a native Christian community, and is of so interesting a character, that I offer no apology for forwarding to the SOCIETY certain extracts from the MS.

"In former times Kissa was the seat of the Dutch residency of the south-west islands; and it is still the most populous of the group, the people being also further advanced in civilization than their neighbours. The natives hoisted a Dutch flag on our arrival; and several of the chiefs came off to welcome us to their shores shortly after we had come to an anchor. I soon went on shore, accompanied by Mr. Kam and several of the gentlemen, when we found a multitude of natives assembled on the beach to receive us, and provided with litters to carry us up into the country. The proofs of joy at our arrival evinced by the assembled crowd were indeed striking in the extreme. . . . Marna, the chief village which lies inland, about half an hour's journey from the fort, is approached by a pathway, shaded by high trees, running along a deep valley. The village has an appearance of great neatness; the houses, many of which have the sides constructed of planks, being surrounded by gardens kept in the greatest order; and although the buildings are of different heights and sizes, the village has by no means an irregular appearance. It is enclosed on one side by a stone wall, and on the other three by hedges or pagga, fences. All the inhabitants profess the Christian religion; and the large well-built church in which they perform their devotions is kept in a state of perfect order. The village altogether presents a charming proof of the order, neatness, and industry of the inhabitants, by which they have naturally risen to a greater state of prosperity than will be found in most other native places. The entire island consists of clusters of hillocks, luxuriantly clothed with herbage, the summits of which we often ascended to enjoy the delightful prospect afforded by the villages and cultivated fields spread over the face of the country; the scene being enlivened by the presence of men, women, and children, busily pursuing their avocations. . . .

"Mr. Kam having expressed a wish to perform divine service at the church after the conclusion of the meeting, we entered this neat and substantial building, where we found that every auditor was provided with a proper seat, although, owing to our presence, the church was very full. Mr. Kam gave a discourse in Malayan and Dutch. The unbroken silence maintained by the auditors, their deep attention, and the truly religious gravity which sat upon every countenance, rendered the scene highly solemn and impressive. When the service was over, about sixty of the natives, old as well as young, were baptized by Mr. Kam, who also united twelve couples in marriage. The village church is 90 feet in length by 40 in breadth; the roof being elevated about 60 feet from the ground. . . . On the morning of the 15th, I again went on shore, and after visiting the village, penetrated further into the interior than I had previously been. Proofs of the industry and orderly habits of the natives were encountered at every step. My attention was particularly drawn to the course of instruction adopted at the schools, where all the children, under nine or ten years of age, assemble to learn reading, writing, and the rudiments of Christianity." I have heard that there is an intention to publish.

in London a translation of the Journal from which the above extracts are taken. If so, I should apologize to the SOCIETY for the length at which I have given these passages, which will be so much more readily within their reach. But I cannot omit pointing out how providentially such a body of native Christians appears to be placed in the immediate neighbourhood of the new settlement; and I trust that the SOCIETY will share with me the pleasing expectation, that by establishing a communication with these apparently uncorrupt islanders, an opening may be afforded for extending the blessing of an acquaintance with the Gospel over the numerous islands which lie between Timor and the Philippines. They are indebted to the Dutch for the knowledge which they possess of Christianity; but the declining power and energy of that nation in those seas may probably leave it to us as a duty to follow up the advantage which is thus opened to us. If we are to make at the commencement a favourable impression upon the minds of these natives, with whom we shall shortly be in a state of frequent intercourse, we must show them that we are Christians no less than themselves; and when they visit our settlement they must not be allowed to remark so obvious an inferiority in us, as that while they have churches for the public worship of God, we have none. In concert, therefore, with Sir Gordon Bremer, I have determined to place at his disposal the sum of three hundred pounds, to be applied towards the erection of a plain but sufficiently capacious building at Port Essington; and if any clergyman suited for this particular employment should arrive from England previously to the departure of the expedition, I shall make arrangements for its being accompanied by him. If not, the earliest future opportunity will be taken to supply that want. With regard to the expenditure above mentioned, I have arrived at a conviction, after revolving the subject very carefully in my mind, that the importance of the undertaking justified me in relying on the co-operation of the Societies for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts and Promoting Christian Knowledge; and I have taken upon myself the responsibility of promising to Sir Gordon Bremer that each of them would grant £100 towards the erection of the proposed church; and that I would furnish the remaining £100 from the funds subscribed in England, and placed at my disposal, for the general service of religion in this diocese.

Most earnestly praying that the Almighty will afford His blessing and encouragement to a SOCIETY whose labours are all so devoted to the advancement of His glory, I remain,

Reverend Sir,
Your most faithful friend and humble servant,
W. G. AUSTRALIA.

The SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL has recently issued another Circular to its district secretaries, conveying a vote of thanks to them for their valuable services, and strongly recommending the "formation of parochial associations as the best means of interesting the people generally in the objects and operations of the SOCIETY, and so permanently increasing its income." It is thought that many among the middle and lower classes might be desirous of contributing according to their means, especially if the objects and operations of the SOCIETY were plainly set before them (as has already been done with much effect in many instances) in an address from their own clergyman. To facilitate the collection of small sums a convenient ruled book has been prepared, from the cover of which we take the following short summary:—

The SOCIETY has on its list 254 Missionaries, of which number there are stationed,—

In North America	155
The West Indies	42
India	26
The Cape	2
Australia (including those about to sail)	29

Besides 70 Schoolmasters and Catechists.

Total expenditure of the SOCIETY in promoting its Missionary designs for the year 1838	£55,940	4	6
Total Income from all sources	43,365	6	9
Deficiency	£12,583	17	9

The SOCIETY is still extending its operations to meet the continually increasing demands of our destitute Churches abroad; demands which can never adequately be met without a vigorous and united effort on the part of Churchmen at home. The SOCIETY therefore earnestly appeals to every parish in the country to come forward and lend a helping hand to this most sacred cause.

At a numerous meeting in aid of the SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL which was recently held at Clapham, the Rev. Dr. Deatry, the Chairman, read the following letter from the Rev. J. Bateman, late chaplain to the Bishop of Calcutta, in reply to some reflections which had been made in a newspaper on the character of the SOCIETY's Indian Missionaries.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE —

Sir,—My attention having been drawn to a letter in your paper signed "E. H.," in which some inquiries are made as to the piety and devotedness of the missionaries of the incorporated SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL, I am desirous of saying a few words upon the subject, though I must confine my remarks to one important branch only of the SOCIETY's operations; viz., India.

Your Correspondent requests that some one of enlightened piety should supply the information which he seeks. This character I may not arrogate to myself; neither, if I did, would he be the more inclined, I imagine, to believe my testimony; but, if to be a clergyman of the Church of England,—if to have a deep sense of the importance of the missionary work,—if to have visited every station belonging to the SOCIETY through the whole of India,—if to have known personally every missionary in their employ,—if to have kept up a constant and friendly correspondence with many of them during the last six years,—if these be grounds for the confidence of "E. H.," then my reply to his inquiries may be satisfactory.

Ever since I have returned to England it has been a source of regret to me that much misapprehension seems to rest upon the subject, and that there are many "E. H.'s" in the Church, who hesitate to support the Society toto animo, from a lingering doubt as to the piety of its missionaries. Nothing can be more unfounded. My solemn conviction is, that no body of missionaries in India have, on the whole, more true piety, more correct views on the great doctrines of Christianity, or more devotedness to their work and labour of love, than the missionaries of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel.

In former times, perhaps, it was not so. There was a long interval between the fathers of the mission in Southern India, the venerable Swartz, Gerické, and others, and the present class of younger missionaries. During this interval less vigilance was exercised at home, and there was no episcopal control abroad. Although, therefore, many holy men lived and laboured, yet there were some whose standard of piety was very low, and a few who disgraced their profession. But it is hard that the remembrance of these things should live so long, and harder still that they should be visited upon the present body of missionaries.

I have claimed a personal acquaintance with almost all who are now employed in India. For those whom I have not known, I can produce far stronger testimony than my own. Bishop Corrie, whose praise is in all the churches, ordained four, I think, of five of the later missionaries; at all events he conferred priest's orders upon them, and his testimony is this:—that men more able, more pious, better qualified in every respect he had never known; and that it rejoiced his heart to send them to the work of God. He augured great things for India through their means.

In no case can I mention names. It would be inexpedient, knowing as I do, that the — is read in India; but I write with no mental reservation of any kind. I know what your Correspondent "E. H." means, and my object is to give the most satisfactory answer which words and an anonymous signature can do. He needs not to hesitate; none need hesitate to urge the claims of the SOCIETY in the strongest way, for, in India at least, the work (through God's goodness) is prospering, and the instruments employed are sound in the faith, attached to the Church, and (allowing always for human infirmity), laborious, pious, spiritual men of God.

Though not one of their honoured number, I cannot bear that suspicion of any kind should rest upon them; and that, whilst we are sitting quietly at home, and they are bearing the burden and heat of the day, their hands should be weakened, and their hearts discouraged, by hearing that doubts, to say the least, are felt concerning them.

Your obedient servant, B^c.

Dec. 4, 1838.

CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Delivery of Instructions to Missionaries.—On the 5th instant, the instructions of the Committee were delivered to the Rev. Francis William Taylor and Mrs. Taylor, by the Clerical Secretary, on occasion of their departure to Ceylon. The instructions having been acknowledged by Mr. Taylor, they were commended in prayer to the favour and protection of Almighty God, by the Rev. A. R. C. Dallas.

Departure of Missionaries.—Mr. and Mrs. Taylor embarked at Gravesend, on board the "Tigrit," Capt. Stevens, on the 11th instant.

On the 26th instant the instructions of the Committee were delivered to Mr. John Mason and Mrs. Mason, on occasion of their departure to New Zealand. The instructions having been acknowledged by Mr. Mason, they were commended in prayer to the favour and protection of Almighty God.

Ordination of a Missionary.—Mr. Octavius Hadfield was admitted to Deacon's Orders, by the Lord Bishop of Australia, at Sydney, on the 23d of September last.

South-Africa Mission.—Mr. R. Philips, in a letter dated October 12, 1838, informs us, that he safely arrived at Port Elizabeth on the 10th of that month. Mrs. Philips was prematurely confined of a still-born child at sea on the 24th of September: she had suffered severely, but was recovering much better than could have been anticipated.

North-India Mission.—By despatches from this mission, dated Nov., 1838, we learn that the Rev. Messrs. Hoernle and Schneider, with their wives, safely reached Calcutta on the 26th of October; and left for their station at Agra, on the 9th of November.

Western-India Mission.—The Rev. C. P. Farrar, with Mrs. Farrar, left Bombay, on a visit home, Nov. 1, 1838, on board the "Hugh Lindsay" steamer; and arrived in London on the 7th instant.

West-Indies' Mission.—The Rev. R. Panton, in a letter dated Kingston, Jan. 18, 1839, informs us of the safe arrival of himself, Mrs. Panton, and Miss Elliott, at that place on the 11th of January. Miss Elliott was united in marriage to Mr. J. Gillies on the 14th of January.

The same letter communicates the painful intelligence of the death of the Rev. Edmund Corner, on the 11th of January. Mr. Panton remarks:—

"Immediately on landing, I proceeded to the Society's house in this city; and, on entering, was informed that I came to a house of mourning, that the Rev. E. Corner had gone to his rest about an hour before. You may imagine how severe a shock this was on our arrival, and you will be fully sensible of the severe loss the mission has sustained. I cannot do more than merely inform you of our loss on this occasion, as the Committee are sitting, and require my presence, and the packet sails to day."

Mr. T. Gilbert, in a letter dated San Fernando, December 28, 1838, announces the safe arrival of himself, Mrs. Gilbert, Mr. Hawkins, and Miss Fox, at that place on the 24th of December.—Church Missionary Record,

NATIONAL SOCIETY.

ON THE UNION OF DIOCESAN BOARDS OF EDUCATION, AND DISTRICT SOCIETIES, AND SCHOOLS, WITH THE NATIONAL SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING THE EDUCATION OF THE POOR IN THE PRINCIPLES OF THE ESTABLISHED CHURCH THROUGHOUT ENGLAND AND WALES.

THE General Committee having taken into their consideration, the measures which are now in progress throughout the country for the extension of education in connection with the National Society, and the principles embodied in the SOCIETY'S Charter, have agreed to the following resolutions:—

I. That Diocesan Boards and District Societies be received into union with the NATIONAL SOCIETY on professing their adherence to its principles as set forth in the Charter; their desire to promote its objects; and their willingness to transmit to the SOCIETY periodical reports on the state and progress of education in their respective districts.

II. That schools be united to the NATIONAL SOCIETY on the managers signing the following declaration, viz.—

"Terms of Union, to be subscribed by parties desirous of uniting their Schools with the NATIONAL SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING THE EDUCATION OF THE POOR IN THE PRINCIPLES OF THE ESTABLISHED CHURCH THROUGHOUT ENGLAND AND WALES, either immediately, or mediately through the Diocesan or District Society in connection with the same."

1. "The children are to be instructed in the Holy Scriptures and in the Liturgy and Catechism of the Established Church.

2. "With respect to such instruction the Schools are to be subject to the superintendence of the Parochial Clergyman.

3. "The children are to be regularly assembled for the purpose of attending Divine Service in the Parish Church, or other place of worship under the Establishment, unless such reason be assigned for their non-attendance as is satisfactory to the managers of the School.

4. "The Masters and the Mistresses are to be members of the Church of England.

5. "A report on the state and progress of the Schools is to be made at Christmas in every year, to the Diocesan Board, the District Society, or the NATIONAL SOCIETY; and the Schools are, with the consent of the managers, to be periodically inspected by persons appointed either by the Bishop of the Diocese, the National Society, or the Diocesan Board of Education.

6. "In case any difference should arise between the Parochial Clergy and the Managers of the Schools, with reference to the preceding rules, respecting the religious instruction of Scholars, or any regulation connected therewith, an appeal is to be made to the Bishop of the Diocese, whose decision is to be final."

III. That the following form of certificate be used in the case of Infant Schools:—

"We, the undersigned (being desirous of establishing, &c.), an Infant School for the benefit of the Poor of (the parish of —), do hereby certify, that the Education in such School is to be conducted on the principles of the Established Church, and by Masters or Mistresses who are members of the same; and, we further declare, that we shall be ready to report upon the state and progress of the School from time to time, in the manner usually pursued by National Schools."

IV. That Middle or Commercial Schools may be received into connection with the NATIONAL SOCIETY, or its Diocesan Boards, upon a declaration from the Proprietors or Managers, that religious instruction in conformity with the doctrine and discipline of the Established Church shall be given therein, and that the Schools will be open to the occasional visitation of the Parochial Clergy.

V. That copies of the Resolutions now agreed to, be transmitted to the Diocesan Boards, and District Societies; and that the Secretary be directed, in communicating the same, to state that, although the exclusive use of the religious tracts on the Catalogue of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, be no longer required as a condition of union, the General Committee will continue to supply, with their Annual Report, a list of the Educational Works upon such Catalogue, and the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge will continue to afford to Schools in union the accustomed facilities for obtaining them.

Secretary to the National Society.

PAPERS ON EDUCATION.

(Presented to Parliament by Her Majesty's command.)

Ordered by the House of Commons to be printed,
Feb. 12, 1839.

Whitehall, Feb. 4, 1839.

MY Lord,—I have received Her Majesty's commands to make a communication to your lordship on a subject of the greatest importance. Her Majesty has observed with deep concern the want of instruction which is still observable among the poorer classes of her subjects. All the inquiries which have been made show a deficiency in the general education of the people, which is not in accordance with the character of a civilized and Christian nation.

The reports of the chaplains of gaols show that, to a large number of unfortunate prisoners a knowledge of the fundamental truths of natural and revealed religion has never been imparted.

It is some consolation to Her Majesty to perceive that of late years the zeal for popular education has increased; that the Established Church has made great efforts to promote the building of schools; and that the National and British and Foreign School Societies have actively endeavoured to stimulate the liberality of the benevolent and enlightened friends of general education.

Still much remains to be done; and among the chief defects yet subsisting may be reckoned the insufficient number of qualified schoolmasters; the imperfect mode of teaching which prevails in, perhaps, the greater number of the schools; the absence of any sufficient inspection of the schools; the examination of the nature of the instruction given; the want of a model-school which might serve for the example of those Societies and Committees which anxiously seek to improve their own methods of teaching; and finally, the neglect of this great subject among the enactments of our voluminous legislation.

Some of these defects appear to admit of an immediate remedy; and I am directed by Her Majesty to desire, in the first place, that your lordship, with four other of the Queen's servants, should form a Board or Committee for the consideration of all matters affecting the education of the people.

For the present it is thought advisable that this Board should consist of,

The Lord President of the Council.

The Lord Privy Seal.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer.

The Secretary of State for the Home Department.

The Master of the Mint.

It is proposed that the Board should be entrusted with the application of any sums which may be voted by Parliament for the purposes of education in England and Wales.

Among the first objects to which any grant may be applied will be the establishment of a normal school.

In such a school a body of schoolmasters may be formed, competent to assume the management of similar institutions in all parts of the country. In such a school likewise the best modes of teaching may be introduced; and those who wish to improve the schools of their neighbourhood may have an opportunity of observing their results.

The Board will consider whether it may not be advisable for some years to apply a sum of money annually in aid of the normal schools of the National and of the British and Foreign School Societies.

They will likewise determine whether their measures will allow them to afford gratuities to deserving schoolmasters. There is no class of men whose rewards are so disproportionate to their usefulness to the community.

In any normal or model school to be established by the Board, four principal objects should be kept in view, viz.

1. Religious instruction.
2. General instruction.
3. Moral training.
4. Habits of industry.

Of these four, I need only allude to the first. With respect to religious instruction there is, as your lordship is aware, a wide, or apparently wide, difference of opinion among those who have been most forward in promoting education.

The National Society, supported by the Established Church, contend that the schoolmaster should be invariably a Churchman; that the Church catechism should be taught in the schools to all the scholars; that all should be required to attend church on Sundays; and that the schools should be in every case under the superintendence of the clergyman of the parish.

The British and Foreign School Society, on the other hand, admit Churchmen and Dissenters equally as schoolmasters, require that the Bible should be taught in their schools, but insist that no catechism should be admitted.

Others, again, contend that secular instruction should be the business of the school, and that the ministers of different persuasions should each instruct separately the children of their own followers.

In the midst of these conflicting opinions, there is not practically that exclusiveness among the Church societies, nor that indifference to religion among those who exclude dogmatic instruction from the school, which their mutual accusations would lead bystanders to suppose.

Much therefore, may be effected by a temperate attention to the fair claims of the Established Church, and the religious freedom sanctioned by law.

On this subject I need only say, that it is Her Majesty's wish that the youth of this kingdom should be religiously brought up, and that the right of conscience should be respected.

Moreover, there is a large class of children who may be fitted to be good members of society without injury or offence to any party,—I mean pauper orphans, children deserted by their parents, and the offspring of criminals, and their associates.

It is from this class that the thieves and house-breakers of society are continually recruited. It is this class likewise which has filled the workhouses with ignorant and idle inmates.

The Poor-law Commissioners have very properly undertaken to amend the vicious system which has hitherto prevailed; and in the neighbourhood of the metropolis much has been already done under their auspices.

It is in this direction likewise that certain good can be accomplished. It sometimes happens that the training which the child of poor but virtuous parents receives at home, is but ill exchanged for the imperfect or faulty instruction which he receives at school, debased by vicious association; but for those whose parents are dead, or who have no home but one of habitual vice, there can be no such danger.

In all such instances, by combining moral training with general instruction, the young may be saved from the temptations to crime, and the whole community receive indisputable benefit.

These and other considerations will, I am persuaded, receive from your lordship the most careful attention. I need not enter, at present, into any further plans in contemplation for the extension of the blessings of sound and religious education.

I have, &c.,

Berkeley-square, Feb. 6, 1839.

My Lord,—I have had the honour to receive your lordship's letter, conveying to me Her Majesty's desire that I, as President of the Council, together with certain other of Her Majesty's servants should compose a Board or Committee, to consider the state of education, and direct the application of any sums which may be appropriated by Parliament for promoting its improvement.

I hasten to express my readiness, whilst I continue to fill that situation, to discharge my share of such a duty, convinced as I am of the importance of the objects proposed, and the improbability of their being satisfactorily accomplished without the countenance and superintendence of Her Majesty's Government.

I at the same time beg leave, at the outset, to state my opinion, that the establishment of a normal school, for training masters in the most perfect methods of communicating literary and industrial, as well as moral and religious, instruction, is the most pressing and important of these objects, both in itself and as being a necessary step to the attainment of the rest; and also the strong conviction which I entertain that it should be a positive condition of such an establishment, that it should be so regulated and provided with sufficient means to enable the teachers who are trained there, to acquire and to give such religious instruction as may be required at all ordinary schools in the principles of the Church of England, without any exclusion of those who may be connected with other religious persuasions as are known to prevail amongst a considerable portion of the population of the country, who may be desirous, and should be enabled, to receive similar instruction from their own ministers, subject to the controul and superintendence of the authority under which the school will be placed.

That such a regulation should be distinctly promulgated and understood appears to me indispensable for its success, in diffusing widely those benefits which all are alike entitled to receive, and combining with the most approved methods of education the most solid foundation on which it can be placed.

I have, &c.,
(Signed) LANSDOWNE.
The Lord John Russell, &c.

Whitehall, Feb. 9, 1839.

My Lord,—I have had the honour to lay before the Queen your lordship's letter to me of the 6th instant, and I am commanded to inform you that Her Majesty is pleased to approve of the course your lordship proposes to pursue.

I have, &c.,
(Signed) J. RUSSELL.
The President of the Council.

MEETING ON NATIONAL EDUCATION.

(From the Oxford Herald.)

ON Tuesday last a meeting was held in the Town-hall, of persons friendly to the improvement and extension of education according to the principles of the Church of England.

On the motion of the Earl of Abingdon, the Lord Bishop of Oxford took the chair, amidst the most cordial greetings of the clergy and gentry assembled. Golightly, G. Wells, R. Greswell, W. L. Lancaster, Roundell, and several of the resident members of the University, gentlemen of the county, and respectable inhabitants of the city.

Letters were read from the following gentlemen, who concurred in the objects of the meeting, but were prevented attending:—

Oxfordshire.—The Earl of Macclesfield; Lord Saye and Sele; Lord Redesdale; Lord Norreys; Sir R. H. Inglis, Bart.; Mr. T. B. Estcourt, M.P.; Sir H. Lambert, Bart.; Mr. Donald Maclean, M.P.; Mr. J. H. The Right Rev. the CHAIRMAN rose and addressed the meeting as follows:—It is very gratifying to me to be called upon to preside at a meeting such as that which I now see before me. I am sensible that the invitation and call upon me to do so has arisen from my position as bishop of this diocese; and had it not been for this (deeply anxious as I am upon the subject of the business which brings us together on this day) I should have begged to decline the honour, when I see, so many around me incomparably more fitted to preside than myself. The meeting, however, is, as it ought to be, diocesan; and being such, I am proud of the honour of presiding. Gentlemen, I feel that I shall best promote the efficiency of this day's work, as well as best consult your time and convenience, if I abstain from attempting to make any lengthened speech upon the transcendent importance of the object which has called us together, the advantages to be derived from, and our bounden duty at all times to promote, the extension of religious education, upon the principles of the Church of England, to the utmost of our power—(cheers)—together with the fearful necessity which is imposed upon us at this peculiar moment to do so, too strongly felt by us all to require one word to stimulate the zeal of those who are embarked in the great cause of furthering and extending pure Christianity. (Cheers.) We have now not only to do all the good we can quietly, as in times of peace and concord; but we have to arrest and to avert evils we foresee, and with which we are threatened. Schemes of a national system of education are now advocated in which religious instruction seems to be a secondary object—(cheers)—and if religion be taught at all, no matter what the creed of the teacher, a system, in fact, which has been shortly, but happily, designated as a "plan for teaching morality without religion, and religion without a creed." (Loud cheers.) That the established Church has but a faint prospect of favour and support in the scheme about to be proposed to Parliament, I fear, too clear. I am sorry to see it announced to us, and from high authority, that the National Society is to expect a very reduced, if any, grant at all this year; and it is with deeper regret that I read (and from the same high authority) the expressed opinion that the aid formerly given by the Government to the National Society for educating our poor upon the principles of the Established Church, was "a system of exclusiveness, and the adoption of a principle at variance with the general spirit of our laws, and with the existing feelings of society." I know not what is meant by society, but my firm conviction is, that the Established Church is dear to the great mass and majority of this nation—(cheers)—that she is regarded and respected by many who on points dissent from her; and I am quite sure that no system of education, independent of spiritual instruction and from interference with which the clergy are to be excluded, will be acceptable or even tolerable to the people. (Cheers.) I have already, in a charge to my clergy, stated my opinion that our system of national education was capable of great and essential improvement; that the range of instruction might be extended; and that it is our duty to render the system as perfect as we can; but that it is our especial duty to watch lest the "one thing needful" be omitted, or rendered secondary in the education of our people—(cheers)—that we see they be "rooted and built up in Christ, and established in the faith;" and that they be not, through any neglect or mistaken notion of liberality on our part, "spoilt through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ." (Loud cheers.) Gentlemen, to approve and to extend our system is the object of our meeting this day; and in proportion to the hopelessness of our looking for aid where we were accustomed heretofore to find it, and whence we might have expected it, in that proportion must our own energies be increased. (Cheers.) Gentlemen, I will trespass no further on your time, but will entreat you to give your best consideration to the resolutions which will be proposed to you. (Loud cheers.)

The meeting was afterwards addressed by the Earl of Abingdon, Rev. Dr. Ball, Canon of Christ Church, Lord Churchill, Archdeacon Berens, Sir H. Russell, Bart., Rev. Mr. Jerram, Mr. C. Peers, Rev. G. Hulme, Rev. R. Greswell, Mr. W. H. Ashhurst, the President of St. John's College, the Warden of Merton College, Rev. S. W. Yates, Sir A. Cooke, the Archdeacon of Oxford, Major Weyland, Mr. Walter, and the Rev. V. Thomas.

After the meeting a subscription was commenced, of which the first names that we saw were, the Dean and Chapter of Christ Church, 100*l.* annual subscription; the Lord Bishop of Oxford, 20*l.* donation and 5*l.* annual subscription; Lord Redesdale, 50*l.* donation; J. H. Langston, Esq., 10*l.* annual subscription; the Marquis of Downshire, 10*l.*; the Rev. C. Keene, 30*l.*

The Board, we understand, met afterwards in the grand jury room, to appoint the archidiaconal boards; and on the following day again met to concert measures for immediate operation.

ECCLESIASTICAL DUTIES AND REVENUES BILL.

BROUGHT IN BY LORD JOHN RUSSELL AND THE CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER,
Feb. 18, 1839.

THIS Bill, after reciting the recommendations contained in the fourth Report of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, proposes the following enactments, for the purpose of carrying those recommendations into effect, with certain modifications.

I. That all the members of chapter, except the dean, in every cathedral and collegiate church in England shall hereafter be called canons; and that the terms "canon" and "canonry" contained in this Act, shall be taken to comprehend respectively all such members of chapter, and all such dignities in chapters, as have heretofore respectively been called prebendaries or residentiaries, and prebends or residentiaryships.

III. That in the said chapter of Christchurch, the canonry which shall first be vacant, not being one of the two canonries which are respectively annexed to regius professorships in the university of Oxford, shall, immediately upon the vacancy thereof, become and be permanently annexed to the Lady Margaret's professorship of divinity in that university, and shall and may be held by the then and every future Lady Margaret's professor of divinity therein; and that the two canonries which shall next become vacant, not being either of the three canonries hereinbefore specified, shall, immediately upon the vacancies thereof respectively, be suppressed; and that upon such annexation as aforesaid, the canonry in the cathedral church of Worcester, which is now annexed to the last-mentioned professorship, shall be, ipso facto, detached therefrom, and shall become vacant.

IV. That so soon as conveniently may be, and by the authority hereinafter provided, the rectory of the parish of St. Margaret, in the City of Westminster, and one of the prebendal houses belonging to the chapter of the said collegiate church of St. Peter, Westminster, shall be permanently annexed to the canonry in the said collegiate church now held by Henry Hart Milman, clerk, Master of Arts; and such house shall be the house of residence belonging to the benefice; and the share of the revenues of the said chapter, which would be payable to the holder of such canonry, shall be subdivided into twelve equal parts; seven of such parts to be paid to the canon, and the other five parts to be applied towards providing a house or houses of residence for the minister or ministers of one or more district church or churches in the said parish, and for endowing such minister or ministers, and the minister of Broadway Chapel in the said parish, in such proportions as shall be determined upon; and that immediately upon such last-mentioned annexation the said rectory of the said parish of St. Margaret shall be in the patronage of Her Majesty.

V. That so soon as conveniently may be, and by the like authority, the rectory of the parish of St. John, in the same city, shall be permanently annexed to the canonry in the said last-mentioned collegiate church, now held by John Jennings, Clerk, Master of Arts; and the share of the revenues of the said chapter in the like manner, which would be payable to the holder of such last-mentioned canonry, shall be subdivided into twelve equal parts; seven of such parts to be paid to the canon, and the other five parts to be applied towards providing a house or houses of residence for the minister or ministers of one or more district church or churches in the same parish, and for endowing such minister or ministers in such proportions as shall be determined upon; and that upon such last-mentioned annexation the said rectory of the parish of St. John shall be in the patronage of Her Majesty.

VI. That immediately upon such two last-mentioned annexations respectively, the said parishes of St. Margaret and St. John shall become and be part of the province of Canterbury, of the diocese of London, and of the archdeaconry of Middlesex; and the said parishes, and the rectors and other ministers and officers thereof respectively shall be subject, in ecclesiastical matters, to the jurisdiction of the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishop of London, and the Archdeacon of Middlesex respectively, in the same manner as other parishes in the said province, diocese, and archdeaconry are respectively subject thereto; and all other ecclesiastical jurisdiction hitherto exercised in the said parishes, or either of them, shall thenceforth entirely cease and determine.

VII. That in the cathedral church of Canterbury the two canonries which shall first be vacant, shall, immediately upon the vacancies thereof respectively, be suppressed, and that the then next vacancy shall and may be filled up by Her Majesty; and that the two canonries which shall next thereafter become vacant shall be suppressed, and that the then next vacancy shall and may be filled up by the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury; and that the two canonries which shall then next become vacant shall be in like manner suppressed, and that the then next vacancy shall and may be filled up by Her Majesty; and that the two canonries which shall then next become vacant shall be in like manner suppressed; and that upon the third then succeeding vacancy, and thereafter upon every fourth vacancy, the said archbishop shall and may appoint a canon in the said cathedral church; all other vacancies therein being filled up by Her Majesty.

VIII. That, subject to the proviso in that behalf hereinafter contained, in the cathedral churches of Durham, Winchester, Worcester, Ely, and Exeter respectively, the two canonries which shall first be vacant shall, immediately upon the vacancies thereof respectively, be suppressed, and that the two canonries which shall become vacant after the then next vacancy in the said churches respectively, shall be in like manner suppressed; and that in the said cathedral churches of Durham, Winchester, and Worcester respectively, the two canonries which shall become vacant after the then next vacancy therein respectively, shall be in like manner suppressed; and that in the said cathedral churches of Durham and Winchester respectively, the two canonries which shall become vacant after the then next vacancy therein respectively, shall be in like manner suppressed.

IX. That, subject to the proviso in that behalf hereinafter contained, in the collegiate church of St. Peter, Westminster, and in Her Majesty's Royal Free Chapel of St. George, in Windsor, eight canonries shall be suppressed, in like manner and in the same order as is hereinbefore expressed and provided respecting the canonries to be suppressed in the said cathedral churches of Durham and Winchester respectively.

X. That in the cathedral churches of Bristol, Chester, Gloucester, Norwich, Peterborough, Rochester, Salisbury, Wells, and Ripon respectively, the canonry which shall first be vacant shall, immediately upon the vacancy thereof, be suppressed; and the canonry which shall become vacant after the then next vacancy in the said churches respectively, shall be in like manner suppressed; and that the sub-deanery in the said cathedral church of Ripon shall, immediately upon the vacancy thereof, be also suppressed.

XI. That in the cathedral church of Hereford the first vacant canonry, not being that of the bishop, shall, immediately upon the vacancy thereof, be suppressed.

XII. That in the cathedral church of Lichfield, the canonry now held by the rector of the church of St. Philip, in Birmingham, shall, immediately upon the first vacancy thereof, be suppressed; and the first of the other canonries which may be vacant, shall, in like manner, be suppressed.

XIII. Provided always, That, notwithstanding the provisions hereinbefore contained respecting the suppression of canonries, Henry Jenkyns, clerk, professor of Greek in the university of Durham, shall and may be appointed to the canonry in the said cathedral church of Durham, which was designed for him by William, late Bishop of Durham, and which is now held by Richard Prosser, Doctor in Divinity, upon the first vacancy thereof; and that the said provisions shall not be construed to extend to the suppression of the canonry in the same church, which is by Act of Parliament to be annexed to the archdeaconry of Durham, or to either of the canonries in the said collegiate church of St. Peter, Westminster, to which the said rectories of St. Margaret and St. John, Westminster, are to be respectively annexed as aforesaid; or to the canonry in the said cathedral church of Gloucester, which is annexed to the mastership of Pembroke College in Oxford; or to either of the canonries in the said cathedral church of Rochester, which are respectively annexed to the provostship of Oriel College, in Oxford, and to the archdeaconry of Rochester; or to the canonry in the said cathedral church of Norwich, which is annexed to the mastership of Catherine-hall, in Cambridge; or to any canonry in any cathedral or collegiate church which shall hereafter, according to the provisions of this Act, be permanently annexed to any archdeaconry, or united with any parochial charge; but that if a vacancy in the last-mentioned canonry in the said church of Durham, or in either of the canonries herein enumerated after the said last-mentioned canonry, shall occur in such order or succession as that, according to the said provisions, such canonry would be one of the canonries to be suppressed, such vacancy shall and may nevertheless be filled up, and the canonry in the same church, which shall then next become vacant, shall be suppressed.

XIV. That the deanery of every cathedral and collegiate church upon the old foundation in England, and the three existing canonries in the cathedral church of St. Paul, in London, shall from henceforth be in the direct patronage of Her Majesty, who shall and may, upon the vacancy of any such deanery or canonry, appoint, under her royal sign manual, any person, duly qualified according to the provisions of this Act, to be dean or canon, as the case may be; and every person so appointed shall thereupon become and be dean or canon of the church to which he may be so appointed, to all intents and purposes.

XV. That in the cathedral church of York, so soon as a vacancy shall occur in the deanery, and in the cathedral churches of Chichester, Exeter, Hereford, Salisbury, and Wells, respectively, so soon as every person who was a member of the respective chapters of such churches, on the thirtieth day of August, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-six, shall cease to be such member, or (if it shall first happen) so soon as there shall cease to be any persons eligible to canonries in the said respective chapters, according to the laws and customs in force at the date last before-mentioned, all the said canonries shall be in the direct patronage of the Lord Archbishop of York and the bishops of the respective sees, as the case may be, who may respectively, upon the vacancy of any canonry in such churches respectively, collate thereto a person duly qualified according to the provisions of this Act, who shall thereupon become and be a canon of the church to which he shall be so collated to all intents and purposes.

XVI. That in the cathedral church of Ripon the canonries shall from henceforth be in the patronage of the Bishop of Ripon for the time being, and not of the Archbishop of York; and that it shall not be necessary for the person to be appointed a canon in the said church to be nominated by the dean and chapter thereof; and that the Bishop of Ripon for the time being shall be the visitor of the said dean and chapter, and not the said Archbishop of York.

XVII. That in the cathedral churches of St. Paul, in London, and of Lincoln, respectively, so soon as conveniently may be, and by the authority hereinafter provided, a new canonry shall be founded, and such arrangements be thereupon made as shall preserve the interests of the existing canons of the said churches respectively.

XVIII. That in every chapter wherein there exists any statute or custom for assigning to the dean, or to any canon, any houses, lands, tithes, or other hereditaments, in addition to his share of the corporate revenues, or for appropriating separately to the dean or any canon, during his incumbency, the proceeds of any houses, lands, tithes, or other hereditaments, part of the corporate property of the chapter, every such statute and custom, or every such part thereof as relates to such assignment or appropriation, shall be and the same is hereby repealed and annulled, as to all deans and canons hereafter appointed: Provided that nothing herein contained shall be construed to apply to any small portion of land adjacent to any residentiary house, and enjoyed by the canon in possession of such house for his domestic accommodation.

XIX. That each of the deans, hereafter appointed, of the cathedral churches of the old foundation in England, the dean of Ripon and the dean of Her Majesty's Royal Free Chapel of St. George in Windsor shall, so soon as may be consistent with existing rights, receive a double share of the divisible corporate revenues of the said churches respectively; and that until the time when the respective chapters of such churches shall be entirely composed of a dean and canons appointed subject to the provisions of this Act, such revenues shall be so apportioned by the authority hereinafter provided, as to afford just shares thereof to the new members of such chapters respectively.

XX. That immediately upon the first vacancy in the deanery of Her Majesty's said Royal Free Chapel of St. George, in Windsor, the rectory of Haseley, in the county of Oxon, shall become and be absolutely detached and dis severed from the said deanery, and shall be in the patronage of the dean and chapter of the said chapel.

XXI. That no new appointment shall be made to the deaneries of Wolverhampton and Middleham respectively, nor to any prebend, dignity, or office, not residentiary, in any cathedral or collegiate church in England and Wales, but that the said deaneries, and every such prebend, dignity, and office shall immediately upon the vacancies thereof respectively be suppressed.

XXII. XLVIII. That, so soon as conveniently may be, and by the like authority, such archdeacons as are not otherwise competently endowed shall be provided for respectively by the annexation, wherever it may be practicable, either of an entire canonry, or of a canonry charged with the payment of such portion of its income as shall be determined on towards providing for another archdeacon in the same diocese, or of such last-mentioned portion of the income of a canonry, or until such arrangement can be made, and in cases where it may be necessary, by augmentation, out of the fund to arise under the provisions of this Act: provided that the said augmentation shall not be such as to raise the annual income of any archdeaconry to an amount exceeding two hundred pounds.

XLIX. That no person shall hereafter be capable of receiving the appointment of dean, archdeacon or canon, or precentor of St. David's, until he shall have been six years complete in priest's orders.

L. That, so soon as conveniently may be, and by the authority hereinafter provided, such arrangements be made, with respect to benefices which are annexed by Act of Parliament, or otherwise to the headships of colleges in the universities of Oxford and Cambridge, as may enable the respective colleges to sell, or themselves to purchase, the advowsons of such benefices, and to invest the proceeds in proper securities, with provisions for the payment of the interest thereof to the respective heads of the colleges for the time being; and that upon the completion of the said arrangements respectively, the existing incumbents of such benefices respectively, shall be at liberty, upon resigning the same, to receive the interest of the proceeds arising from such sales respectively.

LI. That, so soon as conveniently may be, and by the like authority, an arrangement be made to enable the University of Cambridge to sell the advowson of the benefice annexed to the regius professorship of divinity in the said university, and to invest the proceeds of such sale in proper securities, with a provision for the payment of the interest thereof to the regius professor of divinity for the time being; and, that upon the completion of such arrangement, the existing incumbent of the said benefice shall be at liberty, upon resigning the said benefice, to receive such interest.

LII. That with respect to any benefice with cure of souls, which is held together with any sinecure preferment in the patronage of any college in either of the universities, or of any private patron, the revenues of which latter preferment form a part of the income of the existing incumbent of such benefice, arrangements may be made by the like authority, and with the consents of the respective patrons, for permanently annexing such preferment to such benefice.

LIII. That with respect to any parish in which both the profits and the spiritual charge are divided between two or more incumbents, each having a mediety or portion of the benefice, a plan may be laid before the said ecclesiastical commissioners for England by the bishop of the diocese, with the consent of the patron or patrons, for constituting any of such portions separate benefices, or from consolidating two or more of such portions into one benefice to be held by one incumbent, or for making such other arrangements as may promote the efficient discharge of pastoral duties in such parishes, and any such plan may be carried into effect by the authority hereinafter provided.

LIV. With an especial view to the better care of populous parishes, that arrangements may from time to time be made, by the like authority, for improving the value or making a better provision for the spiritual duties of ill-endowed parishes or districts, by means of such exchange of advowsons, or of such other alterations in the exercise of patronage, as may be agreed upon by patrons; with the consent of the bishop in every such case, and where a bishop is himself one of the patrons, with the consent of the archbishop.

LV. That arrangements may be made by the like authority for the apportionment of the income of two benefices belonging to the same patron, or the income of one benefice having more than one church or chapel, between the incumbents or ministers of such benefices, churches or chapels: provided that no such arrangement shall be made with respect to benefices in lay patronage without the consents of the respective patrons, nor in any case without the consent of the bishop of the diocese, except where the bishop himself is patron, and that in such last-mentioned case the consent of the archbishop shall be necessary thereto.

Provided always, that nothing in this Act contained respecting the division of corporate property, the severance of separate property, or the limitation of the exercise of patronage possessed in right of separate property, shall affect any dean, archdeacon, canon, prebendary, dignitary, or officer (except the said Henry Hart Milman and John Jennings), who shall be in possession at the time of the passing thereof; but that every dean, archdeacon, canon, prebendary, dignitary and officer thereafter appointed shall be subject to such regulations as shall be made in pursuance of this Act; and that the provisions herein contained respecting the qualification of persons to be presented to any benefice, in the patronage of any chapter, or the apportionment of the income of any such benefice, shall not affect such chapter so long as any person who was a member thereof, on the thirteenth day of August one thousand eight hundred and thirty-six shall continue such member.

LVII. That the ecclesiastical commissioners for England shall and may from time to time, as they shall think necessary, cause to be amended the valuation of the revenues of the bishopricks, cathedrals, collegiate churches, ecclesiastical corporations aggregate and sole, and benefices in England and Wales, which was made and estimated according to the returns made to the commissioners appointed to inquire into the revenues and patronage of the Established Church in England and Wales, and specified in the report made by the said last-mentioned commissioners, bearing date the sixteenth day of June, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-five; and when any such amended valuation shall be completed and shall have been approved by her Majesty in council, the same shall be printed under the direction of the said ecclesiastical commissioners for England, and shall be taken and held to be evidence of the value of every dignity, office or benefice therein mentioned.

LVIII. That 5 and 6 W. 4, c. 30, 6 and 7 W. 4, c. 67, and 1 and 2 Vict., c. 108, be and the same are hereby repealed; and that within one calendar month after the passing of this Act, the treasurer of the governors of the bounty of Queen Anne shall deliver to the said ecclesiastical commissioners for England, a full and particular account of all monies received and paid by him under and by virtue of the said Acts, or any of them, and of all things done by him, and of all proceedings then pending in respect thereof; and, that within one week after the delivery of such account, he shall pay or cause to be paid to the said commissioners the balance then remaining in his hands, or to his account, in respect thereof.

LIX. That the lands, tithes, hereditaments, monies and revenues to be vested in and paid to the said ecclesiastical commissioners for England under and by virtue of the provisions of this Act, shall be, after a due consideration of the wants and circumstances of the places in which they accrue, from time to time applied, by the authority hereinafter provided, to the purpose of making additional provision for the cure of souls in parishes where such assistance is most required, in such manner as shall be most conducive to the efficiency of the Established Church.

LX. Provided always, that by the like authority so much of the lands, tithes, hereditaments, monies and revenues as shall arise and accrue from the cathedral and collegiate churches within the principality of Wales, shall from time to time be applied to the improvement of poor benefices in the said principality: Provided also, nevertheless, that, if it be deemed fit, a part thereof may by the like authority be transferred to the college of St. David at Lampeter, in exchange for benefices with cure of souls, which are now connected with that establishment.

LXI. Provided also, that so soon as conveniently may be, so much of the land or tithes belonging or attached to the prebend of Sawley, in the said cathedral church of Lichfield, as shall be determined on, shall by the like authority be vested in the rector of the said church of St. Philip in Birmingham, and his successors, rectors thereof, for ever; and that the endowments, of whatsoever kind, belonging to the collegiate churches of Wolverhampton, Heytesbury and Middleham, shall by the like authority be applied to the purpose of making a better provision for the cure of souls, in the districts or places with which the said churches are respectively connected.

LXII. That so much of the property belonging to the collegiate church of Wimborne Minster, as shall upon due inquiry be found legally applicable thereto, shall, by the authority hereinafter provided, be applied to the purpose of making a better provision for the spiritual care of the parish of Wimborne Minster, in the county of Dorset.

LXIII. That so soon as conveniently may be, inquiry shall be made by the ecclesiastical commissioners for England, respecting the state of all such hospitals as were returned as promotions spiritual in the reign of King Henry the Eighth; and in those cases in which it may appear, upon such inquiry, that the endowments of such hospitals are capable, after satisfying the objects of the founder's bounty, of affording a better provision for the cure of souls in the parishes with which they are connected, arrangements may from time to time be made, by the authority hereinafter provided, for effecting such provision.

LXIV. And whereas it is expedient that her Majesty should be empowered to appoint additional commissioners to assist in giving effect to these enactments; be it also enacted, that it shall be lawful for her Majesty to appoint, under the royal sign manual, four fit persons, being members of the Church of England, three of whom at least shall be clerks in holy orders of the Church of England, to be ecclesiastical commissioners and members of the body corporate of "the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England," in addition to the commissioners appointed and to be appointed by and under the first herein recited Act.

LXV. That every commissioner to be appointed under this Act, shall be at all times removable by her Majesty in council by warrant under the sign manual; and when any vacancy shall occur by death, removal, resignation or otherwise, among the said additional commissioners, it shall be lawful for her Majesty to fill up such vacancy by appointing, under the royal sign manual, some other fit person, being a member of the Church of England, to be a commissioner under this Act, so that three at least of the commissioners who shall at any time hold the place of the said four additional commissioners shall be clerks in holy orders of the Church of England; and every person so appointed shall accordingly become to all intents and purposes one of the commissioners for the purposes of this Act, and of the said last-mentioned Act.

LXVI. That every additional commissioner named by this Act, or so to be appointed, and not being a clerk in holy orders of the Church of England, shall, before acting as such commissioner, subscribe the declaration required of the other lay commissioners by the said last-mentioned Act.

LXVII. That all the powers and authorities vested in the ecclesiastical commissioners for England by the last mentioned Act, with reference to the matters therein contained, shall be continued and extended to the commissioners appointed under this Act, with reference to all matters contained in the said Act, or in this Act, and may be used and exercised by them as fully and effectually as if the said powers and authorities were repeated in this Act; and the said last-mentioned Act and this Act shall be construed as if they were one and the same.

LXVIII. That the ecclesiastical commissioners for England shall from time to time prepare and lay before her Majesty in council such schemes as shall appear to the said commissioners, to be required and to be best adapted, for carrying this Act into full effect; and shall in such schemes recommend and propose all such measures as may, upon further inquiry, which the said commissioners are hereby authorized to make, appear to them to be necessary for that purpose: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent the said commissioners from proposing in any such scheme such modifications or variations, as to matters of detail and regulation, as shall not be substantially repugnant to any provision of this Act, or of this said last-mentioned Act; and particularly that it shall be competent to the said commissioners to propose in any such scheme a variation of the proportions to be retained by the said Henry Hart Milman and the said John Jennings respectively out of the proceeds of the canonries held by them respectively as aforesaid.

LXIX. That when any such scheme shall be approved by her Majesty in council, it shall be lawful for her Majesty in council to make an order or orders ratifying the same, and specifying the time or times when such scheme, or the several parts thereof shall take effect, and to direct every such order to be registered by the registrar of each of the dioceses, whereof the bishop, or within which any cathedral or collegiate church, chapter, member of a chapter, officer, incumbent, or any other person or body corporate, may or shall be in any respect affected thereby.

LXX. That every such order shall, as soon as may be after the making thereof by her Majesty in council, be published in the London Gazette; and so soon as any such order in council, or any order in council made under the authority of the said last-mentioned Act shall be so gazetted, it shall in all respects, and as to all things therein contained, have and be of the same force and effect as if all and every part thereof were included in this Act.

LXXI. That a copy of every order of her Majesty in council made under this Act shall be laid before each house of Parliament in the month of January in every year, if Parliament shall be then sitting, or if Parliament be not then sitting, within one week after the next meeting thereof.

LXXII. That the registrar of every diocese to whom any order of her Majesty in council made by virtue of this Act shall be delivered, shall forthwith register the same in the registry of his diocese; and if any such registrar shall refuse or neglect to register any such order, he shall, for every day during which he shall so offend, forfeit and if his offence shall continue for the space of three months, he shall forfeit his office, and it shall be lawful for the bishop of the diocese to appoint a successor thereto.

LXXIII. That for such registration as aforesaid the registrar shall not be entitled to receive any fee or reward, but on every search for any such order, he shall be entitled to receive a fee of three shillings, and for every copy or extract of any such order certified by him he shall be entitled to receive for every folio of ninety words; and the copy of every such entry, certified by the registrar, shall be admissible as evidence in all courts and places whatsoever.

LXXIV. That after the next avoidance of any deanery or canonry, such fixed annual sums shall be paid to the ecclesiastical commissioners for England, out of the revenues of the larger deaneries and canonries respectively, as shall upon due inquiry and consideration be determined on, so as to leave to no future dean a larger average annual income than two thousand pounds sterling, and to no future canon a larger average annual income than one thousand pounds sterling; and at the expiration of every seven years, reckoning from the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and thirty-five, a new return of the revenues of all the deaneries and canonries shall be made to the ecclesiastical commissioners, and thereupon the scale of payments shall be revised, so as to leave to every such dean and canon respectively, as nearly as may be, an amount of income not greater than two thousand and one thousand pounds respectively, and such revised scale shall take effect as to each deanery and canonry respectively upon the next avoidance thereof within the then next period of seven years; and the several sums so paid to the ecclesiastical commissioners shall be applied by them towards increasing small benefices with cure of souls, in each case according to a scheme for that purpose to be prepared by them and laid before her Majesty in council, which scheme shall be taken to be a scheme within the other provisions of this Act: provided always, that in case the said Henry Jenkyns shall succeed to the canonry in the cathedral church of Durham, now held by the said Richard Prosser, this enactment shall not apply to such canonry until the avoidance thereof by the said Henry Jenkyns.

LXXV. That the ecclesiastical commissioners for England shall and may receive and send all letters and packets relating solely to the execution of this Act, and of the said last-mentioned Act, free from the duty of postage, provided that such letters and packets shall be directed to "The Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England;" and that all such letters and packets as shall be sent by the said commissioners shall be dated from their office, and shall be signed on the outside of such letters and packets by such person as the said commissioners shall appoint, with the consent of the Lord High Treasurer, or three or more of the commissioners of her Majesty's treasury, under such restrictions as the said Lord High Treasurer or Lords Commissioners of the Treasury shall think fit to be enforced.

LXXVI. That this Act may be amended or repealed by any Act to be passed in the present session of Parliament.

AN ACT TO ABRIDGE THE HOLDING OF BENEFICES IN PLURALITY, AND TO MAKE BETTER PROVISION FOR THE RESIDENCE OF THE CLERGY.

CXXIV. And be it enacted, that in all cases where the term "cathedral preferment" is used in this Act, it shall be construed to comprehend (unless it shall otherwise appear from the context) every deanery, archdeaconry, prebend, canonry, office of minor canon, priest vicar, or vicar choral, having any prebend or endowment belonging thereto, or belonging to any body corporate consisting of persons holding any such office, and also every precentorship, treasurer'ship, sub-deanery, chancellorship of the church, and other dignity and office in any cathedral or collegiate church, and every mastership, wardenship, and fellowship in any collegiate church; and that in all cases where the term "benefice" is used in this Act, the said term shall be understood and taken to mean benefice with cure of souls, and no other, (unless it shall otherwise appear from the context), and therein to comprehend all parishes, perpetual curacies, donatives, endowed public chapels, parochial chapelries, and chapelries or districts belonging or reputed to belong, or annexed or reputed to be annexed, to any church or chapel, any thing in any other Act to the contrary notwithstanding.

CXXV. CXXVI. And be it enacted, that in any case in which the consent of the patron of any benefice shall be required to the exercise of any power given by this Act, or in which any notice shall be required by this Act to be given to the patron of any benefice, and the patronage of such benefice shall be in the Crown, the consent of the Crown to the exercise of such power shall be testified and such notice shall be given respectively in the manner hereinafter mentioned; (that is to say,) if such benefice shall be above the yearly value of twenty pounds in the Queen's books, the instrument by which the power shall be exercised shall be executed by and any such notice shall be given to the lord high treasurer or first lord commissioner of the Treasury for the time being; and if such benefice shall not exceed the yearly value of twenty pounds in the Queen's books, such instrument shall be executed by and any such notice shall be given to the lord high chancellor, lord keeper or lords commissioners of the great seal, for the time being; and if such benefice shall be within the patronage of the Crown in right of the duchy of Lancaster, such instrument shall be executed by and any such notice shall be given to the chancellor of the said duchy for the time being; and the execution of such instrument by and any such notice given to such person or persons shall be deemed and taken for the purposes of this Act to be an execution by and a sufficient notice to the patron of the benefice.

CXXVII. And be it enacted, that in any case in which the consent of the patron of any benefice shall be required to the exercise of any power given by this Act, and the patron of such benefice shall be a minor, idiot, lunatic, or feme covert, it shall be lawful for the guardian or guardians, committee or committees, or husband of such patron (but in case of a feme covert with her consent in writing) to execute the instrument by which such power shall be exercised in testimony of the consent of such patron; and such execution shall for the purposes of this Act be deemed and taken to be an execution by the patron of the benefice.

CXXVIII. And be it enacted, that in any case in which the consent of the patron of any benefice shall be required to the exercise of any power given by this Act, or in which any notice shall be required by this Act to be given to the patron of any benefice, and the advowson and right of patronage of such benefice shall be part of the possessions of the duchy of Cornwall, the consent of the patron of such benefice to the exercise of such power shall be testified and such notice shall be given respectively in the manner hereinafter mentioned; (that is to say,) the instrument by which the power shall be exercised shall be executed by and any such notice shall be given to the duke of Cornwall for the time being, if of full age, but if such benefice shall be within the patronage of the Crown in right of the duchy of Cornwall, such instrument shall be executed by and any such notice shall be given to the same person or persons who is or are by this Act authorized to testify the consent of the Crown to the exercise of any power given by this Act in respect of any benefice in the patronage of the Crown; and the execution of such instrument by and any such notice given to such person or persons shall be deemed and taken for the purposes of this Act to be an execution by and a sufficient notice to the patron of the benefice.

CXXIX. And be it enacted, that the distance between any two benefices for the purposes of this Act shall be computed from the church of the one to the church of the other by the nearest road or footpath, or by an accustomed ferry; and if on one of the said benefices there be two or more churches, then the distance shall be computed from or to the nearest of such churches, as the case may be; or if on one of such benefices there be no church, then in such manner as shall be directed by the bishop of the diocese in which the benefice proposed to be taken and held by any spiritual person in addition to one already held by him shall be locally situate.

CXXX. And be it enacted, that whenever the population of any place shall be required by this Act to be ascertained, the same shall be taken from the latest returns of population made under any Act of parliament for that purpose at the time when the question shall arise, if such returns shall apply to the place respecting which the question shall be, but if such place shall only form part of a parish or district named in such returns, then such returns shall be taken to represent truly the population of the parish or district named therein, and from them the population of the place required shall be computed, according to the best evidence of which the subject shall be capable.

CXXXI. And be it enacted, that the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Lord High Chancellor, and the Archbishop of York, with the assistance of the vicars general of the said two archbishops, and of one of the masters of the high Court of Chancery, to be selected for that purpose by the Lord High Chancellor, shall ordain and establish tables of fees, and shall have power from time to time to amend or alter such tables of fees, to be taken in respect of donation, presentation, nomination, collation, institution, installation, induction, or licence, or any instrument, matter, or thing connected with the admission of any spiritual person to any cathedral preferment or any benefice throughout England and Wales, by any officer, secretary, clerk, or minister to whom belong the duties of preparing, sealing, transacting, or doing any such instruments, matters, and things; and before the fees contained in such tables or such amended tables shall be demanded, taken, or received by any of the said persons such tables or amended tables shall be submitted to Her Majesty's Privy Council, who may disallow the same or any part thereof; and notice shall be given in the London Gazette of such submission to the Privy Council; and if within the space of three months from the time of giving such notice the same shall not be disallowed, such fees, or such parts thereof as shall not be disallowed, shall from and after the expiration of the said three months be deemed and taken to be lawful fees, and thenceforward such fees, and none others, save only such as may be altered or subsequently ordained, as before provided, shall be demanded, taken, or received by any of such officers, secretaries, clerks, or ministers respectively, under any colour or pretence whatsoever: provided always, that the said persons shall not ordain or establish any fees exceeding the fee which for the twenty years next preceding the passing of this Act shall have been usually taken for or in respect of the same instrument, matter, or thing in case of admission to any cathedral preferment or any benefice within the diocese of London: provided also, that the said persons shall have power to ordain graduated scales of fees in respect of benefices below the yearly value of five hundred pounds.

CXXXII. And be it enacted, that nothing in this Act contained shall be deemed, construed, or taken to derogate from, diminish, prejudice, alter, or affect, otherwise than is expressly provided, any powers, authorities, rights, or jurisdiction already vested in or belonging to any archbishop or bishop under or by virtue of any statute, canon, usage, or otherwise howsoever.

LAW.

RURAL DEANS.

CASE FOR THE OPINION OF DR. PHILLIMORE.

The Rev. Thomas Newcome, M.A., is the Rector of Shenley, Herts, within the Deanery of Berkhamstead, the Archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and the Bishoprick of Lincoln. He has received the following circular from parties newly appointed to the office of Rural Deans:—

"Hemel Hempsted, Jan. 3, 1839.

"Dear Sir,—Having been appointed to the office of Rural Deans, in this Deanery, it is our duty to visit your glebe-house and glebe, your church, chancel, and churchyard, and to take an account of the vestments, sacred utensils, and other ecclesiastical matters. We purpose to be at Shenley for these purposes, if convenient to you, on Friday, the 18th of January instant, at two o'clock; and we shall feel obliged to you to desire that one, at least, of the churchwardens may be in attendance. Since an inspection is to take place annually, and is to include an account of every alteration, whether additions or otherwise, it will very greatly assist us, if you will have the goodness to be provided with a return of the glebe-house, buildings, and land; as also, with the population of your parish at the last census, and the number which your church is calculated to contain.

"It is also our duty to inspect the licences of curates, and the appointments of parish clerks, sextons, and other offices. We are, &c.,

D. JENKS, } Deans."

Mr. Newcome has not the least objection to any inspection or inquiry; but having regularly attended and obeyed the visitation of his Archdeacon at Berkhamstead, and this office of Rural Dean not having existed before in his time, if it ever did at all in this diocese; and, it not appearing that the Archdeacon has assented to appointments, which abstract from him a long-exercised authority on the subject, he is desirous of your opinion.

Whether the Bishop of Lincoln has the right to appoint these Rural Deans? or, whether the office has by usage or otherwise devolved on the Archdeacon, so as to require his assent to such appointment? And, above all, whether the rector of Shenley is bound canonically, or otherwise, to submit to these new functionaries in the several matters mentioned in their circular?

I think the Bishop of Lincoln has power and authority to appoint Rural Deans. It is not the creation of a new office, but the revival of an old one. For Rural Deans were well known to the ancient ecclesiastical constitution of this country, although the office in later days fell into desuetude, and even in the century preceding the Reformation, was reduced to a shadow and a name.

Dioceses were divided into Archdeaconries and Rural Deaneries. The Archdeacons took their titles from the district, which was generally the county, whereas the Rural Deans were appointed for each Hundred.

The functions of Archdeacon can in no way be affected by the revival of the office of Rural Dean.

* Mr. Newcome does not object to "inspection," but to annual written queries, and written replies. By possibility he might be helping to erect a new authority, and, thereby, furnish evidence against himself. Let the Churchwarden testify to the incumbent's conduct, and the incumbent to the Churchwarden's, if faulty.

This office is wholly independent of theirs, it is especially characterised by the exercise of the visitatorial power, to which the Rural Dean is wholly incompetent; his function being that of mere inspection; and it is expressly laid down by Bishop Gibson, vol. ii. p. 972, that Rural Deans can have no concern in Parochial Visitations.

Undoubtedly, if we are to judge from the circular letter, the Rural Deans seem disposed to push their authority to the utmost extent; but still, as long as they confine themselves to mere inspection, I am of opinion, that any interference on their part could not be resisted with effect; and, as their inspection may be of assistance to the Bishop in the general administration of the affairs of his diocese, it would, I think, be inexpedient and unadvisable to offer any captious opposition to their proceedings.

HOUSE OF LORDS, March 5.

MARRIAGE ACT.

The Bishop of LONDON said, that their lordships were aware that about two years ago a bill was passed, altering to a certain degree the law of marriage, in order to satisfy certain Dissenters, who held it to be a grievance to be married according to the religious forms of the Established Church. The number of marriages that had been solemnised since the passing of the act, otherwise than according to the forms of the Church, had been very insignificant—so insignificant, that had the Legislature known it, they would have hesitated before they made such an innovation on the then established law as the bill made. When, however, the Dissenters felt themselves to be aggrieved, it was the duty of the Legislature to afford them relief; but the question was, whether the relief provided would not in the end be attended with more serious grievance than the comparatively trifling grievance that had existed before. He held in his hand two petitions, one from the board of guardians of the Oundle union, the other from the clergy in the neighbourhood, and they tended to show that the law as it now stood was not calculated to heighten, but rather to lower, the tone of public feeling as to the marriage ceremony. There was the case of a marriage solemnized by the superintendent registrar of the Oundle union between a young man and a woman who was his grandmother, a marriage between parties who were incapable of legally entering into such a contract. He did not mean to impute blame to any parties, except the two persons themselves. The registrar-general had undoubtedly committed an error to a certain extent; but it should be regarded with leniency, as mistakes were likely to occur in the administration of an act which had introduced such important and extensive innovations into the law of the country. But, because it was an innovation, the parties who were to administer it should have proceeded with the greatest caution, so as to prevent those evils and offences against morality and religion which were likely to arise. The right rev. prelate then read the petition of the clergy at length, and proceeded to express his regret that the registrar had not taken the advice of ecclesiastical lawyers, who would have at once decided that the marriage was within the prohibited degrees. As soon as the objection had been pointed out, the registrar had issued an injunction; but it was too late, for the marriage had been already solemnized. The petition of the guardians was of a similar nature. There was another complaint made by the clergy who had signed the petition—that the marriage had been performed without the usual notice, and in defiance of the caution of the vicar. He thought it was the duty of the registrar to institute some inquiry into the matter, as a grave error had been committed. He should suggest to their lordships whether some remedy ought not to be applied, in order to prevent the recurrence of such evils as the petitioners apprehended. He did not mean, as he had originally intended, to move for the production of the correspondence which had passed on this subject between the parties and the registrar-general. The observations which he had made, by directing the attention of Government to the subject, would perhaps effect the object which the petitioners had in view. There was another measure on which he wished to make a few remarks—he meant the bill, which was passed at the same time as the Marriage Bill, for the Registration of Births and Deaths. That bill was, at the present time, working a great amount of evil. It had the effect of diminishing the number of baptisms. In some towns which he could name the number of baptisms had been reduced to an extent that he did not wish to mention. Some of the superintendent registrars had inculcated the idea that the rite of Christian baptism was unnecessary—that the mere act of registration was sufficient for every purpose. But the consequence was, that children who thus died unbaptized would be buried without the usual burial ceremony. This neglect of the ceremony of baptism led to a disregard, on the part of parents, of other religious rites, which, but for that neglect, they would probably have attended to. The right rev. prelate concluded by stating, that he should content himself with merely presenting the petition.

The LORD CHANCELLOR said, the statement of the right rev. prelate certainly accorded with the facts as they had been described to him. Such a marriage had taken place as had been alluded to, and it was a remarkable circumstance that the grandmother who had entered into that contract was not of age now. The question was, whether the present state of the law required alteration; but perhaps, as instructions (so we understood the noble and learned lord) had been sent forth to prevent the occurrence of such a circumstance in future, that step would not be necessary. It did not seem easy to devise a mode in which marriages within the prohibited degrees could be prevented from taking place. There was no protection against conduct of this kind before the Registration Act passed. It was utterly impossible to know in what degree of relationship parties coming to be married stood with respect to each other, unless the information came from other quarters; and this circumstance gave rise to the act of Parliament lately passed, by which all marriages within the prohibited degrees were rendered void, and not, as formerly, only voidable.

The Bishop of LONDON said, that the circumstances which he had detailed could not have taken place under the old law.

Lord BROUGHAM said, that the marriage which had been solemnized between the parties was no marriage at all. The issue must be illegitimate, and no subsequent ceremony could heal the illegitimacy. There was no doubt about the law of the case at all, any more than there was about a man's eldest son being his heir-at-law.

Viscount MELBOURNE observed, that if any registering officer had discouraged baptism, he had acted entirely contrary to the advice of the registrar-general.

After a few words from Lords ELLENBOROUGH and WHARNCLEIGH, the petition was ordered to lie on the table.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, Feb. 25.

ECCLESIASTICAL DUTIES AND REVENUES BILL.

On the order of the day being read, Lord J. RUSSELL rose and moved, that the clerk at the table do read certain extracts from speeches from the throne relating to ecclesiastical reform. After having stated the different measures which had been entered upon with regard to these speeches, he came to the measure now proposed to the house, a measure affecting cathedral dignities, and proposing the means by which very small livings might be increased, and additional incomes provided for the clergy in populous towns and places in the country where at present there were neither churches nor incumbents. The calculations of the Church Commissioners, supposing that certain livings should be raised to an amount not very extravagant, but raising those of 300l. a-year which were under 2,000 livings) by 150l., and also supposing that the stipends of parishes containing a population of 10,000 were raised to 400l.,—were that done, a sum of 145,195l. would be required, and that supposing, instead of 400l., those who had these large livings only had 300l. per annum, still 130,495l. would be requisite. There were parts in the report of the Church Commissioners stating the great number of parishes which in London and the dioceses of York and Chester were without spiritual instruction; and it was on these grounds that they took into consideration the means by which these great evils might in some respects be remedied. It did not, however, appear to them certainly, nor did it appear to any who had objected to their plans, that it would be possible for Parliament to give any large sum out of the revenues of the state, as the University of Oxford had prayed, in order to supply the existing deficiency of religious instruction. He (Lord John Russell) thought, if such a grant was asked, the spirit of Parliament, and particularly of that house, would have said, "Before we augment out of the funds of the public any of the small livings—before we open new incomes and new benefices, we must see whether there is any part of the splendour of the Church which is superfluous, whether or not some of the incomes of the clergy are unnecessary." Taking their own view of the subject, the Church Commissioners had examined into the state of the cathedral foundations in this country, and with respect to them they had found that those on the old foundations, the canons not residential, had in fact no duties to perform, or held the preferment generally on the performance of the duty of preaching one sermon in a year, or some other similar duty. There were again many others whose attendance at the cathedral was more constant, but who did not seem necessary for the performance of the duties of the Church. The Church Commissioners, therefore, considered whether they could provide for those things which were necessary for the cathedral service, and for the due reward of clergymen of exemplary and distinguished piety by preferments under the Crown, and at the same time secure a fund which might be available to supply the great spiritual wants of the country. Proceeding on these grounds, they unanimously agreed that it would be sufficient to have a dean and four prebends attached to each cathedral; that by means of those clergymen and four canons of the cathedral, service might be duly and regularly performed; that these preferments would be a sufficient number of rewards, and that the rest of the revenues might properly be applied to the more pressing wants of the Church. It was proposed by the 59th clause of the bill, that any sums derived from the diminution of prebendal and other sinecures, and of sinecure cathedral preferments and rectories, should be applied, after a due consideration of the wants of the places in which they accrued, to the general wants of the clergy. In that manner the income which would be derived from the suppression of these unnecessary parts of the Church establishment would be made of very great use in the pastoral instruction of the people. He had already stated that the sum of 130,495*l.* would be required to raise livings to the scale mentioned in one of the reports of the Church Commissioners, namely, 300*l.* per annum; and the total produce from the fund proposed to be raised by this bill would be 134,251*l.*, and therefore there would be means from that fund of gradually supplying the pressing wants of the Church. There were other wants in the cases of benefices in private patronage, and of large towns with immense populations forming but one parish. For these wants, however, the present plan did not provide; but he thought that when these exertions on the part of the Church—these sacrifices made by those who had the patronage, both lay and ecclesiastical, were seen, that there would be great exertions made by the people at large, as, indeed, had already been seen, and that those wants would, to a considerable extent, be thus supplied. It was well known, for instance, that an hon. member of that house—an hon. friend of his (Lord J. Russell)—he meant the hon. member for Middlesex (Mr. Byng), had, in one year, given 2,000*l.* to the general fund for the erection of churches, besides contributing between 4,000*l.* and 5,000*l.* towards the erection of different churches. (Hear.) The principle of the bill was to leave the cathedral establishments in what the Church Commissioners, including the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, and other prelates, considered an efficient form, and, at the same time, to procure a considerable sum for the supply of those spiritual wants now felt in populous districts of the country. As it was a reform which, as he thought, would tend to increase the affections of the people towards the Church establishment—as he believed the ministers of the Church would not lose by it any thing really of use to them, but would gain much by the example that the Church did not wish to retain any thing at all useless, he trusted the house would have no difficulty in giving its assent to this bill. Certainly, if he were to consider only the interference with the patronage of the Crown, and the patronage of the bishops in their respective sees, he would not have proposed any scheme of this kind. The sacrifice made by the Crown was to the extent of 50,000*l.* per annum, patronage; and there was a still greater sacrifice made on the part of the bishops; and it was not the object, either of the Ministers of the Crown, or of the bishops, to propose this with a view to any increase of interest either to the Crown or the heads of the Church, but with the view of increasing the efficiency of the Church establishment, and of adding to its usefulness. (Hear, hear.) The noble lord concluded by moving the second reading of the bill.

Sir R. INGLIS commenced by observing, that his noble friend had begun with an admission of the great amount of spiritual destitution which prevailed, and of the duty of providing for this destitution by every means which came legitimately within the power of the Legislature. This destitution he had properly stated to prevail throughout large tracts of the country, and particularly in the manufacturing districts. He (Sir R. Inglis) never, for a moment, disputed the existence of a very large amount indeed of spiritual destitution; on the contrary, he asserted it, and was most desirous to see it legitimately provided for; but he did deny that they should take from the chapter of Durham to give to that of Exeter, or that they should take from Exeter to give to Chichester. He maintained that such a redistribution amounted to a virtual confiscation. (Hear.) His noble friend had adverted to a passage in the petition from the University of Oxford, applying for a grant of money, as the most effectual means of providing a remedy for this destitution. His noble friend seemed to think that this prayer was hopeless. If it were necessary to make such a call, and if the noble lord were to shrink from the responsibility, he (Sir R. Inglis) would not hesitate to make it himself, relying on the good sense and religious feelings of the people of England. Surely it was not forgotten how, in the midst of the most expensive war in which this country had ever been engaged, a very large annual sum had been voted, almost unanimously—adopted, certainly, with the concurrence of the great body, not only of that house, but the country at large—for this very purpose. (Hear, hear.) Was he to despair that the nation would return to a sense of its duty, because for some time past what he might term a temporary insanity had prevailed with regard to the Church? (Ironical cheers from the Ministerial benches.) He had always been convinced that there was an essential identity of principle in all corporate property, whether it was vested in lay or spiritual persons. For his part, he could see no distinction whatever between the custos, minor canons, and vicars choral of the cathedral of Hereford, on the one hand, and the corporation of London on the other. If they were prepared to take from the city of London a portion of its property, and allocate it to the uses of the corporation of Liverpool, then, and not till then, would he consider them at liberty to meddle with the property of the cathedral of Hereford. If they agreed that they were at liberty to appropriate the dock duties of Liverpool to the uses of the corporation of Bristol, then, and not till then, would he admit that they were at liberty to allocate the revenues of the chapter of Durham to the relief of any of the poorer districts in Wales. (Hear.) Therefore it was that, admitting the property of the Church to be not exactly received in the same way, or to be so entirely beyond their controul as was the property of the Dukes of Norfolk and Northumberland, he had always held the property of the cathedral of Durham to be as sacred and secure from any invasion in the shape of re-distribution as the property of the Earl of Durham. Was it clear that by diminishing the number of the dignitaries of the Church, they would not be depriving the Church of that large annual accession of persons, whose emolument, as well as dignity, might be some attraction to induce them to enter it, and whose parents, not having any very strong sense of religion in their own hearts, might hesitate to send their children to a calling so clipped of its just and reasonable provisions for their temporal maintenance? There could be no doubt that some of the brightest ornaments of the Church would never have been sent into the Church by their parents, if they had no reason to expect that they should be enabled to rise beyond that modicum of income which was now proposed. Was the noble lord aware that a very large proportion indeed of independent income was introduced annually into the Church? The aggregate income of the Church, notwithstanding all the exaggerations which had gone forth upon this subject, was stated now, upon incontestable authority, to be not more than 3,300,000*l.*; and the probability was, that the independent private property introduced into the Church was not less in amount. All the property thus introduced went to the maintenance of those charities by which the clergy had so endeared themselves to the people, of whose interest and affection they had become very generally the objects. When the noble lord introduced his first bill upon this subject, he had been actuated by a better spirit. In moving, on the 18th of July, 1836, that the house resolve itself into a committee of the whole house, the noble lord observed, that "it was not the plan of the Church of England, nor did he wish it to be, that its ministers should be considered mere functionaries receiving certain stipends from the state, and having nothing but their bare duty to perform in return." Now this he (Sir R. Inglis) contended would be exactly the effect of this bill. If they were to maintain that four canons were sufficient to perform the duties of the cathedral, could it be said that that number was sufficient as a due reward for learning and piety in the Church? Let the house look to the number of distinctions in any other profession. He did not hesitate to call upon the house to view the question in that light, for they must consider human nature in this as in every other case. They must consider how far parents would be guided in the selection of professions for their sons by the circumstance of the connexion being more or less advantageous in a secular point of view. He contended, therefore, that the number to which they reduced the dignitaries of this profession bore too small a proportion to the body at large. He did not mean to say that that body (the chapters) was essential to the existence of the Christian religion, but he did believe that it was essential to the constitution of the Church of England. He was one of those, therefore, who viewed with deep regret the introduction of a measure having a direct tendency to diminish their influence, and possibly to terminate their existence; and which, at any rate, would establish precedents which involved a violation of the first principles of the law. (Hear.)

Mr. W. O. STANLEY expressed a hope that the noble lord would modify this measure, as regarded the redivision of Church property.

Mr. G. PALMER observed, that the bill of the noble lord did nothing for the security of the property left behind.

Sir R. PEEL said, that after the sentiments and opinions expressed by hon. friends of his, for whom he felt sincere respect, he was bound, even though under the influence of no other obligation, to give his support to the bill. In the observations which he proposed to make he should confine himself to the principle of the measure, which he conceived to be this, that in the present state of the Church establishment it was desirable that some portion of the cathedral revenues should supply those acknowledged deficiencies in the spiritual instruction of the people to which reference had frequently been made in that house. The principal provisions of the bill then before them were not materially different from the recommendation of the commission appointed under his own advice. When that commission was appointed there was a general opinion amongst the friends of the Church that the want of due provision for the spiritual instruction of the people was so enormous, that it became the duty of the executive Government to consider the state of the Church in that respect, and to devise a remedy. The appointment of that commission, consisting exclusively of persons well affected to the interests of the Church, gave almost universal satisfaction. The extravagant demands for alterations in the Church were greatly abated, and there was a general impression on the part of the Church, that whatever reforms should be recommended by that commission might safely be adopted. If there was less of urgent demand for alterations in the Church at present, that would not, he submitted, be a conclusive reason against making whatever reforms they thought consistent with the security of the Establishment. (Hear, hear.) The very absence of impatience and intemperance might have arisen from their proclaimed willingness to make those reforms (hear, hear), but if, after the lapse of a short time, it should appear that they took advantage of that cessation of clamour in order to postpone reforms which they themselves might deem not only consistent with the security, but decidedly for the interests of the Church, he could not conscientiously say that her position would thereby be improved. (Hear, hear.) He (Sir R. Peel) considered the policy of making a different distribution of Church property entirely depended on the animus with which it was introduced, and the objects for which the distribution was proposed. While, therefore, he should give to any project for the diversion of one single shilling of Church property to other than strictly spiritual and ecclesiastical purposes his most decided opposition, still, if a measure were proposed which in his conscience he believed was intended to add to the efficiency of the Church, and which appropriated every shilling of the property re-distributed to purposes connected with the spiritual interests of the Establishment, he could not say he was prepared to reject such a measure simply on the ground that no corporate property of the Church should be interfered with. (Hear, hear.) He would not allow the objection of inviolability to contravert the admitted advantage that would arise from its redistribution. (Hear.) He regarded the cathedral establishments with the highest respect; he thought a loss of them, or any interference with their efficiency, would be a positive evil. (Hear.) Viewed in connection with the monarchy, he believed it to be of importance that the wealth, station, and splendour of the Church should bear some proportion to the wealth, station, and splendour so easily acquired by the other branches of the community in this great country. (Hear, hear.) Such was his opinion. It was only on the balance of evils that he was induced to consent to the measure which the noble lord now proposed. But was it possible for him to exclude from his recollection this fact—that there were 1926 benefices in England and Wales under 100*l.*, and 3528 under 150*l.*? It might be admitted that the higher situations in the Church should be filled by persons whose pecuniary resources would enable them to maintain their dignity; but was nothing to be done for enabling the 3528 to hold a decent and respectable rank becoming their character in society? (Hear, hear.) Could they deny the evil that in 3528 benefices the clergy, many of them without a residence, without a glebe-house, had absolutely less than 150*l.* a-year? (Hear, hear.) Could they exclude from their consideration of this case the fact, that in London, the very city in which Parliament met, there were 34 parishes, with a population of 1,170,000, and Church accommodation for only 101,000? (hear, hear.) that in those 34 parishes there were only 69 churches, and, including proprietary chapels, only 100 places of worship in the whole; whereas, if they allotted a church to every 3000, there ought to be 379, leaving a deficiency of 279. (Hear, hear.) In Lancashire there were 83 parishes, with a population above 10,000, the aggregate being 816,000; there was church room only for 97,000, or, in round numbers, about 100,000; and yet the commissioners justly remarked that the comparison between the church accommodation and population gave no accurate idea of the provision made for the spiritual instruction of the people, because many of the chapels included in the calculation had no district assigned to them, and no minister to perform those ordinary parochial duties which in many cases were of as much importance as attendance on his public ministrations. Upon these grounds, believing it would be a great encouragement to the laity actively to exert themselves in this matter, seeing the corporate body of the Church setting an example of liberality—of redistribution in some cases, confining that redistribution strictly to spiritual purposes—he could not withhold his assent to the second reading of this bill.

FEB. 21.—EDUCATION.

Mr. WYSE rose to submit to the house the subject of which he had given notice. It was for an address to her Majesty, that she would be graciously pleased to appoint a board of commission of education in England, with the view especially of providing for the wise, equitable, and efficient application of sums granted or to be granted for the advancement of education by Parliament, and for the immediate establishment of schools for the education of teachers, in accord with the intention already expressed by the Legislature. He found, however, by the statement which the noble lord, the Secretary for the Home Department, had made to the house a few evenings ago, that the subject had engaged the attention of the Government, and that the noble lord was now willing to adopt the resolution which he (Mr. Wyse) had submitted to the house in a previous session. For that reason the hon. member said he should withdraw his motion.

MISCELLANEOUS INTELLIGENCE.

METROPOLIS.

The sermon and musical festival in St. Paul's, for the benefit of the sons of the clergy, will take place earlier this year than usual. The rehearsal will be on the 30th of April, and the performance on the 2d of May, under the immediate patronage of the Duke of Cambridge.—Times.

New Church in Berwick-street.—The new church commenced in the early part of last year in this densely populated part of the parish of St. James's, Westminster, owing to the indefatigable exertions of the Rev. J. G. Ward, the rector, and the Rev. J. C. Wigram, the curate, is now completed, and will be consecrated in the course of a few days by the Bishop of London. The building comprises a set of school-rooms on the basement to receive 500 scholars, and 300 infants on week-days; suitable offices are prepared for conducting the business of a lending library, sale of religious books, lying-in charity, and provident institution. The church, which is a neat and convenient Gothic structure, contains, in addition to the other pews, free sittings to accommodate about 1000 adults and 700 children. One of the curates of the parish church has been appointed to the incumbency, with the full consent of the bishop of the diocese.—Times.

The Common Council of London, on the petition of the Rev. Mr. Dale, the Vicar, the churchwardens, and others, have done themselves credit by voting 300*l.* in aid of the debt incurred by the erection of a new church in the parish of St. Bride's.

PROVINCIAL.

Winchester.—Education.—A diocesan board of education, in connexion with the national society, has recently been established in this city, and bids fair to accomplish incalculable benefits to the two counties of Hants and Surry. The list of subscribers is already highly respectable, but it is not at present made public, in deference to those from whom letters have not yet been received. It is understood, however, that the lord bishop has made a donation of 100*l.*; Lord Arden, 100*l.* donation; Sir William Heathcote, bart., M.P., 100*l.*, and a subscription of 5*l.*; C. S. Lefevre, Esq., M.P., 50*l.*, and a subscription; our city members, 10*l.* each as a donation, and 5*l.* subscription; the dean and chapter, 200*l.* donation; while the names of individual members are put down as subscribers of 5*l.* each; J. Fleming, Esq., M.P., 100*l.*; H. C. Comp-ton, Esq., M.P., 100*l.* donation, and 5*l.* subscription; the mayor of Winchester and Sir G. T. Staunton, Bart., M.P., 5*l.* subscription; C. B. Wall, Esq., M.P., 50*l.* donation.—Winchester Paper.

Diocesan Board of Education.—Barnstaple.—In compliance with a circular issued by the Rev. Dr. George Barnes, Archdeacon of Barnstaple, a meeting, numerously attended by the clergy and influential laity of the archdeaconry, was held at the Public Rooms, on Wednesday, Feb. 20, in order that the objects and views of the Diocesan Board of Education lately formed at Exeter might be explained, and to consider on the adoption of resolutions, &c. in conformity with that establishment.

The Rev. Archdeacon having been unanimously called to the chair, expressed himself exceedingly gratified at the effect his invitation had produced, in calling together so large and respectable an assemblage on a subject vitally important to the best interests of the people of this country. He reminded them that, although this was decidedly a meeting of members of the Church of England, for the purpose of extending education among individuals connected with, and friendly to the Establishment, yet it was perfectly free from party spirit, and from all objections which religious feelings might demand. Having spoken at great length, in conclusion the Archdeacon said he had received letters from Lord Rolle, Lord Clinton, Sir Thomas Acland, and Mr. Buck, who were prevented from attending, but who had expressed their warm concurrence in the objects of the meeting. The meeting was afterwards addressed by T. W. Harding, Esq., Rev. H. Luxmore, Rev. John Dene, Rev. C. P. Coffin, Lord Viscount Courtenay, John Law, Esq., Rev. P. F. Clay.

Bridport.—A vestry was recently held in the church for the purpose of making a church-rate. This was met by the Dissenters with an amendment to postpone the said meeting to that day six months. The chairman, the Rev. Alexander Broadley, declared the show of hands to be in favour of the rate, whereupon a poll was demanded, and kept open until Friday evening, 5 o'clock, when the numbers were declared to be—

For the rate	236

Majority for the rate .. 42

The struggle was very severe, and the opponents of the rate brought up all their strength.

National Education.—Lewes.—In consequence of a requisition of the nobility, clergy, and gentry of the county to the Bishop of Chichester, a numerous and highly-influential Meeting was held on the 20th of February, at the County Hall, to make the necessary arrangements for the formation of a Board of Education for the diocese of Chichester. The Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Chichester presided, and among the nobility, &c., present were—His Grace the Duke of Richmond, Lord-Lieutenant of the county; Earl of Chichester, the Very Rev. the Dean of Chichester, General St. John, Capt. Shiffner, J. Shelley, Esq., Rev. Messrs. R. Anderson, H. Wagner, Rose, Ellman, Scobell, Turner, and Grant. A Board was constituted, and various Resolutions unanimously passed, in accordance with the purposes of the Meeting.

The Grant to Maynooth College.—On Tuesday, Feb. 19th, agreeably to a requisition to the Archdeacon (Lyall) of Colchester, a public Meeting of the Clergy and Laity of the archdeaconry was held in the library of Colchester Castle, to consider the propriety of petitioning the Legislature against the continuance of the annual Parliamentary grant of money for the support of the Roman Catholic College of Maynooth, in Ireland. Nearly 200 clergymen and laymen assembled on the occasion, and the Venerable the Archdeacon presided. The High Sheriff of the county (F. C. Mills, Esq.), in a long and eloquent speech, proposed a Resolution to the effect that it is inconsistent with the duty of a Protestant Government to contribute directly or indirectly to the maintenance of the Roman Catholic religion or priesthood. The Rev. G. Preston, Rector of Lexden, seconded the Resolution, which was carried unanimously. The Rev. S. Carr, Vicar of St. Peter's, Colchester; G. Bawtree, Esq., Mayor of Colchester; the Rev. R. Strong, Rector of Mile-end, Colchester; T. E. Green, Esq.; the Rev. John Round, N. Sparling, Esq.; G. Stokes, Esq.; the Rev. J. Hallward, and other gentlemen of influence in the neighbourhood, subsequently addressed the Meeting in support of other Resolutions of a kindred spirit (all of which were carried unanimously), and ably denounced the practices and policy of the Popish priesthood. A Petition to the House of Commons against any further grant was unanimously adopted, and is to be entrusted for presentation to the county Members. As the question related to a money Bill, it was considered that it would be incorrect to address the House of Lords on the subject. A vote of thanks to the Chairman having been carried by acclamation, the Meeting broke up.

Lord Dynevor has presented the site of a new church at Landilo, Carmarthenshire, and his Lordship's son, the Hon. George Rice Trevor, M.P., has announced his intention of endowing it with 25*l.* annually.

Mr. Alston has just completed at the Glasgow Institution press, the printing of a beautiful edition of the English Liturgy for the use of the blind. It is printed from a new fount of types, and is the most perfect specimen of Mr. Alston's unique typography that has yet appeared. It forms a cheap and handsome quarto volume, which will, no doubt, be received as a great boon in England, where we are glad to learn, Mr. Alston's system is making rapid progress.—Scottish Guardian.

IRELAND.

Irish Education Board.—In Dr. MacHale's letter to Lord John Russell, he denounces the Irish Board of Education, and thus declares on what tenure its future existence is to depend:—"Relish the unpalatable truth, then, as your Lordship chooses, the fact which the friends of the Board were the first to publish is certain—THE SYSTEM OF NATIONAL EDUCATION IS REFERRED TO ROME, AND THE FATE OF THE BOARD HANGS IN THE BALANCE, DEPENDING FOR ITS EXISTENCE ON THE DECISION OF GREGORY."

Church Extension.—The Lord Bishop of Clogher has subscribed 500*l.* to the fund for providing church accommodation in the county of Fermanagh. In Belfast and other parts of the north similar subscriptions are in progress.

COLONIAL.

COLONIAL CHURCH.

It has been intimated to us that many of the Clergy and Laity propose to petition Parliament immediately in behalf of the Colonial Church, and against the alienation of the Clergy Reserves in Canada; and we have been requested to furnish information as to the mode of proceeding. We therefore insert a Form of Petition on these subjects.

The Petitions may be written on common writing paper, and sent in a cover (left open at the ends), by post, to the Bishop of the Diocese, or to any lay Peer with whom the Petitioners are acquainted, and also to their Representatives in the House of Commons.

The only variation required in Petitions to the House of Lords is in the heading, which must be as follows:—

"To the Right Honourable the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament assembled;" and in the substitution of the words, "Your Lordships" for the words "Your Honourable House," wherever they occur.

Should the Petition and signatures together occupy more than one sheet of paper, care must be taken that at least one signature be placed on the same sheet as the Petition.

To the [Honourable the Commons of Great Britain and Ireland,] in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of the undersigned Minister, Churchwardens, and other Inhabitants of the parish of _____ in the county of _____ humbly sheweth:—

That your Petitioners have learned with deep regret that throughout Her Majesty's Foreign Possessions, and more especially in British North America, the provision for religious instruction, according to the doctrines of the Church of England, is altogether inadequate to the wants of the inhabitants;

That such wants have been increased of late years by extensive emigration from Great Britain and Ireland, by the transportation of many thousand convicts to Australia, and by the emancipation of the Negroes throughout the British West Indies;

That it is the duty of the mother country to take care that emigrants settling in the Colonies, are not deprived of the spiritual advantages which they enjoyed at home; and that opportunities are afforded them for worshipping God after the manner of their fathers;

That convicts banished for their crimes have a strong claim upon the Christian sympathy of the country which has cast them forth; and are entitled to such superintendence and religious instruction, as may lead them, with God's blessing, to forsake their sins, and amend their lives;

That the great work of Negro emancipation must be looked upon as incomplete, until provision has been made for educating the whole population of the West Indies and Mauritius in the knowledge and practice of Christianity;

That your Petitioners look with great alarm upon the proposed alienation of the lands in Canada, set apart, under the authority of Parliament, for the maintenance of a Protestant Clergy; and upon measures of a like character now in progress in other parts of British America.

That your Petitioners therefore humbly pray,

That your [Honourable House] will be pleased to continue your protection and encouragement to the Bishops and Clergy throughout the British Colonies, and will make provision for increasing their number to such an amount as may be required by the circumstances of the different Provinces; that you will devise measures for rendering the Clergy Reserves, and other Church Lands in British America, available for the sacred purposes to which they were originally destined; and that you will refuse to pass, or sanction, any law depriving the Colonial Church of endowments solemnly conveyed to her by the Parliament of Great Britain.

And your Petitioners will ever pray.

Calcutta.—The Singapore papers of the 6th of September state, that the Lord Bishop of Calcutta, with Archdeacon Dealtry, and the Rev. Mr. Hughes (chaplain of Malacca), had arrived at that station, and after inspecting the handsome church lately erected, convoked a meeting of the principal persons of the Protestant community, to determine whether the church should be immediately consecrated or not. The objection which some of the residents had to the consecration arose from the apprehension that a Protestant clergyman would not at all times be resident in the settlement to perform divine service; but the lord bishop explained that no difficulty was likely to arise on that ground; and therefore it was determined that the consecration should forthwith take place.

Montreal.—At an ordination held by the bishop, Nov. 25, Mr. J. M'Master admitted deacon, and appointed to the charge of the Gore, near St. Andrew's, in the district of Montreal. Mr. F. J. Lundy has also been ordained priest.

Visitations.—The Bishop of Montreal returned to Quebec Nov. 14, having been engaged three months in the visitation of the Upper Province, after assembling the clergy of the districts of Quebec and Gaspe at Quebec on August 1, and the remainder of the Lower Canada clergy at Montreal on the 8th. He held fifty confirmations in Upper Canada, and consecrated nine churches. The consecration of several other churches was reserved on account of their not being in all respects ready. Four ordinations were held, two at Montreal, and two in the Upper Province, at which nine candidates were ordained.

Letters from the Rev. J. Williams (Weeleyan), dated Sydney, Oct. 5, 1838, have been received. He had been busily employed since his arrival in endeavouring to excite an interest in missions. "I have drawn up a circular," says he, "and have written to a great number of wealthy people. Our first missionary Meeting was held last night, and one gentleman gave us 50*l.*, two others 10*l.* each, several small sums, and one gentleman 50*l.* per annum, for five years. A vessel arrived yesterday from the islands, and brings a most delightful account of the state of Rarotonga and the Navigators' Islands. The priests are making a most desperate effort to establish Popery in the islands: a French frigate has gone to the Gambia Islands with fifty priests on board. The Popish bishop (at Sydney) confirmed about 300 Irish convicts last Sabbath-day, and he told them it was no disgrace to be a convict, for Jesus Christ was sent out of heaven an exile, just as they were sent out of their country. I have been well received by all classes in this colony, and have dined with the Governor, who is decidedly friendly to our efforts, and will do all in his power to aid us in our operations. No port charges have been made on the Camden."—Watchman.

Quebec and Montreal.—At a public meeting of the clergy of the Church of England, held at Toronto, on the 10th and 11th of October last, in which the Bishop of Montreal presided, votes of thanks were unanimously passed to the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the Bishops of London and Exeter.

FOREIGN.

Switzerland.—Abolition of the Helvetic Confession of Faith.—The Helvetic Confession of Faith, which the Deputies of the Evangelical Cantons drew up at Basle in the year 1536, conjointly with the theologians of Strasburg and of Malhouse, and which they "presented," as they say, "to all the faithful and the worthy for their examination and judgment." This Confession, which was approved by Luther, and to which during more than three centuries the orthodox Church of the Canton of Vaud subscribed, and which preserved in the Academy and the pulpits of this beautiful country the expressions and the symbols of the Christian faith,—this Confession is at last abolished; a decree of the Grand Council, on the 23rd of January, 1839, suppressed it.—Record.

The Swiss journals, which we have received by our French express, are filled with accounts of the effervescence which has been caused in the Cantons through the appointment of Dr. Strauss to the functions of Professor of Theology in the Zurich University. The orthodoxy of the Learned Doctor is disputed, and hence the agitation, which had arrived at so great a height that meetings had taken place to suppress the University. On the 14th inst. the Grand Council of State examined the various reports from the communes, but came to no decision on the subject. It was thought that it would not give way, as it was more than suspected that this religious zeal was the mask for political purposes.—Morning Post.

Portugal.—The Portuguese papers have been occupied with certain demands made by the See of Rome, with an intimation, it is said, that if they are not fully conceded, the Queen of Portugal will not be recognized by his Holiness the Pope. The propositions are as follow:—

"1. That all matrimonial dispensations shall alone originate with the Court of Rome, and be established upon the same footing as observed previous to the present legitimate Government.

"2. That all the bishops who may have been dismissed from their respective dioceses shall be reinstated, not only those who were confirmed in their different offices by the Holy See agreeably to the propositions of the legitimate Government, but also those who were proposed by the Government of the Usurper.

"3. That all priests who have been suspended, or are absent from their different churches, be reinstated after the same manner as the bishops.

"4. And, finally, that the Portuguese Government will cause to be replaced all the crosses and figures of saints in the various niches throughout the capital, which have been demolished by order of the Municipal Chamber."

Our correspondent writes, that these propositions have been warmly opposed, and are not likely to be agreed to by the Chamber of Deputies.—Times.

Mexico.—A letter from Mexico, of the 31st of December, says—"A priest, preaching yesterday at the church of San Francisco, recommended his congregation to hold fast by Christ with one hand, while with the other they grasped a poniard for the extermination of the French. Sermons of this nature are constantly delivered in all the churches, and we are equally denounced from the stage of the theatres."—Times.

Rev. Thomas Exton, Perpetual Curate of Balderstone.—It is our painful duty to announce the unfortunate occurrence which befel this gentleman on his way to his lodgings in Lower Darwen, a little after six o'clock on Monday evening. The night being dark, and the rain falling heavily, and being greatly advanced in years, it appears that Mr. Exton mistook his way, or slipped from a narrow footpath which he had to pass adjoining the river Darwen, which was swollen at the time, and the current being too great for the power of his advanced years to contend against, he was carried down by the impetuosity of the stream and drowned.

Mr. Exton, we believe, was in his 79th year.—Blackburn Standard.

CHAPEL PROPOSED TO BE BUILT IN THE PARISH OF HOLBEACH, LINCOLNSHIRE.

THE COMMITTEE appointed for effecting the above design, in soliciting the Public in aid of it, think that its necessity and utility will be apparent from the following statement of facts:—

The parish of Holbeach is twenty-two miles in length, and containing about four thousand inhabitants, some of whom live at the distance of two miles from the parish church, and many of them at an inconvenient distance from any other church or chapel belonging to the national Establishment: this circumstance, and the badness of the roads, make it often next to impossible for them to attend the public Worship of God, according to the rites of the Church of England, which has long been to them a subject of great regret. It is with joy and gratitude, therefore, that they heard of the recent munificence of their Diocesan, who has given 800*l.* towards building and endowing a chapel for their benefit, in a situation which will render it beneficial to a part also of the adjacent parishes of Fleet, "Gedney," and Whaplode, whose houses are equally remote from their respective churches and chapels. But as for the building and endowment of the chapel, a much larger sum will be required, the Committee earnestly solicit the liberal contributions of the Public, as well as of those who, from local and other causes, are more particularly interested in the spiritual and moral welfare of the above-named parishes, in confident hope that they will generously forward a design so well calculated to promote the glory of God and the best interest of men.

Contributions will be received by Messrs. Gurney and Co., Holbeach; Messrs. Barclay and Co., Lombard-street, London; and by them through any of the Country Bankers.

For the Committee,
 J. MORTON, Secretary.

REPORT OF THE DIRECTORS OF THE CLERICAL, MEDICAL, & GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY,

Presented at the Annual General Meeting of Proprietors, held at the Society's Office,
No. 78, GREAT RUSSELL-STREET, BLOOMSBURY-SQUARE, LONDON,

On Thursday, March 1st, 1838.

ALTHOUGH the Directors are aware that the affairs of this Society for years past have so steadily improved, that the Statements laid before each Annual Meeting were received with general satisfaction, yet they meet the Proprietors with a detailed account of its affairs for the year ending June 30th, 1837, with more than usual gratification.

The circumstances constituting the most satisfactory part of the present Report are—

- 1st, That the profit realized from forfeited, lapsed, and purchased Policies during the past year has amounted to £10,471. 0s. 6d.
- 2nd, That notwithstanding the number of new Policies effected within the last year, and the advancing age of the Lives previously assured, the claims on the Society's funds, arising from Deaths, have fallen slightly below the amount reported during the preceding year.
- 3rd, That on reference to the Balance Sheet now presented by the Auditors, the Proprietors will perceive that the Annual Income of the Society, on the 30th June last, exceeded £75,000, which the Directors are happy to state, is rapidly and progressively increasing.
- 4th, That after defraying the claims on the Society on account of Deaths, and all other expenses, £40,952. 13s. 1d. have been added as a clear surplus, during the last year, to the Consolidated or Business Fund, which sum, together with that of £39,632. 10s. 4d. carried to the same Fund during the preceding year, makes a saving of £80,585. 3s. 5d. within the period of two years; and this, notwithstanding the number of new establishments of a similar nature that have lately sprung up.

From the preceding statements, the Directors feel satisfied, the Proprietors will be of opinion with them, that the Clerical and Medical Society has now acquired such a certain portion of public support as entitles it to be ranked amongst the most successful of similar Institutions; and they, therefore, hope, that the Proprietors generally will aid their efforts in making known as extensively as possible, the very flourishing condition of the Society's affairs, with a view, by increasing its business, to augment still further its prosperity.

METROPOLIS CHURCHES' FUND.

THE COMMITTEE call attention to the fact, that this Fund is now pledged to erect, or assist in the erection of, 26 new Churches in the Metropolis. Satisfactory as this result may appear, the Friends of the Church must remember that little is done compared with what remains to be done. The original plan proposed the erection of 50 New Churches, and even this number would be quite inadequate to supply the spiritual wants of the Metropolis.

The Committee have come to the resolution of assisting in the endowment of some of the Churches built by them in the poorer districts of the Metropolis, and invite contributions towards this object, either generally or for any particular Church. They have the pleasure of announcing a donation of 200 guineas from Messrs. Hanbury, Buxton, & Co., (in addition to their Subscription to the General Fund,) towards the Endowment of the Church building in Mile-End New Town.

The Committee have to add, that the remainder of the Fund now at their disposal will be found insufficient to provide even a small Endowment for a few of the Churches; they, therefore, urgently invite renewed efforts in support of this sacred cause. They also respectfully direct the attention of the owners of land in the Metropolis to the great difficulty which has been experienced in procuring sites, and beg to suggest that the objects of the fund will be most essentially promoted by gifts of this nature.

A MARRIED CLERGYMAN (B.A. of Cambridge) in Full Orders, of Orthodox sentiments, with an audible voice, and who can confidently refer to his Incumbent, wishes to obtain a CURACY in Kent immediately. If with a house, or near the sea, the more desirable.

Any Clergyman who is disposed to answer this advertisement, is requested to send full particulars (free) to the Rev. Giles Powell, the Clerical Office, Hatton Garden, for C. V., which will be forwarded to him immediately.

RUPTURE SOCIETY.

THIS SOCIETY has relieved upwards of 28,000 poor persons afflicted with Rupture, of whom many hundreds have been perfectly cured. It is estimated (though the fact is not generally known) that at least one person in fifteen is ruptured; but among those classes of the community which are engaged in bodily labour, the average has been fixed at one in eight or nine. This complaint is not confined to any particular age, or sex; nor is it the consequence of immoral behaviour. Its tendency, however, is so alarming, that, without timely aid, it frequently terminates by a painful and rapid dissolution, though its fatal consequences may generally be prevented by the careful application of a Truss. The Society relieve Patients all over England; but not being able to look to any particular Parish for support, in the way of Parochial assistance, they feel this gives them an additional reason for appealing to the Public. Every Contributor of £1. is annually, or £10. 10s. at once, including Parishes and Public Institutions, may recommend three Patients each year, to be supplied in any part of the kingdom, with single or double Trusses of the best quality, each of which would cost from one to three guineas at common Truss-makers.

Donations and Subscriptions will be most gratefully received by

JOHN POYNTER, Jun., Secretary,
Bridewell Hospital, New Bridge-street.

The Entombment,
The Resurrection,
The Ascension.

The Designs are by Rubens, Reynolds, West, Jacques Callot, and Leonardi da Vinci, and are so arranged as to contain a verse from Scripture under each subject, descriptive of the scene illustrated. The above Twenty-four Vignettes are surrounded by an elaborately embellished Gothic Border, in the niches of which are contained the figures of the Twelve Apostles, designed by Harvey. The Engravings are executed by Jackson, whilst the printing has been confined to the house of Visetelly and Co. The whole forming the most novel and beautiful delineation of Sacred History ever issued.

The object of this Work is to convey, by the beauty and vividness of the illustrations, a knowledge of the most important events recorded in the Life of Our Saviour. The New Testament, thus embellished by the best specimens of drawings from the ancient and modern school of painting, will at one view portray the most striking circumstances of the Sacred Mission, and indelibly fix the attention on the sublime subjects which it endeavours to depict.

I.

QUEEN'S ANNE'S BOUNTY. WHAT is QUEEN ANNE'S BOUNTY? The Question asked as above, with reference to the Acts and Neglects of the Ecclesiastical Commission, by One who knows how to answer it, as below.

ANIMO, NON ASTUTIA.

It is, in its Name, Adulation of Power; in its Reality, a Solemn Farce. It is the Cloak of Injustice—the Screen of Robbery—a Premium on Rapacity—the Occasion of Sacrilege—and, Legalized Swindling-religious: for, it is a Pretended Boon to the Church, but a Great Exaction from All;—a Grievous Burden to the Poorer Clergy,—Actual Loss to those who receive it. It is a Sin in the Laity who ask it—an Insult to the Clergy to whom paid. It is the Slanderer's Plea for False Accusation—the Jeer of Dissent for its Bowsy. A Disgrace to the Country—a Blot upon The Church—an Offence to God and Mockery of Man. And what wonder? For, it is PROTESTANT SUBTERRANEAN GRAFTED ON POPISH INVENTION, WHOSE FOUNDATION WAS BLASPHEMY.

"Finally, brethren, whatever things are true, whatever things are honest, whatever things are just, whatever things are pure, whatever things are lovely, whatever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things." PHIL. IV. 8.

Therefore, Christians, think not of "Queen Anne's Bounty," but to expose, repudiate, and petition against it. "Moniti, meliora sequamur."

II.

Also, demy 8vo, by the same Author, 3s., Second Edition, REDUCTION of PREBENDARIES; being a portion of a Series of Papers, entitled—"What will the Church say to the Suggestions of the Ecclesiastical Commission? By One who has a right to ask the Question,"—which appeared in THE KENTISH OBSERVER, (and were copied thence into the columns of various County and other Prints).

"For most certain truth it is, that Churches-Cathedral, and the Bishops of them, are as glasses, wherein the face and very countenance of Apostolical Antiquity remaineth yet even to be seen, notwithstanding the alterations which tract of time and the course of the world hath brought. For defence and maintenance of them we are most earnestly bound to strive, even as the Jews were for their Temple, and the High-Priests of God therein; the overthrow and ruin of the one, if ever the sacrilegious savarice of Atheists should prevail so far, which God of His infinite mercy forbid, ought no otherwise to move us than the people of God were moved, when, having beheld the sack and combustion of His Sanctuary, in most lamentable manner flinging before their eyes, they uttered from the bottom of their grieved spirits those words of doleful supplication, 'Ezrauge, Domine, et miseraris Zion: Servi tui diligunt lapides ejus, pulveris ejus miserat eos.'"—Moyses, Eccl. Pol. B. vii. § 7.

THE REFUTATION of NONCONFORMITY, &c. By the Rev. EDWARD CURTIS KEMP, M.A., Rector of Whissonett, and Domestic Chaplain to His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge.

This work has been advertised in the most disinterested manner by four Analytical Notices in the Church of England Quarterly Review. It is intended chiefly as a direct and sufficient, and is believed to be in its plan and most of its details, an original answer to Conder, Pye Smith, James, Binney, the Baptists, Methodists, &c., on the point of separation from the Church. It attempts to demonstrate from Scripture, reason, and the Apostolic Fathers, that episcopal ordination and government are designed by God as indispensable, and designed for the most essential purposes of unity, and that thus a reason is supplied for uniting with the Church infinitely stronger than all the principal arguments which Dissenters bring in favour of division.

PASSION WEEK; a Meditation and a Prayer for Every Day during that Season.

L. and G. Seeley, 169, Fleet-street.

NEW WEEKLY JOURNAL, "THE SOCIAL GAZETTE;"

ITS MOTTO,

"SOCIAL IMPROVEMENT ON CHRISTIAN PRINCIPLES."

THIS Journal has been established with a view to supply a deficiency long felt and lamented. It accordingly appeals to the support of all who approve of its principles and execution, upon the following grounds:—

It is the only Weekly Newspaper, attached to the Established Church, which is issued in the middle of the week, whereby Sunday labour and Sunday trading are wholly avoided. Like other Weekly Newspapers, it contains Leading Articles on the Topics of the day; Domestic and Foreign News; Parliamentary Intelligence; and Reviews. But it abstains from fierce party politics and personal invective; from inflammatory and exaggerated statements; and from all those offensive details by which Newspapers are too often rendered unfit for general reading in families.

It is the vehicle of much interesting, useful, and instructive matter, which has not hitherto formed a substantive portion of any weekly Journal. Of this description may be chiefly noticed,—

1. THE PAROCHIAL INTELLIGENCE; showing the nature and working of Religious, Benevolent, and Educational Establishments, in various Parishes. Under this head have already been given,—St. George's, Bloomsbury (Rev. Dr. Short); Upper Chelsea (Rev. R. Burgess); Paddington (Rev. A. M. Campbell); All Souls', Marylebone (Very Rev. Dean of Chichester); Leeds (Rev. Dr. Hook); Whittingham, Isle of Wight (Hon. and Rev. F. B. Bouverie); and St. Giles's in the Fields (Rev. J. E. Tyler); the Series being continued weekly.

2. THE FAMILY INTELLIGENCE; containing information and advice on Domestic Economy; the Management of a Household; the best methods of effecting Insurances and investing money, and of Educating Children.

3. PLANS OF SOCIAL IMPROVEMENT; and SOCIAL SKETCHES, to guide and facilitate the operations of Philanthropic Individuals and Societies.

4. ANALYSES of the Reports and other Documents of Associations for Religious, Instructional, and Benevolent purposes; showing to all what is doing by all in promoting Education; in the cultivation of Knowledge, and the spread of Intelligence; in the exercise of Charity, and the practical application of all Christian virtues to the everyday duties of life.

5. CORRESPONDENCE (the extension and continuation of which is earnestly solicited); whereby an interchange of practical information is obtained, and useful facts promulgated, instead of crude opinions and untried theories.

6. THE PHILOSOPHY OF PUBLIC EXHIBITIONS; in which accounts of places of public resort, and descriptions of the productions of Nature and works of Art which they contain, are made the means of communicating information in various branches of popular knowledge and intellectual inquiry.

The co-operation and communications of all who take an interest in the great and sacred cause of Social Improvement upon Christian principles, is most earnestly requested. The Conductors have to offer their grateful acknowledgments for the kind assistance, and promises of further support, already received from Dignitaries of the Church and active parochial Ministers; from Magistrates, Commissioners, and Guardians of the Poor; and from other individuals of station and influence.

The SOCIAL GAZETTE is published every Wednesday afternoon at Three o'clock, price Sixpence, stamped for conveyance postage free. Orders for it will be executed by any Newsmen in town or country; and Communications for the Editors (post paid), Books, Prints for Review, and Advertisements, will be received by the Publisher, JOHN W. PARKER, West Strand, London.

Application for Assurances or farther information, to be made to the Rev. J. Hodgson, or to JOHN BURDER, Esq., Secretaries to the Society, at the Office, 40, Parliament Street; or to any Local Agent in the Country.

. Prospectuses and Books of Rules may be had at the Office. Attendance from eleven to four o'clock, daily.

"This Society is strictly confined to the Clergy and their families, and is distinguished from other institutions by the title of 'THE CLERGY MUTUAL ASSURANCE SOCIETY.'" Particular attention is requested in the addressing letters to "No. 40, Parliament Street."

This SOCIETY was formed for the purpose of drawing the attention of the Clergy, 1st, To the important advantages to be derived from the system of Assurance in general; 2dly, To give them an opportunity of making Assurances not offered or admitted in other public Assurance Offices; and 3dly, To keep down the Rates of Assurance at the lowest possible sum, by an inexpensive management, and a division every FIVE YEARS of the TOTAL AMOUNT of Profits (in which no Proprietors share) amongst the assured Members who may be entitled to them. Assurances may be made for a sufficient sum to be paid during sickness, infirmity, and old age, to meet the unavoidable expense of a Curate; for capital Sums or Annuities, to provide for the education of Children at School, or College, and for equipping them out in the world; for the maintenance of Orphan Children during Infancy, from the day of the Death of the Father, &c. &c. &c.

The terms, conditions, and advantages, of these Assurances, and the Tables of Rates payable for them, are fully set forth in the Prospectus. For a proof of the prosperous state of the SOCIETY, the Clergy are referred to a Report of its Proceedings, which was read at a General Meeting of Members on the 29th of June, the Lord Bishop of London in the chair; and also to a Resolution which was moved by the Lord Bishop of Winchester upon the occasion, inserted in No. I. of the Ecclesiastical Gazette. One-fourth part of the total amount of premiums paid for Life Assurances in and during the first seven years of this Institution, was returned back again as a bonus to the assured Members, and appropriated to a reduction of their future premiums, thus making the Rates of Premium which had been paid for the same during such seven years, 25 per cent. less than in the following Table. For instance, a Clergyman at the age of 50, having assured £1000 upon his Life in the year 1832, and having paid for the same up to 1836, five Annual Premiums of £43. 13s. 4d. each, received a bonus in cash of about £50 to be appropriated to the reduction of his future premium, so that in fact he paid only £33. 13s. 4d. or thereabouts, during the five first years of his assurance, or £3. 7s. 4d. for each sum of £100 assured, instead of £4. 7s. 4d. Any sum not less than £50, and not exceeding £2500, may be assured upon Life by any Clergyman, or the Father, Mother, Wife, Widow, Son, Daughter, Brother, Sister, of any Clergyman, upon terms as below, and the period appointed for the next bonus is 31st May, 1841. No charge for Stamps.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE;

OR MONTHLY

REGISTER OF

THE AFFAIRS OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND, AND

OF ITS RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES AND INSTITUTIONS.

No. 10.

LONDON, TUESDAY, APRIL 9, 1839.

PRICE SIXPENCE.

The ECCLESIASTICAL GAZETTE is published on the second Tuesday in every month, and may be obtained at sixpence per number, or six shillings per annum, by ordering it of any Newsmen in the Kingdom.

It is also sent regularly every month, free of all charge, to the Resident Parochial Clergyman of every Parish throughout England and Wales.

THE request which we put forth in our last Number, with reference to some of the preceding Numbers of this work, has been very kindly attended to, and we have to offer our thanks to those of our friends who have sent us their spare copies. They have saved us for the present from the necessity of reprinting Nos. 2, 3, and 4. And as this will be at all times a matter of much more trouble and expense to us than to an ordinary periodical, on account of the Stamps and Advertisements, we hope to be excused for repeating the request, and for saying that we shall still be glad to receive back any Copies of those Numbers.

We propose in our next Number to give as good an account as we can of the proceedings of the Church Societies, at their Public Meetings; but those which may wish to have them inserted at length, are requested to communicate with the Publisher at an early period.

SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE.

67, Lincoln's Inn Fields.

SPECIAL GENERAL MEETING.

At a special general meeting holden at the SOCIETY'S house, on Tuesday, March 19, 1839, to consider of a Petition to both Houses of Parliament, on behalf of the Church in the Colonies, his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury, President of the SOCIETY, in the chair, the following Petition, prepared by the Standing Committee, was read to the meeting:—

"TO THE HONOURABLE THE COMMONS OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND IN PARLIAMENT ASSEMBLED,

"The humble Petition of the SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE.

"Sheweth,

"That in the opinion of your petitioners, it is the bounden duty of every Christian state to provide for the religious instruction of its subjects in every part of its possessions and dependencies.

"That Great Britain is now by Divine Providence intrusted with a larger extent of foreign possessions and dependencies than has ever been committed to the charge of any nation in the world: and that consequently her responsibilities are greater than those of any other state.

"That the obligations of the British nation with regard to the religious instruction of the people in those distant parts of the empire have never been adequately discharged.

"That in the older colonies the provision originally made for religious instruction was in most cases insufficient for the wants of the people; and that the rapid growth of the population, combined with other causes, has now increased their spiritual destitution to a lamentable extent.

"That in the new colonies settlements have recently been founded, without any measures whatever being taken by government, or the local authorities, for the religious instruction of the inhabitants, or for the celebration of divine worship according to the rites of the Church of England.

"That the consequences of this neglect have become most painfully apparent; and that in some cases our fellow-countrymen have been suffered to fall into a state of practical heathenism and immorality, which it is frightful to contemplate.

"That the mother country having been greatly relieved, and its resources considerably increased, by emigration, it is on that account peculiarly imperative on the state to see that the emigrants themselves are not deprived of the spiritual advantages which they enjoyed at home.

"That the system of transportation, by which thousands of the worst members of society are annually removed from the mother country, creates a powerful claim on behalf of the colonies into which they are sent, and imposes upon the parent state the strongest obligation to provide both for the spiritual wants of the free inhabitants, and for the religious instruction and reformation of the unhappy convicts themselves.

"That the condition of the West India islands, under the present circumstances of the Negro population, demands more effective measures for giving to the whole of the people in those islands the blessings of a Christian education.

"That your petitioners, being deeply impressed with the necessity of supporting and sustaining the Church in her Majesty's colonial possessions, cannot but express their alarm at the propositions which have been made for alienating the lands set apart in Canada, under the authority of Parliament, for the maintenance of the clergy, and also at measures of a similar character which are in progress in other parts of British America.

"That your petitioners feel grateful to the legislature and the government for all such efforts as have been made to relieve the spiritual destitution of the colonies, though they lament that those efforts have hitherto been insufficient.

"Your petitioners therefore humbly pray,

"That your honourable House will be pleased to sanction and adopt such further measures as may be necessary for providing more effectually for the religious instruction of the colonies; for an increase in the number of bishops and clergy wherever they are required; for the protection of the existing property and lands of the Church; and for the erection of new churches and chapels to an extent commensurate with the wants of the colonists; and they earnestly implore that no new colonies may be founded without express provision being made for the instruction of the inhabitants in the truths and duties of Christianity, according to the principles of the Church of England."

Moved by the Lord Bishop of London, seconded by Lord Bexley, and agreed unanimously,

"That the Petition now read be adopted as the Petition of the SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE."

Moved by the Lord Bishop of Nova Scotia, seconded by William Cotton, Esq., and agreed unanimously,

"That the Petition be presented to the House of Lords by his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury, and to the House of Commons by the Right Hon. Henry Goulburn."

Moved by Joseph Delafield, Esq., seconded by the Rev. Sir H. R. Dukinfield, Bart., and agreed unanimously,

"That the thanks of the meeting be presented to his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury, for his kindness in presiding on the present occasion."

GENERAL MEETING, APRIL 9, 1839.

The following Members of the SOCIETY were proposed to the Board to form the Tract Committee for the ensuing year:—

Rev. Dr. D'Oyly; Rev. Dr. Dealtry; Rev. R. G. Baker; Rev. J. Lonsdale; Rev. J. E. Tyler; Rev. J. G. Ward; Rev. C. B. Dalton.

The Secretaries reported that they had been directed by the Standing Committee to give notice, that the following gentlemen will be proposed at the meeting in May, to be added to the Standing Committee, namely:—Rev. W. Short, Rev. Benjamin Harrison, Hon. and Rev. R. Eden, Rev. W. W. Champneys, Rev. T. Ainger, Edward Baddeley, Esq.

A letter was read from the Rev. T. Dealtry, Archdeacon of Calcutta, and Secretary of the Calcutta Diocesan Committee, dated January 5, 1839. The following are extracts:—

"I have the pleasure to forward you an order for 300*l*. voted from our sale of books, &c., at our last meeting held on the 2nd instant. We should have sent more, as both the sale of the books and the subscriptions have been more extensive than usual during the past year; but we have had larger demands upon us for the repairs of St. James's School and Depository.

"We received the nine cases of books and tracts dispatched by the SOCIETY at the beginning of the last year by the ship "Tamerlane." They arrived in good condition, and came very opportunely, as the Right Rev. the President was about to commence his second visitation to the straits of Malacca. I had the pleasure to accompany his Lordship on the occasion. We took with us a box of the books to each of the places we visited—Singapore, Malacca, Penang, Moulemein, and Chittagong. They were received with gratitude, and the Chaplain assured me that returns should be made for them as early as possible.

"We endeavoured to create an interest in behalf of the SOCIETY where it had not previously existed, and to strengthen it where it had, at all the places visited. I can scarcely imagine that there is a SOCIETY in India accomplishing so much good by its publications as your SOCIETY, and I believe that, through the influence of the Lord Bishop, its friends in India are multiplying in every direction.

"His Lordship preached a sermon at Singapore in behalf of the SOCIETY; but in consequence of the embarrassed state of the funds for erecting a Church at the station, he promised to use his influence with the Committee here to grant a similar sum for the purpose of relieving them. The Committee willingly complied with his Lordship's wishes. Although no pecuniary benefit resulted from the measure, an interest was excited in behalf of the SOCIETY. But his Lordship intends to write almost immediately, and give you all the particulars of his visit, &c.

"Everything in this country tends to give an increasing interest to the SOCIETY. The progress of secular knowledge in the Government Schools, and the increased and increasing desire amongst Christians to follow up these measures with solid Christian instruction, render the existence of the SOCIETY important beyond description. I am happy to say our excellent President is in good health; I scarcely ever saw him looking better.

"The Committee here beg me to express the continued sense of gratitude which they feel to the Parent SOCIETY for its confidence in them, and its liberality to this country.

The Annual Meeting of the Treasurers and Secretaries of the District Committees will be held at the Society's house, on Wednesday, the 8th of May, and not on the 1st of May as previously announced.

INCORPORATED SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL IN FOREIGN PARTS.

LETTERS lately received by the Society from the Bishop of Montreal, mention the urgent want of additional clergymen, and especially of travelling Missionaries, in both Upper and Lower Canada. The same deficiency is complained of in the diocese of Nova Scotia; as appears by the following extracts of a letter from Archdeacon Coster, dated Fredericton, New Brunswick, February 9, 1839.

"The greatest anxiety is expressed in every quarter for the speedy appointment of a travelling missionary * * * We have now no less than 400*l*. set apart for paying the expenses to be incurred in travelling; and any person or persons who may be appointed to that service, would meet, I am persuaded, with the kindest reception and the most liberal encouragement."

BARBADOS.

The Bishop sailed from Falmouth, on his way back to his diocese, the 3rd of March. His Lordship took with him Mr. Charles Sims, as catechist and schoolmaster.

Extracts from Letters.

"Barbados, January 19, 1839.

"Our freed people here, and in most of the colonies (British Guiana seems to be the chief exception), are settling down quietly in their new position, which they now begin to understand. At first as was natural, they were a little intoxicated, imagining themselves to be I know not what. 'Am I not free?' was the constant question, supposing freedom to bring with it some unheard-of exemption from the common obligations of life. Their manner is now more sober, and I hear of no general complaints. Landed property both sells and rents at high terms. From the first I had little fear for the result, even as regards property. As regards moral and religious improvement, the prospect is far brighter than it was.

"I had the satisfaction of laying the corner stone of two chapel-schools in Christchurch parish, in this island, the day before yesterday.

"With a lively sense of our obligations to the venerable SOCIETY, I remain, &c."

JAMAICA.

"There are no less than thirteen curacies vacant in this diocese, and nearly twenty national schools waiting for masters."

The SOCIETY has recently sent out two schoolmasters, and one gentleman as catechist, with prospect of ordination. A clergyman has also been appointed, and will sail in the course of the month.

MADRAS.

Extract of a letter from the Bishop, dated Jan. 8, 1839:—

"I had this morning the happiness to confirm in our beautiful church at Vepery, one hundred and twenty-five native Christians, who I am assured may be called Christians indeed. It was a very touching sight; and when I addressed them, which I did at some length, through the agency of the Rev. Mr. Taylor, who acted as my interpreter, I could not restrain my feelings. The candidates were of all ages, from fourteen to seventy. Our beloved SOCIETY is indeed doing good; and we may humbly hope that God, who has blessed its exertions, will bless them still. * * * * *

"I will only add, that my heart is sincerely in the cause; and that I heartily pray that the great Head of the Church may be pleased to prosper your labours and ours, in spreading throughout India the knowledge of the everlasting Gospel."

From the Rev. A. C. Thompson, January 11:—

"The Primary Visitation commenced yesterday; and the Charge was delivered in the cathedral. Our SOCIETY, and the Christian Knowledge SOCIETY, were brought most prominently forward in the Charge; and their claims and interests strongly advocated. . . .

"Rev. W. Taylor was ordained priest last Sunday (Epiphany), and catechists Kohlhoff and Heyne were admitted to Deacon's Orders. During the time they have been at Vepery as catechists, these two young men have given great satisfaction."

AUSTRALIA.

The Rev. Robert Thorley Bolton, M.A., of Clare Hall, and the Rev. Charles Spencer, M.A., of Christ's College, Cambridge, have taken their passage to Sydney in the Strathfieldsay, which was to leave Plymouth yesterday, the 8th. These clergymen have been appointed, on the recommendation of the SOCIETY, with the sanction of the Bishop of London, to chaplaincies on the ecclesiastical establishment of New South Wales. Three more clergymen will proceed to the same colony in the course of the ensuing month.

It is expected that the Annual Report of the SOCIETY will be in circulation in the course of the present month.

CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

HOME PROCEEDINGS.

Retirement of the Rev. John Norman Pearson from the Principalship of the Institution.—The Rev. J. N. Pearson having been last autumn appointed to the Incumbency of Tunbridge Wells, resigned the office of Principal of the SOCIETY's Institution at Islington, which he had held from its commencement in January, 1825. On recording Mr. Pearson's resignation on the 8th of October last, the Committee thus expressed their sense of the value and importance of his services:—

That the Committee record, with feelings of deep regret, the Rev. J. N. Pearson's resignation of the office of Principal of the SOCIETY's Institution, which he has filled for a period of nearly fourteen years with distinguished ability and with eminent advantage to the SOCIETY; and that the Committee tender to Mr. Pearson, on retiring from his official connexion with them, the expression of their cordial esteem and regard, and assure him of their earnest prayers, that in the new sphere of labour on which he is about to enter he may abundantly experience the Divine Blessing in his own soul, and in his future Ministry.

Appointment of the Rev. Charles Frederic Childe to the Institution.—At a Special Meeting of the Committee, held January 28, 1839, the Rev. C. F. Childe, late Head Master of Walsall Grammar School, was appointed Principal of the Institution.

Ordination of a Missionary.—Mr. J. F. Seasing was admitted to Deacon's Orders, by the Lord Bishop of Jamaica, at Kingston, on the 27th of January last.

Departure of a Missionary.—Mr. John Mason and Mrs. Mason embarked at Gravesend, on board the "Red Rover," Capt. Smith, on the 9th instant.

Proposed Appointment of a Clergyman to the New-Zealand Mission.—In the actual circumstances of New Zealand, the Committee are solicitous to engage the services of a clergyman, possessed of suitable qualifications, to investigate on the spot the state both of the island and of the mission, with a view to their adoption of such further measures as the present conjuncture may call for.

Thirty-ninth Anniversary of the Society.—The Anniversary Sermon before the SOCIETY will be preached on Monday evening, the 29th of April, at the parish church of St. Bride, Fleet-street, by the Rev. John Norman Pearson, late Principal of the Institution.

Divine service will begin at half-past six o'clock. The Annual Meeting will be held at Exeter-hall, Strand, on Tuesday, the 30th of April.—The chair to be taken by the Right Hon. the President, at eleven o'clock precisely.

A Meeting of the SOCIETY will also be held at Exeter-hall, in the evening of the same day. The chair to be taken at half-past six o'clock.

Expulsion of the Missionaries from Abyssinia.—Our last accounts of this mission stated that the Rev. C. H. Blumhardt joined the Rev. C. W. Isenberg at Adowah, in the province of Tigré, Jan. 27, 1837. The Rev. L. Krapf, having been appointed to this mission, reached Adowah toward the end of the same year. At that time the mission was encountering considerable difficulties, excited by the priests, and the avarice of the governors. On the 2d of March, 1838, M. Abadie, a Frenchman, accompanied by an Italian priest, named Padre Giuseppe, arrived at Adowah. M. Abadie had left an elder brother at Massowah, on the Red Sea, who subsequently joined him at Adowah. The object of these persons appears to have been to revive the Roman Catholic mission in Abyssinia. Mr. Isenberg remarks, writing from Jidda, April 26, 1838:—

"The arrival of these two gentlemen very much contributed to raise the clamour of our enemies against us much higher than it was before; and one week after, Oobieh, who till then had protected us, declaring that he was not able to resist our enemies any longer, delivered us into the hands of the chief of them, viz. the Alaka Kiddan Mariam, of Madhan Alam, and Wussen, the Governor of Adowah, commanding us, by them, to leave Adowah, and to quit the country."

It appears, from the communications of the missionaries, that Messrs. Abadie and the Italian priest had penetrated to Gondar. At that place the younger Abadie and the Italian priest were left; while the elder, with two Abyssinians—one of them the nephew of Defera Mular, who has become a proselyte to the Popish faith—had returned to France, in order to procure a reinforcement of Romish missionaries for Abyssinia. It was also understood that the parties left at Gondar had opened a communication with the king of Shoa, in order to extend their influence in that direction. Our readers will perceive, in these facts, additional evidence of the activity of the Papacy to extend its baneful influence, and especially to counteract Protestant missions—a principle now openly avowed in the policy of the Romish Church. A loud call is thus made on the members of our Protestant Church, for increased means and efforts in support of the missions of the Church of England among the heathen; and especially for increased prayer to the God of all grace, that he would prosper the RIGHTEOUS CAUSE!

THE INCORPORATED SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING THE ENLARGEMENT, BUILDING, AND REPAIRING OF CHURCHES AND CHAPELS.

A MEETING was held at their chambers, in St. Martin's-place, on Monday, the 18th inst. His Grace the Archbishop of York was in the chair. There were also present the Bishops of London, Chester, St. Asaph, Bangor, Rochester, Hereford, and Ely; the Revs. Dr. Shepherd, H. H. Norris, and J. Bowdler; and Messrs. J. Watson, J. S. Salt, J. Cocks, H. J. Burchard, N. Connop, jun., and Wm. Davis. Amongst the business transacted at this meeting, grants were voted towards increasing the accommodation in the church of St. Margaret, with St. Petre le Willows, in the city of York; enlarging the chapel at Heavingham, Cumberland; increasing the accommodation in the church of Blodworth, Nottinghamshire; building a church at Sibford, in the parish of Swatcliffe, Oxfordshire; building a chapel in the Quinton district, in the parish of Hales Owen, Shropshire; building a church at Knole-hill, in the parish of Hurly and Wargrave, Berks; rebuilding the church at Llansantffroid, Denbighshire; building a gallery in the church at Southowram, in the parish of Halifax; repairing the church at Hope Bowdler, Salop; increasing the accommodation in the chapel of Congleton, Cheshire; increasing the accommodation in the church at Kempson, Bedfordshire; repairing the church at Wold Newton, Yorkshire; enlarging the chapel at Manningtree, Essex; building a church at Camborne, Cornwall; and erecting a tower, &c., to the chapel of All Saints, Norwood, Surrey.

REPORT OF THE NATIONAL SOCIETY.

Result of the General Inquiry into the State and Progress of Sunday and other Church of England Schools, made on the 1st of January, 1837.

It will be observed, that the Inquiry was confined to religious institutions in immediate connexion with the Established Church, and supported wholly or in part by the funds of benevolent persons; that private academies, day and dame schools, are excluded from the returns; that the ages of the children in the Sunday or Sunday and daily schools, are generally between seven and fourteen years; and that the infants are kept entirely distinct from the rest of the children, &c.

Summary Result.

It appears that circulars were addressed to 12,391 places,—

I. That 11,007 have been received back, with a return of the number of schools and scholars in each place.

II. That 103 have also been received with the number of schools; but the clergy have omitted (as if by accident) to state the number of scholars; and,

III. That from 1281 places no returns have been received.

I. It also appears that, in the 11,007 places for which complete returns have been received, there are 9147 Sunday and daily schools, and 5359 Sunday schools, and also 616 Infant schools; containing in the Sunday and daily schools 254,697 boys, and 209,841 girls; total, 464,538 scholars; in the Sunday schools 184,783 boys, and 199,241 girls; total, 384,024 scholars; and, in the Infant schools, 44,746 scholars, of whom 4962 attend the Sunday schools, and are comprised in the total 384,024.

II. That in the 103 places from which returns have been made of the schools, but not of the scholars, there are 64 Sunday and daily schools, and 64 Sunday schools; and, consequently, (according to an average,) 3200 Sunday and daily scholars, and 3780 Sunday scholars.

III. That in the 1281 places from which no returns have been received, there must be (if an average may be formed by proportion from the schools and scholars actually returned to the SOCIETY) 1058 Sunday and daily schools; 638 Sunday schools, and 73 Infant schools; containing, respectively, 52,900 Sunday and daily scholars; 46,060 Sunday scholars; 5110 Infant scholars; of which latter number 567 must attend the Sunday schools, and will be comprised in the preceding 46,060 Sunday scholars.

Therefore, on the whole, the gross amount of schools and scholars may be represented thus, viz.—

I. 11,007 places from which returns have been actually received.

Sunday and daily schools	9146	Sunday and daily scholars	464,538
Sunday schools ..	5359	Sunday scholars	384,024
Infant schools ..	616	Inf. sch.	44,746
		Deduct those in Sunday schools	4962
			39,784
Total schools	15,391	Total scholars	888,346

II. 103 places returning the number of schools, but not the scholars, which latter are supplied by average.

Sunday and daily schools	64	Sunday and daily scholars	3200
Sunday schools ..	54	Sunday scholars	3780
Total schools	118	Total scholars	6980

111. 1281 places which have made no returns, the schools and scholars being both supplied by average.

Sunday and daily schools	1058	Sunday and daily scholars	52,900
Sunday schools ..	658	Sunday scholars	46,060
Infant schools ..	73	Inf. sch. 5110
		Deduct those in Sunday schools	567
			4543
Total schools	1789	Total scholars	103,503

So that the corrected total for England and Wales will be—12,391 Places—17,298 Schools—998,829 Scholars.

If to this be added the returns from the British Isles (omitted in the former statement), in which there are 43 schools containing 4258 scholars, the grand total will be—

17,341 Schools—1,003,087 Scholars.

ESTABLISHMENT OF A GOVERNMENT BOARD.

THE committee of the Lay Union for the Defence of the Established Church think it their duty to call the attention of the public to the present critical position of the great question of National Education.

On the 5th of February, Mr. Wyse (the Chairman of the Central Society of Education, and himself a member of the Church of Rome) gave notice of his intention to move, on the 20th, an address to Her Majesty, that she would "be graciously pleased to appoint a Board of Commission of Education in England, with the view especially of providing for the wise, equitable, and efficient application of sums granted, or to be granted, for the advancement of education, by Parliament; and for the immediate establishment of schools for the education of teachers, in accord with the intention already expressed by the Legislature."

On the 12th, Lord J. Russell, on the part of the Government, stated to the House of Commons, that it had been resolved to appoint such a Board, for the purposes which, as described by his lordship, were declared by Mr. Wyse to be precisely identical with those defined in his notice of motion.

And, accordingly, on the 20th, Mr. Wyse withdrew his motion, on the ground that it had been already adopted by Her Majesty's Ministers.

To find the Government thus acceding to, and adopting fully and unreservedly, the first demand of the Chairman of the Central Society is sufficiently alarming. Still, however, it may be said, that the simple appointment of a Board is in itself a merely formal step, involving necessarily neither good nor harm; that the main question is, how that Board is to be constituted, and with what animus it is likely to be inspired? Now, the only answers that can be given to these questions are such as tend greatly to increase the apprehensions already excited.

The Board is to consist of the Lord President of the Council, the Lord Privy Seal, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Secretary of State for the Home Department, and the Master of the Mint. Thus, to use the words of Lord John Russell's recent letter to the Marquis of Lansdowne, "the consideration of all matters affecting the education of the people" is devolved on a commission consisting of five laymen, no one official representative of the Church forming any part of the Board: and, in fact, there being no security whatever amidst the changes now going on, that a majority of the Commission may not consist, in the course of a few months, of men avowedly opposed to the interests of the Established Church. Changing with every change of the government, fluctuating with all the fluctuations of the House of Commons, such a Board might, at no distant period, become the subservient instrument of the same hostile phalanx which now turns the scale in Parliament, and exercises so fatal an influence over the councils of the nation.

So much for the constitution of the Board. The animus by which it is likely to be inspired, emanating, as it does, immediately from Government, may be estimated from a single circumstance.

In the year 1831 a Board of Education was formed for Ireland. There can be no doubt, from the character of the author of that measure, that it was honestly intended to act impartially between Protestants and Romanists in that country. In practice, however, it has been found to operate as unequally and partially as possible.

By the evidence given before the committee of the House of Commons in 1837, it appears, that in that year the number of scholars attending the schools established by the Irish Board, in the three provinces of Munster, Leinster, and Connaught, was 71,788 Romanists, and 1,136 Protestants, being in the proportion of more than 60 to 1. Such is the system, carried on in open opposition to 19-20ths of the parochial clergy of Ireland, which is declared by the Government to have been "eminently successful," and to which the annual sum of £50,000 is now voted; in which vote it is the intention of Government to persevere.

On the other hand, in England an annual grant of £20,000 only has been given during the last six years to the general purposes of education, and has been distributed by the Treasury on the really impartial plan of aiding the two existing societies,—the National and the British and Foreign,—in exact proportion to the sums raised by their means, by voluntary contributions, for the building of school-houses.

It appears, however, that the Church, embracing the great majority of the population, and displaying also superior energy in her efforts to educate the poor, has contributed far more largely, and has, therefore, obtained a greater proportion of the public grant, than the entire body of the Dissenters. Out of the sum of £120,000 so granted by Parliament during the last six years the National Society has obtained £84,866.

Now, nothing can be clearer than that the superiority of the Church in this matter was not the result of any partiality in the mode of distribution, but solely of her own greater extent and energy. If the Dissenters had made equal pecuniary efforts to meet the wants of the poor, they would have participated in a fully equal proportion of the Parliamentary grant. But because they have not done so, and because, under this system of distribution, the Church has entitled herself to the larger proportion, it is now said that the experiment has failed, and the grant is, for the future, to be withdrawn.

Nothing can exhibit more clearly the animus of the whole proceeding. In Ireland, a system which was intended to work impartially works as partially and unequally as possible; but it works to the injury of the Church, and is, notwithstanding, to be strenuously persisted in. In England, a grant which was also professedly intended to be impartial in its distribution, is so, in fact, and, in consequence of being so, works no injury to the Church. That grant, however, is said to have failed of its purpose, and is to be given no more. The new Board, now about to be constituted, is to receive the public funds devoted to these objects, and is to dispose of those funds on some new principle, yet to be explained, but of which we can only fear, from the above example, that its real effect will be to lower and undermine the Established Church.

Thus stands the question at the present moment. The most anxious attention of the members of the Church ought to be directed to it; for security can only be expected from their own resources and exertions. It is most important that, in the first place, the existing institutions for education, diocesan and others, should be strengthened, extended, and improved in efficiency. Boards have been already formed for the principal dioceses of England and Wales, and the Committee are justified in the expectation that the whole kingdom will shortly exhibit a complete system of diocesan and local organization, in connexion with the National Society, embracing in its operations every parish in the land, and bringing all Church of England schools into effective and harmonious combination, for the Christian education of the people. As an essential part of this plan, the National Society is prepared to found a metropolitan institution, under the superintendence of a clergyman of the Established Church, for the boarding and training of schoolmasters and schoolmistresses.

The Committee would, in conclusion, earnestly press upon the friends of the Church that petitions to Parliament should be immediately sent up from every town, and village, and parish, praying that the education of the people may not be taken out of the hands of the parochial clergy by the institution or advancement, as in Ireland, of rival schools, under the sanction and rule of a Government Board, from which all instruction in the doctrines of the Church would be excluded, and which would, nevertheless, be encouraged by the patronage of the Crown.

By direction of the Committee,

SAMUEL MILLS, Secretary.

ARCHDEACONRY OF BERKS.

A meeting of the clergy and laity of the archdeaconry of Berks was held on Monday, March 14, in the Town-hall, Reading, for uniting with the Diocesan Education Society in establishing a general system of education, in conformity with the doctrines and discipline of the church of England, throughout the diocese of Oxford.

The meeting consisted of most of the clergy and influential laity of the town and neighbourhood, and presented a highly respectable appearance. The attendance was much more numerous than could have been expected, considering the absence of excitement in the measure proposed for public adoption.

On the motion of the Marquis of Downshire, seconded by Sir H. Russell, Bart., the chair was taken by the Venerable and Rev. the Archdeacon of Berks.

Archdeacon Berens, in taking the chair, said he requested their attention for a few moments while he stated the objects of the meeting. They were aware that the public attention had of late been drawn to the best means of providing a good education, not only for the labouring class, but for that intermediate class who were not as yet embraced by the National Society. They were agreed that education, to be valuable, must be based on religion, and as consistent members of the Church of England they must desire that the education of all classes should be conducted in unison with the doctrines, discipline, and formularies of the Church to which we belong, and which were in accordance with the great depositary of all religious knowledge—the Bible. (Cheers.) There was nothing farther from their intentions than any desire to interfere with the education of those who dissented from the doctrines and discipline of the Church; they desired only to provide for the education of those who belonged to her communion. The rev. gentleman went on to state the proceedings which had taken place at Oxford, the formation of a diocesan society there, and the resolution to form a board in each of the two archdeaconries of Oxford and Berks, that the system might pervade every town and village of the country. He would not detain them longer than to read letters from the members for the county, and other gentlemen, who had expressed their regret at their inability to attend the meeting, and their concurrence in its object.

The meeting was afterwards addressed by the Marquis of Downshire; Mr. Macdonald Lockhart, M.P.; the Rev. Mr. Clutterbuck, of Long Wittenham; Sir H. Russell; Rev. J. Ball, Mr. Mount, Rev. H. Majendie, Mr. C. Sawyer, Rev. J. Hitchings, Rev. J. Randall, Rev. G. Hulme, Rev. M. Yates, and Mr. H. Clive.

BRISTOL.

On Thursday, Feb. 21, pursuant to public notice, a meeting was held at the Guildhall of this city, for the purpose of organizing a system of popular education, in the principles of the Established Church, based on the recommendation of the National Society, and forming a diocesan board for the archdeaconry of Bristol. At one o'clock the Lord Bishop of the diocese was called to the chair, by the numerous and highly respectable assemblage who occupied the hall, among whom we witnessed several of the dignitaries of our cathedral, and many of the clergy and other gentlemen resident within the archdeaconry. The Very Reverend the Dean was not present; but we were happy to hear it stated, by the Rev. Prebendary Harvey, in the course of the proceedings, that Dr. Lamb had expressed his cordial concurrence in the proposed object. The galleries were principally occupied by ladies.

The Lord Bishop, on taking the chair, called upon the meeting to join him in prayer to Almighty God for his blessing on their purpose; after which his lordship addressed the meeting at great length. Speeches were also made by J. S. Harford, Esq., Archdeacon Thorp, the Mayor of Bristol, Rev. Professor Lee, Thomas Daniel, Esq., Rev. Prebendary Harvey, Edward Sampson, Esq., Rev. F. Pelly, J. Osborne, Esq., Rev. J. Salter, Rev. T. F. Jennings, A. G. H. Battersby, Esq., Rev. Dr. Allen, &c.—Bristol Journal.

AMOUNDERNESS DIOCESAN EDUCATIONAL SOCIETY.

(From the Liverpool Standard.)

A MEETING of the friends of the Amounderness Diocesan Educational Society was held on Saturday last in the Preston Court-house. Amongst the gentlemen on the bench, we observed Mr. John Paley, Mayor of Preston; Mr. T. B. Addison, Mr. J. W. Patten, M.P., the Rev. the Vicar of Preston, the Rev. R. Harris, the Hon. and Rev. H. Powys, the hon. Secretary of the Diocesan Society, the Rev. R. Parkinson, Fellow of Christ's College, Manchester, the Rev. W. Hornby, Vicar of St. Michael's-upon-Wyre, the Rev. J. Hull, Vicar of Poulton, Mr. C. Swainson, of Cooper-hill, Mr. R. T. W. France, of Rawcliffe-hall, Mr. E. C. Salisbury, of Lancaster, &c. A considerable number of elegantly dressed ladies were present. The Rev. Vicar of Preston was called to the chair.

The CHAIRMAN, in opening the business of the meeting, alluded to the exertions made by the great and good Cranmer and Edward VI. for the promotion of religious and moral education.

The Rev. R. HARRIS moved the first resolution, which was to the following effect:—"That it is of great and pressing importance to extend the means and improve the system of education throughout the country on the principles of the Church of England."

Mr. T. B. ADDISON, recorder of Preston, seconded the resolution, which was put, and carried unanimously.

The Hon. and Rev. H. Powys, rector of Warrington, moved, "That the establishment of diocesan and deanery boards of education, for the purpose of bringing all Church of England schools into connexion, and of establishing new ones where they are required, has the cordial approbation of this meeting."

The Right Hon. Lord STANLEY, M.P. then came forward, and was received with rapturous applause. His Lordship spoke at great length, and concluded as follows:—"It is important, if we desire to promote the interests of religion—it is important in this critical period of our Church history, that the onward improvement should be carried on by the exertions of our clergy and laity combined. I would not use the language of despondency, for I do not feel despondency, but I do feel that our Church and people do stand in a most critical and dangerous condition. I see going on the progress of secular instruction, and see the advancement of intellectual knowledge. I see a population overgrowing the means of religious instruction and education. I see a population daily increasing in a ratio which it is fearful to contemplate; and I say this, that if the Church, the lay members of the Church as well as the clergy, view in supine apathy the progress of events, make no attempts to arrest this fearful evil, or to meet it by the increase of religious instruction, before the increase of the population becomes too great and powerful for them to overcome, then, I say, if they fail in taking an early step—it is a painful contemplation for me—but I believe, I believe, Sir, that the days of our venerable establishment are numbered. (Hear.) She cannot remain supine and inactive, exposed on the one hand to the successful and active rivalry of religious sects, on the other, to the deadly hostility of infidelity and irreligion; and the consequence of our fall would be, day by day, our population would be less instructed, less amenable to discipline, more demoralised, more turbulent, less Christian. (Hear.) I call upon you who are assembled here this day to come forward and aid in the great work of the regeneration of the Church establishment as connected with education. (Cheers.) I call upon you not to take upon yourselves that fearful portion of responsibility which will attach to those who have the means in their power, and who know well the importance of the objects we have in view, but refrain from lending a helping hand to further them. (Cheers.) But I have better hopes and more confident expectations. I believe I may with confidence appeal to the members of the Church of England, as a body, to awake from their apathy, and strive earnestly to rescue our cause from the progress of this fearful evil, by promoting the spread of religious knowledge; and if, by God's blessing, such should be the result of the proceedings that the Church is now taking, then, instead of the gloomy picture which it was my fate to draw just now, we may be consoled with the reflection that our cause will prosper. You will have the gratification of feeling that in the service of your Lord and Master you have taken the most effectual means in your power of eradicating the great and growing evil, and that you will have succeeded in stemming its progress—that the progress of knowledge will be advanced by the advance of the blessings of religious knowledge, and that the result of your prudent, and wise, and far-seeing liberality, will be a blessing upon your children and children's children; and though you may not see it, yet it will ultimately prove that England will exhibit to an admiring world the spectacle of a prosperous and contented, because an instructed and religious people. (Loud and long-continued cheering.) His Lordship concluded with seconding the motion, which passed unanimously.

The Rev. R. PARKINSON, M.A. Fellow of Christ's College, Manchester, proposed the next resolution.

Mr. J. W. PATTEN, M.P. seconded the resolution. The resolution having been put from the chair, passed.

A vote of thanks was given to the rev. chairman, and the proceedings terminated.

A subscription list was then handed round the room, and Lord Stanley liberally contributed 50*l*.

REPORT OF TITHE COMMISSIONERS.

Tithe Commission, Feb. 28.

My Lord,—It is our duty to report to your lordship the general progress of the commutation since May 1, 1838.

We have now in the office 3,498 agreements, of which 2,362 are confirmed.

If it is assumed that those not confirmed comprise, on the average, tithe equal in amount to the average tithe in those which have been confirmed, then tithe to the amount of 1,312,102*l*. 17*s*. 4*d*. has been agreed to be commuted by voluntary arrangements.

The commencement of the operation of our compulsory powers has brought us necessarily into contact with more reluctant parties, and with difficulties which did not affect our previous operations.

We are of opinion, however, that we have, on the whole, made a satisfactory commencement of the enforcement of these powers.

Districts in which tithes have generally been taken in kind, or let on annual valuations, contain elements of struggle and irritation, from which the rest of the country is free.

Those districts are comparatively small; and after a few cases in each have been patiently heard and carefully decided, we see ground for hoping that voluntary agreements will, even in those districts, effect the greater part of the work of commutation.

Our experience has been sufficient to prove that, while voluntary agreements are made at the rate at which they are now coming in to us, the processes of apportionment consequent on these agreements, create at least as much, perhaps more, employment than can be proceeded with at once by such mappers and apportioners as have the confidence of the country.

No exertions on our part will be wanting to hasten the completion of the apportionments; but still, under these circumstances, we think it prudent, unless the progress of voluntary commutation should slacken, to confine our compulsory interference to four classes of selected cases, and we append to this report the circular* in which we have described these classes.

The returns already presented to Parliament contain the statistical details of our progress so fully, that we do not think it necessary to repeat them here.

We have the honour to be,
Your Lordship's most obedient and faithful servants,

WM. BLAMIRE,
T. W. BULLER.
R. JONES.

To the Right Hon. Lord John Russell, &c.

IDOLATRY IN INDIA.

A quarterly general Court of Proprietors of East India stock was held March 20th.

Mr. POYNTER rose for the purpose of moving "that there be recorded on the minutes of the proceedings of the Court of Proprietors two petitions from the clergy and laity of Winkfield, Wiltshire, and its vicinity, and from the clergy and laity of Bury St. Edmund's and its vicinity, addressed to the proprietors of East India Stock, and presented at the general quarterly Court of the 26th of Sept., 1838, praying that the despatch of the Court of Directors, of the 20th of February, 1833, dispensing with the attendance of all officers, civil and military, in the Company's service, at idolatrous rites, ceremonies, and superstitions, contrary to their conscientious feelings, should immediately and fully be carried into effect." In submitting his motion to the Court, the honourable proprietor contended that the last despatch sent out to India with reference to this subject did not, in his opinion, carry out the great object of the despatch of February, 1833; but, on the contrary, was in some points contrary to the tenour and spirit of the directions contained in the latter document. In the despatch of August last, the directors stated, "that Sir Peregrine Maitland was mistaken in assuming that it was the directors' desire to depart from their orders of 1833." But if that were so, why did they accept of Sir Peregrine Maitland's resignation, when by a little explanation they could have removed any erroneous impression that he might have imbibed? But it was quite clear that there was no mistake in the matter; for by a subsequent despatch of the 18th of October, 1837, addressed to the Governor General of India, in answer to the memorial of the Madras Christians, the directors order, "That no customary salutes or marks of respect to native festivals be discontinued at any of the presidencies; that no protection hitherto given be withdrawn; and that no change whatever be made in any matter relating to the native religion, except under the authority of the Supreme Government." Now, no directions could be more plain than these. How, then, could it be averred, in the despatch of August, 1838, that "There was no desire on the part of the directors to depart from their orders of 1833?" There was no foundation for such an assertion. It was further evident that the directors meant to enforce their decree of the 18th of October, 1837, opposed as it was to their orders of February, 1833, for they declare, in their despatch of the 8th of August last, that "they do not intend that any alteration should be made in the practice which has hitherto regulated the appointment of escorts to natives of rank on their way to places of religious worship, as in that case it must be self-evident that the honour is done to the individual, and not to the occasion." That was a doctrine which he and many others could not reconcile to their feelings and consciences. This nice distinction between the honours offered to those attending this worship, and to that worship itself, they did not understand. So far was this distinction from being "self-evident," as the directors asserted, he was prepared to show that the whole native population of India considered the honours paid to native chiefs attending heathen worship as so much honour rendered to that worship itself. If they believed their own chaplains, and every missionary who had transmitted accounts from India, such was the indisputable fact. The honourable proprietor then alluded to the observations made by Lords Ellenborough and Brougham, on the 31st of July last, in the House of Lords, when they gave it as their opinion that any abatement of the outward marks of respect customarily paid at heathen festivals would probably lead to violence and massacre, and argued that those noble lords would not have fallen into such a mistake if they had had an opportunity of reading the able and conclusive appendix to the Madras memorial, which was not laid before Parliament, although the memorial itself had been produced. The honourable proprietor then proceeded to quote a variety of communications from clergymen and others, to show to how great an extent the system of obliging European officers to attend at the celebration of heathen ceremonies was carried; and also to prove that the natives looked upon their attendance on such occasions as an honour done to their peculiar worship. But it was said, that as the attendance of European officers at those ceremonies was of long standing, it could not now be omitted. The same thing might be averred of suttees. They were of long standing, and for a series of years 866 widows were annually on an average burnt. But was such a practice to be continued on account of its long standing? Assuredly not. And it was put an end to by Lord W. Bentinck. In the like manner Colonel Walker had removed the stain of infanticide. And although Lord Ellenborough had stated that a massacre would ensue if they refused the customary marks of respect at heathen festivals, yet the two great alterations to which he had alluded had been carried into effect without producing any disturbance whatever. The honourable proprietor then said he was happy to pass to a more agreeable part of the subject, and he congratulated the Court on the evidence of greater light and better feeling presented in the third paragraph of the last despatch, where it was stated that measures were in progress for doing away with the pilgrim tax; yet he wished that the directors had spoken more plainly and explicitly on that subject. But while he was grateful to God for the abolition of the pilgrim tax, he must be allowed to observe, that that was but one of 10,000 taxes on idolatrous proceedings from which they derived a revenue. Every cruel penance, every religious station, every heathen procession, every absurd devotion, every ablutement, every offering, every prostration in India, was taxed for the benefit of the honourable Company and their honourable servants. The hon. gentleman contended, at some length, that the Company ought to cease to have any thing whatever to do with the care of the native temples, or to derive a profit from any of their religious ceremonies, and concluded by thanking the court for the attention with which they had heard him.

Sir C. FORBES seconded the motion. He entirely concurred with all that part of his honourable friend's speech which related to the forcible attendance at Hindoo ceremonies and festivals. He claimed toleration for all religions—Christian, Hindoo, or Mahometan. No person should be compelled to do anything contrary to his conscience, but should be allowed to worship God in his own way.

After an explanation between Mr. LINDSAY and Mr. POYNDE, with reference to what occurred in the general Court in 1827, on this subject—

The CHAIRMAN (Sir J. L. Lushington) said, there was no objection to place the petition on the records of the Court. He should, however, take that opportunity to refer to the resolution of the general Court in March last, when it was resolved, "That such questions had better be left in the hands of the Court of Directors." That resolution was accompanied by certain pledges, which pledges, he contended, had been redeemed. He saw a letter in The Times, written by the honourable mover, in which he designated that resolution as "iniquitous" and the policy of the Court of Directors as "miserable." He dissented from that statement. The Court of Proprietors and the Court of Directors were Christian people, but while they were anxious to remove every subject of complaint, they ought not to act precipitately. To show that the Court of Directors had redeemed their former pledge, the honourable chairman caused the despatch of the 8th of August last to be read, and proceeded to say, that the hon. proprietor had been very severe upon parts of that despatch. Amongst other things, the honourable proprietor had observed that the Court of Directors ought not to have accepted Sir Peregrine's resignation, if he were only labouring under a mistake. Now, the Court of Directors never had accepted his resignation. Sir P. Maitland tendered his resignation to the Queen, by whom it was accepted. The honourable proprietor had expressed a wish that the despatch had been more explicit with respect to the doing away with the pilgrim tax. He could now, however, inform the honourable proprietor that the tax was done away with at Allahabad, and that measures were in progress to abolish it at Gyah and Juggernaut.—(Hear, hear.)

Mr. STRACHAN strongly condemned the system of compelling Europeans in the company's service to attend at idolatrous festivals. Individuals were known to have been imprisoned for not obeying orders on this point, and others, on the same account, had been dismissed the Company's service. Now, certainly they ought not to uphold a system which interfered with conscientious feelings. Much had been gained, for the principle had been conceded; but he must say, that the desired object would never be attained until the terms of the despatch of 1833 were fully acted up to. The honourable proprietor concluded by reading a letter from an officer of high rank in India, totally denying a statement made by Mr. Lindsay on a former occasion, that certain British officers had after parade addressed the Sepoys, disparaging their religion, and pointing out the beauties of the Christian faith.

Mr. POYNDE briefly replied, and the motion was agreed to.

CHURCH LANDS IN CANADA.

Clauses of the British Statute 31 Geo. III., ch. 31, which relate to the maintenance and support of a Protestant Clergy.

36. And whereas by the above mentioned act, passed in the fourteenth year of the reign of his present Majesty, it was declared that the clergy of the Church of Rome, in the province of Quebec, might hold, receive, and enjoy, their accustomed dues and rights, with respect to such persons only as should profess the said religion: provided nevertheless, that it should be lawful for his Majesty, his heirs or successors, to make such provision out of the rest of the said accustomed dues and rights, for the encouragement of the Protestant religion, and for the maintenance and support of a Protestant clergy within the said province, as he or they should from time to time think necessary and expedient: and whereas by his Majesty's royal instructions, given under his Majesty's royal sign manual on the third day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and seventy-five, to Guy Carleton, Esq., now Lord Dorchester, at that time his Majesty's Captain-General and Governor-in-Chief in and over his Majesty's province of Quebec, his Majesty was pleased, amongst other things, to direct, "That no incumbent professing the religion of the Church of Rome, appointed to any parish in the said province, should be entitled to receive any tithes for lands or possessions occupied by a Protestant, but that such tithes should be received by such persons as the said Guy Carleton, Esquire, his Majesty's Captain-General and Governor-in-Chief in and over his Majesty's said province of Quebec, should appoint, and should be reserved in the hands of his Majesty's Receiver-General of the said province, for the support of a Protestant clergy in his Majesty's said province, to be actually resident within the same, and not otherwise, according to such directions as the said Guy Carleton, Esquire, his Majesty's Captain-General and Governor-in-Chief in and over his Majesty's said province, should receive from his Majesty in that behalf; and that in like manner all growing rents and profits of a vacant benefice should, during such vacancy, be reserved for and applied to the like uses;" And whereas his Majesty's pleasure has likewise been signified to the same effect in his Majesty's royal instructions, given in like manner to Sir Frederick Haldimand, Knight of the most honourable order of the Bath, late his Majesty's Captain-General and Governor-in-Chief in and over his Majesty's said province of Quebec; and also in his Majesty's royal instructions, given in like manner to the said right honourable Guy, Lord Dorchester, now his Majesty's Captain-General and Governor-in-Chief in and over his Majesty's said province of Quebec—Be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, that the said declaration and provision contained in the said above mentioned act, and also the said provision so made by his Majesty in consequence thereof, by his instructions before recited, shall remain and continue to be of full force and effect in each of the said two provinces of Upper Canada and Lower Canada respectively, except in so far as the said declaration or provisions respectively, or any part thereof, shall be expressly varied or repealed by any act or acts which may be passed by the legislative council and assembly of the said provinces respectively, and assented to by his Majesty, his heirs or successors, under the restriction hereinafter provided.

36. And whereas his Majesty has been graciously pleased, by message to both Houses of Parliament, to express his royal desire to be enabled to make a permanent appropriation of lands in the said provinces, for the support and maintenance of a Protestant clergy within the same, in proportion to such lands as have been already granted within the same by his Majesty: and whereas his Majesty has been graciously pleased, by his said message, further to signify his royal desire that such provision may be made, with respect to all future grants of land within the said provinces respectively, as may best conduce to the due and sufficient support and maintenance of a Protestant clergy within the said provinces, in proportion to such increase as may happen in the population and cultivation thereof: therefore, for the purpose of more effectually fulfilling his Majesty's gracious intentions, as aforesaid, and of providing for the due execution of the same in all time to come—Be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful for his Majesty, his heirs or successors, to authorise the Governor or Lieutenant-Governor of each of the said provinces respectively, or the person administering the government therein, to make, from and out of the lands of the Crown within such provinces, such allotment and appropriation of lands, for the support and maintenance of a Protestant clergy within the same, as may bear a due proportion to the amount of such lands within the same as have at any time been granted by or under the authority of his Majesty: and that whenever any grant of lands within either of the said provinces shall hereafter be made, by or under the authority of his Majesty, his heirs or successors, there shall at the same time be made, in respect of the same, a proportionable allotment and appropriation of lands for the above mentioned purpose, within the township or parish to which such lands so to be granted shall appertain or be annexed, or as nearly adjacent thereto as circumstances will admit; and that no such grant shall be valid or effectual unless the same shall contain a specification of the lands so allotted and appropriated, in respect of the lands to be thereby granted, and that such lands so allotted and appropriated, shall be, as nearly as the circumstances and nature of the case will admit, of the like quality as the lands in respect of which the same are so allotted and appropriated, and shall be, as nearly as the same can be estimated at the time of making such grant, equal in value to the seventh part of the lands so granted.

37. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That all and every the rents, profits or emoluments, which may at any time arise from such lands, so allotted and appropriated as aforesaid, shall be applicable solely to the maintenance and support of a Protestant clergy, within the province in which the same shall be situated, and to no other use or purpose whatever.

38. And be it further enacted by the authority
